A Surplus Of $1,050,000

Hon. A. J. Matheson Presents His Budget.

Good Showing After Two Years' Office--Well-Filled Coffers, and Diminishing Liability--Increase in Municipal Debts--Greater Outlay on Education--Criticises the Ross Government.

Toronto, March 1.—A provincial surplus of $1,050,000 for two years of office was the splendid message Hon. A. J. Matheson presented to the Legislature in the budget speech yesterday.

"We had the money—and we spent it. But we paid it out for the people," was his comment on the increased expenditure.

The Minister's address was undeniably one of his best efforts. He spoke for two hours and held the attention of the House and well-filled galleries, not an easy task when the subject matter so largely dealt with figures. He was in a happy vein. He had a story of good tidings, of well-filled coffers, of diminishing liability, of provincial prosperity and good government.

Yet he sounded one striking note of warning to the municipalities.

Increase of Municipal Debts.

He regarded as a most serious matter the great increase of $5,200,000 in the municipal debts.

"I firmly believe," said Hon. Col. Matheson, "in the municipalities owning a reasonable amount of their public utilities, but are they not going beyond safe financial bounds? They are wasting their money. I believe it to be my duty as Provincial Treasurer to warn them to be careful. Let there be a revival in the public interest in municipal affairs."

At present there was a tendency to reckless and wasteful municipal expenditure in the cities, towns and villages, a carelessness over growing overdrafts and a readiness on the part of banks and financiers to avoid municipal securities.

Spent On Education.

Col. Matheson drew attention to the growth of the province during the past two years. The greater outlay had been largely devoted to education, to the assisting and benefiting of the rural schools and the encouragement of the Provincial university, and to the paying to the municipalities of the railway taxation; the expenditure was being paid to the people.

In detail he reviewed the expenditure and receipts of the various governmental departments, pointing out the great progress which had been made in all lines of effort. In comparison he traced the many peculiar and unexplicable financial transactions which characterized the former Government's regime and boldly characterized them as graft. The cable correspondence between Hon. Messrs. Harcourt and Ross over the English Coates & Co. loan was made public, showing that someone was to receive the "$25,000 commission." "The most charitable construction to be placed upon this transaction," declared the Minister, "is that this commission was to be devoted to the election funds of the party."

Estimated Receipts.

The Treasurer presented the following figures for the estimated receipts for the year, which did not include the revenue to be derived from the proposed tax on mines:

Subsidy	$1,339,287.00
Interest on Trust Funds	80,000.00
Interest on Investments	90,000.00
Crown Lands Department	3,437,000.00
Public Institutions . .	135,000.00
Central Prison Industries	60,000.00
Education Department..	45,000.00
Provincial Secretary's Department	175,000.00
Agriculture	74,000.00
Casual Revenue	140,000.00
Succession Duties	700,000.00
Supplementary Revenue Tax	640,000.00
Tavern and Brewers' Licenses	550,000.00
Law Stamps	80,000.00
Algoma Taxes	2,000.00
Fisheries	65,000.00
Total Estimated Receipts	7,612,287.28
Cash Balances 31st December, 1906	3,497,239.62
Total	$11,109,526.90

Money to Burn.

Mr. E. J. B. Pense, of Kingston, who essayed the task of financial critic, did not attempt to criticize. He realized to the full the great prosperity which had been reported. He even declared there was "money to burn" and recommended additional expenditures, but claimed that his party when in office had laid the foundation and builded for the present prosperity.

Mr. J. B. Lucas, Centre Grey, followed with a particularly bright and Disowned the Statement.

Mr. C. N. Smith, Sault Ste. Marie, was under the necessity of calling on the well-worn excuse that he had been misreported in a speech he made in the West Middlesex, and which was brought to the attention of the House by Hon. Mr. Hanna.

Mr. Smith was reported as having said that Government Accountant Thorne was a partner in the Charlotte Taylor prison labor contract, a statement he promptly disowned when Mr. Hanna confronted him with it.

Fatally Injured.

St. Thomas, Mar. 1.—E. Snider, an M. C. R. brakeman, was crushed while coupling cars at Welland last night, and it is feared that he sustained internal injuries which may result fatally. He was brought to the Amasa Wood Hospital, in this city.

THE SHORTEST ROUTE.

Newfoundland Considering a New Transatlantic Line.

Halifax, N. S., March 1.—In the Newfoundland Legislative Assembly Wednesday night Premier Bond proposed the adoption of a contract between the Newfoundland Government and the Messrs. Ochs, capitalists, of London and Paris, providing for the establishment of a short line of transatlantic steamers between Killery, on the west coast of Ireland, and Green Bay, on the east coast of Newfoundland.

The plan also provides for a two-hour railway trip across the colony to Port au Basque, whence a twenty-knot steamer would convey mails and passengers to Gaspe, Quebec, in summer, and Sydney, C. B., in winter.

The promoters of the project claim that there would be a saving of 32 hours over any other transatlantic route.

The project must take shape within two years or else all liability on the part of the colony will cease.

Should the capitalists carry out their announced plans the Newfoundland Government proposes to pay them $75,000 annually for 25 years. It is said that the British, American and Canadian Governments will be asked to assist in establishing the proposed line.

The Messrs. Ochs are given the right to construct a tunnel under the Strait of Belle Isle within eight years, and establish railway connections between a proposed line through Labrador and the Newfoundland Railway.

The Legislature will act on the contract within a few days.

DEAD HEROINE HONORED.

Thousands Follow Miss Sarah Maxwell to Her Last Resting Place.

Montreal, Mar. 1.—Montreal yesterday showed that it felt it had lost a heroine when thousands upon thousands turned out to attend the funeral of the late Miss Sarah Maxwell, the principal of the Hochelaga Protestant School, who gave her life in an endeavor to save all the little ones confided to her charge. For years past Miss Maxewll, with her widowed mother, had regularly attended the service at Christ Church Cathedral, and from it the remains were borne yesterday, surrounded by children from all the Protestant schools in this city, and people of all classes, anxious to pay tribute to the memory of the brave girl. In the procession from the family home, on St. Urbain street, to Christ Church were crowds of people, young and old, all of whom showed by their sorrow that a true heroine had been cut off all too prematurely.

May Lift Age for Bryce.

London, Mar. 1.—In the House of Commons yesterday Mr. Liddell, Unionist, wanted to know whether Ambassador Bryce at Washington would be compelled to retire on reaching the age of 70 in May, 1908, and whether he would receive a pension for his fifteen months' service.

Foreign Secretary Grey, in reply, said the Premier would recommend to the King the retention of the Ambassador's services after the age of 70 if it was in the interest of the public service to do so. No ambassador, however, was entitled to a diplomatic pension until he had served ten years abroad.

Cash Business

It is scarcely necessary to call attention to the advantages both to buyer and seller of the CASH SYSTEM of doing business which is now so universally recognized in the business world. The merchant who sells his goods for CASH and has the CASH to buy is able to do much better for his customers than those doing a credit business with its necessary losses including office expenses, bad debts, interests, etc. Where an extended credit business is done, those who pay their bills promptly are made to pay for the losses incurred by those who buy goods and fail to pay for them.

It is our intention to adhere firmly to the CASH SYSTEM and we rely on our customers to assist us in carrying out this principle which is so advantageous to both.

Standing as we do directly between the world's largest producers and the consumers, it is our determination to make our service the most efficient to be found in CANADA. This can only be accomplished by buying and selling our goods for prompt CASH.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Enter March, and let it be as bad as it knows how, it can't be much worse than February.

Wouldn't the Fat Boy in Pickwick have a great time these days, reading the daily paper to the old lady "whose flesh he liked to make creep?" There's a horror every day.

A French aeronaut has made 210 ascents in a balloon. He's certainly had his ups and downs.

In this issue will be found a speech by Mr. W. B. Northrup, M. P., in the Commons, on the Ross rifle. The matter should be of interest to all military men, from the standpoint of the rifle's inefficiency, and to all citizens of Canada from the fact that this great Dominion is governed by a bunch of incapables who can afford to throw away $600,000 on an arm which the musketry experts of the British army declined to have anything to do with, and which the practical men of the Northwest Mounted Police declined to use on the ground that it was unsafe. Surely, Canada under Grit rule has money to burn!

Up in Guelph they are theorizing about corporation labor, and Mayor Newstead of the Royal City is said to have delivered himself of a few things which may be of interest to the present and future chairman of Public Works in this city. For instance, he believes in the continuing of corporation work throughout the winter months when labor is cheaper and weather fine. The municipal stone crusher might be kept working most of the time. It could be moved to some vacant lot near where the crushed stone will be used during the road improvement campaign, and a few dollars would erect a rude shelter from the storms. During the winter, stone could be drawn and on fine days crushing might be carried on. In the summer months the stone cannot be crushed fast enough at times and a good supply might be crushed in the winter and kept on hand.

The above remarks might not fit the case of Belleville — and then, again, they might. Anyhow, no harm will be done by thinking them over.

Talking of road building, some experiments which have been made in the United States recently should be interesting to the road-makers of this city, especially now that the idea of going in for permanent work seems to be making headway. It was found that, in making macadam roads, limestone binds well with little rolling, but wears down very rapidly; also that granite and other similar hard rocks, although very durable against abrasion, can be made to bind only by long and expensive rolling, unless clay or some such binder be added. The public roads office of the United States Department of Agriculture has been experimenting upon the effect of combining these two rocks, with the result that the combination was found to have much higher cementing value than the limestone alone. They found that the best application of this discovery lay in "using the limestone as a top dressing, and in the form of screenings as fine as may resist the scattering effect of the wind; the road to be kept moist for as long a time as possible after construction."

If past customs again prevail, there is little danger but Front St. will be "kept moist" for it was a continual complaint for several summers that the street was not sprinkled — it was deluged with water. However, judging by the experience of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, it would appear that combined granite and limestone make the best roads, and that, separately used, neither one are entirely satisfactory.

This according to the calendar, is the first day of spring. But, so far, it's hard to distinguish between spring and winter.

We hear a good deal about the cold weather in the Northwest, but judging by the following from the Marmora Herald, the west is not much worse than North Hastings: "During the past week Jack Frost has been holding sway in this district. On Friday morning the thermometer registered 50 degrees below zero, Saturday 39 below, Monday 15, and Tuesday 20."

THE THREE-FIFTHS CLAUSE.

(Grimsby Independent.)

If I were the temperance people I would not be so keen to get this three-fifths clause removed, because the chances are that the three-fifths clause would be mighty useful to them in the future. In the next few years there will be a great many votes to repeal by-laws that have been brought into existence this year, under the three-fifths clause, and it will come mighty handy to the temperance people to have that three-fifths clause there as a protection. Because a by-law passed under the three-fifths clause will have to be repealed under the three-fifths clause and a by-law passed under a bare majority may be repealed with a bare majority.

Foresters Had Jolly Time In Thurlow.

ENJOYABLE AFFAIR AT RESIDENCE OF MR. AND MRS. JAS. BOYD LAST NIGHT.

Last evening a number of the members of Court Quinte, No. 7586, Ancient Order of Foresters, invaded the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Boyd, who, with Mr. and Mrs. John Boyd, reside in the Township of Thurlow, just west of the city limits. In the early part of the evening the time was pleasantly spent in games and social intercourse. Later a supper was served, and all did justice to the many good things which were provided.

Mr. W. Rodbourne occupied the chair and was master of ceremonies. After supper had been partaken of and some loyal toasts proposed and responded to, it was apparent what the object of the gathering was. Mr. and Mrs. John Boyd were called upon and an address was read to them by Mr. Rodbourne. It spoke in complimentary terms of Mr. Boyd as a member of the Court and of the high esteem in which he was held by all the members. Accompanying the address was a case containing half a dozen silver fruit knives, with engraved ivory handles.

Although the recipient was taken by surprise he made a suitable reply, as did also his wife.

After the presentation some more speech-making was indulged in, until all present had had something to say. All were loud in praise for the present. The singing of the National Anthem brought the enjoyable proceedings to a close at an early huor in the morning.

A CROWN OF GLORY

As Well as a Mark of Beauty is Luxurious Hair.

It has been truly said that the crowning glory of our race is a luxuriant head of hair.

It used to be thought that this was one of the blessings which the gods bestow capriciously, and it is only recently that scientists have discovered that its beauty is dependent upon the absence of a minute germ which flourishes in the hair follicles, where it destroys the life of the hair.

To restore this life and kill the germs which cause the mischief is the mission of Newbro's Herpicide.

Herpicide surely kills the germs, and is the best hair dressing on the market.

It contains no grease or oil, neither will it stain or dye.

Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. Two sizes, 50c and $1.00. J. S. McKeown, special agent.

Smashed Three Toes

Mr. Joseph Mills, a machinist who is employed in Marsh & Henthorne's foundry, this morning met with a painful accident. He was handling a heavy bar of iron when it fell upon his right foot with sufficient force to smash three of the toes. The unfortunate man, after having the injuries attended to, was conveyed home. It is not anticipated that any of the toes will have to be taken off, although such may be the case later on. Mr. Mills will be laid up for some time.

Died Of Pneumonia.

Word has just been received of the death, from pneumonia, of E. S. Howard, English Master of the Owen Sound Collegiate Institute, son of the Rev. E. S. Howard and brother of the Rev. F. H. Howard, of Rednersville. Interment will be in Belleville cemetery. Funeral notice later.

HUMOR

IT MADE A DIFFERENCE.

How the Colonel Came to Make a Speech at Cut Rates.

"Well, gentlemen, what can I do for you today?" queried the colonel as he entered his office after a brief absence and found three farmer looking men in possession.

"We are a committee from the county fair," explained one, "and we want to see about the address. You make 'em, don't you?"

"Oh, certainly!"

"What's your figger?"

"I delivered two county fair addresses last fall and received $50 each."

"Um! Too high."

"There was no fault found with my prices last year. It takes time to prepare one, you know, and then I must journey down and deliver it. The figure I named is a very reasonable one."

"Look here, colonel," said the chairman of the committee after considering a bit, "have you got one of your old addresses on hand?"

"I believe so."

"And can't you put 'er in for twenty-five?"

"But some one might get on to it."

"We'll take all the chances of that. All the people who will listen to you will be old Mrs. Cosely, who is as deaf as a post, and old Jim Shaw, who will take it for a Fourth of July oration anyhow, and you won't run the slightest risk. Won't this make a difference in your figgers?"

The colonel blushed and stammered and said he thought it would, and when the committee left they had his receipt for $30, and he agreed to be on time.—Chicago News.

Her Offense.

The despondent damsel had been apprehended in the very act of drinking carbolic. The speedy work of skilled physicians saved her life. The physicians afterward admitted that they had saved it. An officious constable arrested her on the ground of attempted suicide. Then a wise man present interfered and said:

"I object to this high handed procedure. If this person is to be seized on any charge it should be as a violator of the pure food law."

"How so?" exclaimed every one in unison.

"Because she was putting acid inside 'er."

Whereupon the crowd released the woman and with one accord hanged the author of the pun.—Judge.

No Inducement.

"Why don't you devote more time to study?" said the serious person.

"What for?" asked the nonchalant citizen.

"So that you will surpass all other people in wisdom."

In the Choir.

"The soprano gave the choirmaster a canary for a birthday gift," remarked the contralto, "and he's named it after her."

"Quite appropriate, eh?" replied the tenor.

5,000 LIVES SAVED YEARLY BY MODERN METHODS IN TREATING CONSUMPTION.

In New York since 1881 there has been a reduction in the death rate from tuberculosis of 40 per cent.; that means an annual saving of some 5,000 lives.

Before a German scientist discovered the germ of this disease, it was considered the visitation of an avenging Providence. Our fathers gave it up as hopeless. Modern methods of treatment, however, have done much toward eradicating the terrible disease.

A noted specialist, whose camp for consumptives in the Pine Woods of Maine has attracted great attention, because of the remarkable cures he has effected there, and whose methods have been endorsed by the highest authorities, says his treatment was very simple, consisting of open air exercise, deep breathing and nourishing food. Every four hours the patient was given one teaspoonful of a mixture of the Pure Virgin Oil from the White Pine Trees; combined with Whisky and Glycerine, in the following proportions: One-half ounce Virgin Oil of Pine (Pure), two ounces of Glycerine and eight ounces of good Whisky. Shake well and take in teaspoonful doses every four hours.

This treatment strengthened the lungs and healed the bronchial tubes. He claims this formula will break up a cold in twenty-four hours, and cure any cough that is curable. The ingredients can be secured from any good prescription druggist at small cost, and can be easily mixed in your own home.

Inquiry at the prescription department of one of our leading druggists elicited the information that Virgin Oil of Pine (Pure) is put up only in half-ounce vials for dispensing. Each vial is securely sealed in a round, wooden case, with engraved wrapper, with the name—Virgin Oil of Pine (Pure), put up only by Leach Chemical Co., Windsor, Ontario—plainly printed thereon. There are many rank imitations of Virgin Oil of Pine (Pure), which are put out under similar name and style of package. Never accept these as a substitute for the Pure Virgin Oil of Pine, as they will invariably produce nausea and never effect the desired result.

Trent Water Power.

Mr. J. A. Culverwell writes thus to a Toronto paper;

"The despatch in yesterday's Globe from Kingston is misleading regarding the incident happening during my address to Council regarding the Northumberland-Durham Power Co. extending its line from Belleville to Kingston, as called for in the hydro-electric commission report.

"The despatch makes me state that the Ottawa Government promised the company full control of Trent waterpower. Instead, I explicitly stated we hoped the Ottawa Government would emulate the Ontario Government in also granting their portion of the rapids above Healy's Falls, the Ontario Government having already leased the company Healy Falls and the lower rapids and granted a patent of 56 acres of land required for the hydraulic works, the company also owning several portions of the upper rapids.

"Also, when an alderman interposed that Mr. Kilbourn of Lakefield claimed he had rights at Upper Healy Rapids, I answered that if Kilbourn would make the statement that he ever held rights, a serious charge would be laid against him for collusion with a then canal departmental engineer, as the department had officially denied Kilbourn's interest, and that the engineer who transferred the property to the department had purchased it for the government.

"This portion of the rapids is insignificant, but strategic. Another portion of the upper rapids was purchased by the Dominion Government thirty years ago for crib-sliding purposes, but is out of use now and is also useless to anyone excepting to the company for power purposes.

"The company, comprising the largest manufacturers and business men Belleville and Kingston, will interview the Dominion Government shortly, now that the canal report is issued, consideration having been then promised to a deputation of twelve municipal councils a year ago. Eight lake front constituencies are suffering for want of electric power, and the company wishes to supply them under the rate regulations of the hydro-electric commission."

PALACE OF HEALTH.

Remarkable Hall In London For Making Surgical Operations—Has Most Up-to-Date Improvements.

The finest and most scientific operating theatre in London has just been built in the new wing of the Central London Throat and Ear Hospital, which was opened by H. R. H. Princess Louise, on November 19.

The world has been scoured for the latest and most up-to-date improvements, with the result that the new operating theatre is a species of marble hall wherein dust cannot find a home.

The floor is laid with Terrozzo marble, mosaic, noiseless and non-absorbent. The walls are lined with light Sicilian marble. Very large slabs are employed, so that there shall be fewer niches for dust. And where joins are necessary the slabs are made to fit closely by an ingenious method of fixing by clamp as well as by cement.

There are no corners in the whole room, and the system of ventilation ensures that all air entering the apartment comes from above the roof of the building, far away from ground dust and the chimneys of Gray's Inn road. Lest injurious particles should even then steal in, there is a perforated zinc screen, which allows only the purest air to pass through. Nor can the air be cold or damp, for a noiseless fan first throws it upon a number of electric heat lamps, controlled in such a manner that any desired temperature may be obtained.

Close upon a hundred thousand cases are dealt with in a year in this remarkably efficient hospital. Humanity is the watchword, and it is carried out with method and simplicity. In order that patients may not be unnerved by the sight of deadly-looking instruments and the assembly of students, there is a new anaesthetic room—on the same hygenic lines which characterize the operating theatre—in the form of an ante-chamber. Here the patient is placed under an anaesthetic, and conveyed by means of a clever moving operating table into the adjoining theatre.

All this is part of a great scheme by which, as soon as ever funds permit, the hospital will be further extended so as to become one of the most elaborate and humane scientific institutions in the world. Donations, however, are urgently needed, and intending subscribers—who should send to the secretary in the Gray's Inn road—may be assured their money will be used wisely and with economy.

A Finlander's Gift.

A coin was exhibited by Sir Frederick Treves during an address on hospitals at Nottingham, which, he declared, was in value "absolutely beyond price." It was a twenty kroner piece (equal in English currency to 15s.), connected with the following touching anecdote:

"Years ago a Norseman came to the London Hospital to be cured of a trouble which prevented him from earning his living, and was put under my care. I operated, the man was cured, and there the matter, so far as I supposed, ended. Three weeks after the man left he came to my house. I did not know that he was aware of my name, still less of where I lived, and I am ashamed to say that I supposed he had come begging.

"He said, 'It is now three years since I left Finland. Before I left, my wife sewed this coin in the band of my belt, and told me on no account to part with it until I was starving. For three years this coin has stood between me and starvation. The value to you is nothing; the value to me I cannot express, but when I was in the hospital I was determined you should have it.

"'I am proud to say that since then I have been starving, and since I left the hospital I have not slept in a bed, but I would not part with the coin because I wanted you to have it.'"

What magnificent piece of jewelry, asked Sir Frederick of his audience, could equal the value of that coin?

THIRTY FEET TALL.

Horses Roamed In Wyoming In Olden Days Now Fossilized.

Out in Wyoming a lot of scientific grubbers have unearthed the fossil remains of a horse thirty feet long and more than thirty feet high. The grubbers seem to have pieced the horse together without any comment, and they don't offer a word of information concerning either his genealogy or his track record.

A horse thirty feet long would appear to be a lot of horse. If he belonged to the cave man the latter certainly had his hands full. A horse so tall that a thirty foot ladder became necessary when his bridle was to be put on might well be called the pride of the stable, although no ordinary stable would begin to accommodate him.

If the cave man hadn't any ladder and couldn't borrow one the next best thing was to climb a tree. Then try to imagine him shinning up a tall palm with the heavy bridle on his back, only to find when he attained the right altitude that the horse had moved beyond reach and was peacefully browsing on the tall grass of the jungle!

Of course a thirty foot horse could be expected to cover much more ground than the ordinary animal of the same breed, even at a walk. And if he took it into his head to work his way across lots there would appear to be nothing to impede him. Fences would go down before him like stubble, and a merely playful cavort would carry him over raging torrents.

When a thirty foot horse shied at a bit of white paper in the roadway the chances are that he jumped clear over into the next county.

As a war horse the thirty footer must have been a startler. When he let out a neigh the enemy fled in blind and unreasoning terror. When he champed his bit and pawed the ground the very hills shuddered. When he switched his tail the hireling foe fell about him like ripened grain.

And then think of the nightmare that could be expected to follow the first sight of this prodigious equine! He certainly was a wonder. It is a great pity we know so little about him.—Cheyenne News.

Vanishing Chinchillas.

In common with many animals noted for the beauty and value of their fur, the chinchilla of South America is in danger of becoming extinct, owing to the reckless impunity with which these little natives of the Andes have been slaughtered both in season and out. The chinchilla is about the size of a squirrel, has a head somewhat the shape of a rabbit's and is covered with a light gray, silky fur, which has long been very popular in the fur markets of the world. Chinchillas are captured in various ways, but the most common method is to hunt them with dogs, the fox terrier being the most useful and skillful in their capture. In hunting them the Indians employ a weasel, which is trained to enter the crevices of the rocks, where the animals often lie concealed during the day to avoid the sunshine, and drive them out, when they are easily killed. The rapid extermination of the chinchilla and the absolute lack of protection or regulation in taking them have resulted in a tremendous advance in the price of the skins in the past two years.

A Proud Old Steed.

Fred Fish of Southington, Conn., recently decided to sell his old mare and buy a younger horse, so he sold it for $15 to a peddler. No sooner had the money been paid than the old mare fell down dead. The previous owner says that she was always a proud old steed and that he is sure that she died rather than belong to a peddler, and so as he always admired the mare he is going to erect a monument to her with the $15 he received.—Boston Globe.

A Land of Contrasts.

Just now China is a land of contrasts so wide, so sharp and so forcible that the dullest observer can hardly fail to observe them. She is going straight from wheelbarrows and springless carts, or sedan chairs, to express trains; in place of special messengers she adopts the telegraph; from rush lights she goes to electricity, and from the extreme of antimilitarism she is developing a taste for patriotic volunteering.—Shanghai Celestial Empire.

Chirography's Flaws.

Alfred Binet, director of the psychological laboratory at the Sorbonne, Paris, has been investigating the value of handwriting experts. An expert who was given a specimen of Ernest Renan's chirography said the writer was a person of only moderate intelligence, credulous and garrulous. Vital, a criminal who murdered several women with revolting barbarity, appeared to another expert as "a timid girl, distinguished by moderation."

An Invigorating Drink.

"Pusky" is a new soda water fountain drink at Eufala, Okla. Pusky was invented by the Creek Indians. Corn that is just hard enough to shell is heated in a pot until it is brown. Then it is broken in a mortar into a fine powder. "Mixed with sweet milk or with carbonated water and sirups, pusky," says an enthusiastic local paper, "is a drink that makes a man carry his wife around in his arms just for the exercise."

A Cat With Wings.

The boatswain of the Caspian, an English schooner, brought with him from India on a recent trip a strange animal-bird, which he always referred to as his "Tabby." It certainly looked more like a cat than anything else, but it was probably some freak of the animal world. It had two pairs of wings, but could fly only with difficulty, like a tame duck.

DREAM THEORIES.

Mental Disease Versus the "Subliminal Self" Hypothesis.

The great advance in the study of dreams, as indeed in psychology generally, was made by those modern philosophers who discovered that we could throw light on mental sanity by means of mental disease. It is not pleasant to think that in dreams we become more akin to the insane, yet such is the theory that has been lately advanced, and which obviously has a good deal to say for itself. Sanity means precisely the possession of that will, intelligence and concentration which prevent us from being victims of promiscuous and disorderly images. In the visions of the night will, intelligence, powers of discrimination, arrangement, attention, all tend to disappear. We are no longer active; we are purely passive, undergoing experiences which we cannot control. And this is precisely the state of those who, through whatever cause, have lost the key of intelligent perception, have become hysterical, neuropathic, insane.

Meanwhile, for those who dislike so ignoble an interpretation and want some theory more dignified and high sounding, there exists that hypothesis of the "subliminal self," of which W. H. Myers and other spiritualists make so much use in their interesting volumes. One part of our mental consciousness is clear, explicit, giving us the ordinary materials for each day's experience as it comes. Another part of consciousness, so we are told, lies below the threshold. It is not conscious, but subconscious. The records of past, half realized experience, the heritage to us of our forefathers' knowledge or mental habits, the accumulated materials of human intelligence from many periods of history, form the supposed contents of this subliminal self. When we are awake we are using the explicit and conscious mind; when we sleep or dream we fall back on the subconscious mind, the vague, indeterminate region of impressions and fancies which serve as an obscure background to waking life.—London Telegraph.

The Men Who Win.

"It's an ill wind that blows nobody good," remarked a police captain the other afternoon while he was discussing the many recent gambling raids. "There is one man in Manhattan who will net almost $80,000 out of the raids, and he is now hoping the crusade will continue until after he has 'cashed in' himself. The men most pleased with these raids are those closest to the proprietors of gaming houses. The more numerous and successful the raids, the more delighted are these friends of the gamblers. Why? Well, the men who manufacture the gambling paraphernalia are keeping their shops working night and day. That stuff, such as roulette tables, poker chips and all the other devices used in a first class gambling house, you know, isn't cheap, and there's big profit in it. The more smashing and burning the police do, so much better for the trade, which is in a few hands."—New York Cor. Pittsburg Dispatch.

HIS WORLDLY GOODS.

When to the altar he the maiden led,
With all the worldly goods he owned he said
He would endow her;
We who were bidden to the marriage feast
Thought that some small pin-money, at the least,
He might allow her.
And yet he never let her have, I guess
Sufficient money for a decent dress.

That's just the way with all these horrid men;
They promise almost anything, and then,
When they have won us,
Their vows are broken, and they simply wink
And chuckle with enjoyment as they think
How they have done us:
It sort of takes the edge off the romance
To have them chide us for extravagance.

This one of whom I speak did keep his vow,
I'll say that for the mean wretch, anyhow,
But—to the letter,
Not in the spirit, though, but as a neat
And happy way his creditors to cheat
There's no word better.
Poor girl! The way he stints her is a shame,
And all he owns on earth is in her name.

Mr. Rockefeller causes it to be announced that his wealth has been the subject of fearful exaggeration. In a word the man is next door to beggary. How such stories about his riches got abroad is hard to say. MY WIFE TOLD TRUTH.

Thaw Makes Statement In Court—Alienists Now Hold the Field.

New York, March 1.—Harry K. Thaw enlivened the extremely dull session of his trial yesterday by furnishing the newspaper men with a brief statement in which he accused District Attorney Jerome of having made unprofessional remarks in court, asserted his wife's testimony was absolute truth and declared Mrs. Thaw's "natural real goodness" was above the comprehension of the prosecuting officers.

Alienist Cross-Examined.

Dr. Britton D. Evans, the alienist, was in the witness' chair all yesterday undergoing cross-examination at the hands of Jerome. The prosecutor said before adjournment that he probably would keep Dr. Evans on the stand throughout to-day. This means that the cross-examination of Dr. Wagner, another alienist, will not be reached until next week and makes indefinite the time when the defence will rest.

Dr. Evans and Mr. Jerome spent the entire day in going over eight letters written by Thaw and culling out of them all excerpts on which Dr. Evans based his expressed belief that they were written by a person of unsound mind.

This was the essence of the day's work. Mr. Jerome seemed as interested as the expert in searching out phrases in the letters which might be construed as the writings of an insane man, and, for the first time, the jurors were permitted to examine photographic copies of letters thoroughly.

Jerome's attitude in this direction again led to the circulation of rumors that he intends to pave the way, if possible, for a commission in lunacy.

Thaw's Sleuth Dogged White.

A private detective hired by Thaw to shadow Stanford White when the latter toured Europe last spring, may give material evidence at the present trial. White followed closely upon the previous itineraries of Evelyn Nesbit in the hope that he might run across her and regain her friendship. Thaw had a report sent to him of every movement White made during the trip which lasted five weeks.

THE ALFALFA PLANT.

It Was Cultivated In Asia Long Before the Christian Era.

Alfalfa is a native of southwestern Asia and five centuries prior to the Christian era had been carried to and cultivated in southern Europe. The Romans used and appreciated it as a feed for their chariot and war horses before the birth of Christ. From Italy, in which country its growth has been maintained continuously to the present day, it found its way into Spain and France.

The Spaniards during the Spanish invasion carried it into South America and Mexico. During the middle of the nineteenth century it was introduced into this country through California by the Chileans. Since then it has gradually spread eastward until today there is probably not a state or territory in the Union in which this oldest of cultivated forage plants is not grown to some extent. Where this plant has come to us from Spain, directly or indirectly, it is known as alfalfa, while if brought from other countries of Europe (and it is in isolated instances here and there) it is generally called lucerne, from a valley in Switzerland by the same name in which it grows well and in large quantities.

Pretty Names For Books.

The following are some of the curious titles of old English books:

"A Most Delectable Sweet Perfumed Nosegay For God's Saints to Smell At."

"Biscuit Baked In the Oven of Charity, Carefully Conserved For the Chickens of the Church, the Sparrows of the Spirit and the Sweet Swallows of Salvation."

"A Sigh of Sorrow For the Sinners of Zion Breathed Out of a Hole In the Wall of an Earthly Vessel Known Among Men by the Name of Samuel Fish" (a Quaker who had been imprisoned).

"Eggs of Charity Layed For the Chickens of the Covenant and Boiled With the Water of Divine Love. Take Ye Out and Eat."

"The Spiritual Mustard Pot to Make the Soul Sneeze With Devotion."

Most of these were published in the time of Cromwell.

Lawyers at Westminster.

Of the professions and trades represented in the house of commons the law holds first place, but in early days no class of men gave greater trouble than the lawyers, and many were the attempts made to keep them out of the house. James I., when the parliament of 1624-25 was to be chosen, advised electors "not to choose curious and wrangling lawyers, who may seek reputation by stirring needless questions." This and other antagonistic counsel in the past and present has, however, done little to stem the tide of lawyers which flows at each election into the house.—Strand Magazine.

JUDGE IS PROMISED.

Mr. Borden Moves Vote of Censure For Delay.

Ottawa, March 1.—In the House yesterday R. L. Borden, for the third time, censured the action, or rather inaction, of the Government in failing to appoint a judge to the supreme court of Nova Scotia, preceding it by the more effective method of a straight resolution of censure.

He pointed out how since March 27, 1906, when D. C. Fraser was taken from the bench and appointed to the Government of Nova Scotia, the vacancy remained unfilled. With the absence and illness of judges, the judicial business of the province had become so congested that the situation was a scandal, and all this so that the position of a judgeship could be kept dangling before a political supporter.

Twenty-four judicial appointments had been made in Canada, yet this one had to be left vacant because the Government was afraid to open Mr Laurence's constituency of Colchester.

Hon. Mr. Aylesworth Explains.

Hon. Mr. Aylesworth contended that there was nothing unusual in the case. It frequently happened in other parts of Canada that a court of appelate jurisdiction was deprived of a quorum because one of the judges happened to be the trial judge in a particular case. He pleaded ignorance of the fact of Mr. Borden's absolute retirement from the firm, supposing that his name was left on, as his own was in Toronto, for the sake of what prestige it might be supposed to bring.

As to the legal situation in Nova Scotia, there would be no important sittings until the spring assizes, and the appointment would be made before that date.

Mr. Lancaster (Lincoln and Niagara) said it had been a matter of surprise when the Premier had appointed Mr. Aylesworth to his present place. The Opposition took the position that they would give Mr. Aylesworth a fair show, but it was idle to show him any consideration. Every day he became more offensive to the House and indifferent to the rights of the people.

Mr. Boyce (Algoma) said the delay in filling the vacancy helped to further prevent the trial of the Halifax election case. Mr. Boyce asked if the gentleman from Colchester (Mr. Laurence) had not been promised the appointment.

Mr. Aylesworth denied that he had.

E. M. MacDonald (Liberal, Pictou, N. S.), one of the candidates for the vacant judgeship, defended the Government. Public business had not suffered.

Mr. Bennett (E. Simcoe) asked, could there be any dispute but that the Laurier Government had degraded our judiciary?

Upon division the Government was sustained, Mr. Borden's resolution being defeated: Yeas 50, nays 83. It was a straight party vote.

An Incidental.

Ottawa, March 1.—In committee yesterday the fact was developed that over $16,000 has been expended by the Government in procuring valuations and options upon the land upon which the new Government office buildings are to be erected.

One of the beneficiaries was James White, contractor, and president of the Liberal Association, to be remembered for his generous activity on behalf of Mr. Hyman in the London bye-election.

WANTS TO RENEW CHARTER.

Emmerson Opposes Extension of Time to Canadian Northern.

Ottawa, March 1.—The Canadian Northern Ontario Railway Co. bill, to give the company permission to build branch lines in Ontario, was considered again in the Commons Railway Committee yesterday morning. It was discovered that the clause limiting the time for construction covered "the lines of railway which the company is hereby or has heretofore been authorized to construct."

Mr. Emmerson pointed out that the addition of the words, "or has heretofore been" would grant an extension of time to all other lines of the railway granted in previous years to the James Bay Railway Co., such as the line from Toronto to Ottawa and from Toronto to Sudbury. Some of these branches might be outlawed by now. He said the bill appeared to be a surreptitious attempt to renew charters.

Dr. Sproule moved to strike out the words "or has heretofore been."

W. H. Moore, for the company, protested against any amendment which would delay the beginning of the construction of the company's line from Ottawa to Toronto, plans for which had been before the Minister for some time. The company proposed also to build a line from Ottawa to Georgian Bay, and he was not prepared to say that without this legislation the company would be able to go ahead.

At the Minister's suggestion the bill was referred to a sub-committee of five.

Bureau Gets Seat.

Montreal, March 1.—The Hon. Jacques Bureau, Solicitor-General, was returned yesterday by acclamation in Three Rivers and St. Maurice.

In Richelieu, Adelaid Lancelot, who was chosen by the Liberal convention, was nominated, and is opposed by C. A. Rondeau, Independent-Liberal.

In L'Assomption, the Conservatives nominated Ellie Lemiere, while Dr. Laurier, Conservative Liberal, and Joseph Archambault, Liberal, also were placed in nomination.

In Richelieu, the straight Ministerial candidate is sure to win, but in L'Assomption, should Mr. Archambault persist in dividing the Liberal vote, the result will be doubtful.

Killed by Engine Explosion.

Chicago, Mar. 1.—By the explosion of a boiler of a locomotive on the Michigan Central Railroad yesterday, Fireman August Kreff was killed and a switchman named Swinnfrock was fatally hurt.

The Marathon Mystery

A Story of Manhattan

By BURTON E. STEVENSON
Author of "The Holladay Case"

Copyright, 1904, by Henry Holt and Company

"You've read about that murder and robbery at the Delroy place near Babylon?"

"Yes, certainly. They've got the murderer in jail down there."

"No, they haven't," retorted Godfrey sharply. "We're going to have him in jail here inside of twenty minutes."

Simmonds' eyes began to glisten.

"That would be a big thing," he said. "Are you sure of the man?"

"Dead sure. But see here, Simmonds, I haven't time to tell you the whole story now; only I assure you, on my word, that I've evidence against the man which will convict him of one murder and perhaps of two. Is that enough?"

"Yes," said Simmonds instantly, and he opened a drawer from which he took a pistol and a pair of handcuffs. "All right," he added, turning back to us.

"That's good. Better have a lantern, too, though."

"Think so?"

He took down a little dark lantern, lighted it, tested it and put it in his pocket.

"Now I'm ready. Have we far to go?"

"Oh, no; just across the street."

Simmonds started with astonishment.

"You don't mean the Marathon?" he said.

"Just that."

"But who is it we're going after?"

"A fellow named Tremaine."

"Tremaine!" Simmonds' face grew blanker and blanker. "Why, I know him. He's been in here to see me. He doesn't seem at all the kind of fellow who would"—

"So ho!" cried Godfrey. "It was you who told him about the clippings?"

Simmonds colored to the eyes.

"Who told you that?" he stammered.

"No matter; it didn't do any harm; played right into our hands, in fact. But you didn't show your usual perspicacity there, Simmonds. That fellow is the most remarkable scoundrel I've ever run across. Perhaps it's just as well I never met him, or he'd have hypnotized me too. Come along."

Higgins was just shutting the inner doors.

"Do you know whether or not Mr. Tremaine is in his rooms?" asked Godfrey.

"Yes, sir; he went up about an hour ago."

"You have a key to his door?"

"Yes, sir."

"We want you to go up with us and open the door."

"Oh, come!" protested Higgins. "That's going it pretty strong. What's Mr. Tremaine done?"

"No matter. There's no use holding off, Higgins. Simmonds here can place you under arrest and force you to go."

"Well, see here," said Higgins, turning a little pale, "if you break in on him like that there's apt to be some bullets flyin' around. He's hotheaded, he is. I wish you'd excuse me. Here's the key. Why can't you open the door yourself?"

"That'll do," assented Godfrey and took the key.

We went softly up the stairs and down the dimly lighted corridor to Tremaine's door. We could see by the transom that the room was dark.

"I want to surprise him," whispered Godfrey. "If he has two or three minutes' warning he may be able to get rid of some evidence. He's probably in bed, and we must get to the bedroom door without his hearing us. How does the bedroom door lie, Lester, with reference to this one?"

"Straight ahead," I answered hoarsely.

"All right," said Godfrey. And he threw back the bolt and opened the door.

The room was in absolute darkness save for the dim stream of light from the hall. We entered cautiously, Godfrey in the lead.

"Have your lantern ready, Simmonds," he whispered. And I caught the odor of heated metal as Simmonds obeyed the order.

Two, three, four steps we advanced, feeling our way; then I heard a startled cry from Godfrey; an instant's pause.

"Quick, Simmonds, quick!" he cried in a stifled voice. "The lantern!"

Instantly a brilliant band of light shot across the room, wavered, wagged to and fro, then settled upon Godfrey bending above some shapeless object on the floor.

"What is it?" I cried, running to him, shivering with horror.

"It's Tremaine." And he knelt on the floor and stripped back the clothing from the breast. "He's dead," he added after a moment.

"Dead? But why? How?"

He was in pajamas—I can see them yet—striped blue and white.

Then I heard Godfrey's voice again.

"My God!" he was saying, with an accent of utter horror. "My God! Bring the light closer, Simmonds!"

I looked down too. The face was in bright relief now—but was it Tremaine? Could it be Tremaine, that staring, distorted thing, with wide open mouth? Then my eyes fell on the hand, clasped across the breast.

"What is it?" I asked again inarticulately, frozen with dread. "What has happened?"

I saw Godfrey stand erect with a sudden movement of loathing.

"It's the fer-de-lance!" he said hoarsely. "He's been bitten by it. And it's still loose in the room somewhere!"

CHAPTER XXXII.

IT strikes a chill through me even yet to recall the awful horror of that instant. The fer-de-lance—death in a few heart beats, and such a death! A death that melts a man into an abomination! For a moment none of us dared move, scarcely dared breathe, and I saw the band of light from Simmonds' lantern waving uncertainly across the floor, the walls, the ceiling—evidently poor Simmonds did not understand the exact nature of the danger, but only that it was a terrible one. I had a mad impulse to jump, shrieking, for the door, and should probably have done it had that quivering silence endured a moment longer.

"Simmonds, give me your lantern," said Godfrey, with an admirable calmness. "Lester, have your cane ready."

He threw a broad band of light upon the carpet and, keeping carefully within this path, approached the door, felt for the electric button and switched on the lights.

Half blinded for an instant, we stood staring at each other, at the floor.

"For God's sake!" gasped Simmonds, mopping the sweat from his face. "What is it?"

"It's a snake," said Godfrey tersely, "the deadliest in the world. If you don't believe me look yonder!" And he pointed to the huddled mass on the floor.

I did not look; I was afraid to; I had already seen too much. I was grateful when Godfrey jerked down a curtain and threw it over the body. Then he gave Simmonds the lantern and closed the door, which we had left open when we entered.

"Now," he continued sharply, "there's no use in giving way to our nerves. We're in no danger, but that snake is hid around here somewhere and the first thing for us to do is to find it. Were there two snakes, Lester?"

"No," I answered, as articulately as I could, "I think not. I never saw but one."

"I thought you said Cecily took that one with her."

"So she did—wait; I didn't see it. She had a cover over the cage."

Godfrey's face paled suddenly.

"Good God!" he murmured.

A giddiness seized me. I clutched at a chair for support.

It had been no accident. She had left Fe-Fe behind to avenge her—and what a vengeance! She had not laughed and forgotten!

Then in a flash I understood that last strange scene—the change in Cecily as she stood watching us from the deck of the receding boat, the pressing against the rail, the frantic effort to shout a message to Tremaine. She had relented, she did not wish to kill him, she loved him yet! But of that warning he had caught only a single word.

"The bed!" I cried. "The bed!"

"Right!" agreed Godfrey incisively, and walked to the bedroom door. In an instant the inner room was ablaze with light. He armed himself with one of Tremaine's canes, and together we approached the bed.

"Ready, now," he said, and with a sudden movement stripped back the covers. But there was nothing under them.

"The pillow, perhaps," he said, and turned it over.

There was a quick movement, a soft hissing, a vicious head raised itself, two eyes of orange fire glared at us.

I heard the swish of Godfrey's cane, and the head fell. Fe-Fe would work no more evil.

And then as I looked more closely at the coils I perceived something else there—something bright, iridescent, glowing.

Godfrey lifted the mangled body with the end of his cane and threw it into the middle of the bed. Then he bent over and picked up—the necklace.

"I was sure we should find it here," he said. "But look at it. Isn't it beautiful?"

It was more than that—it was superb; not dead white now, but warm, full of life. Was it the salt bath, or was it that the cloud had been removed forever from its owner's life? As I looked at it there seemed to be something unearthly in its beauty. It seemed to be rejoicing.

"The snake bit him probably," added Godfrey thoughtfully, "as he thrust the necklace under the pillow. It was a fitting punishment."

"It was greater than he deserved," I protested hoarsely. "He was not the man to meet a death like that."

"A man! He was a vampire!" said Godfrey sternly. "He lived on the lives of others. Don't let your sentimentalism blind you, Lester."

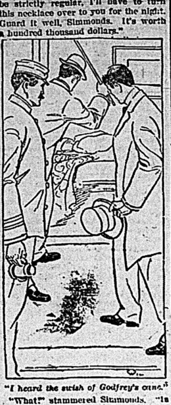
"Oh, you didn't know him!" I cried. A hot resentment of fate was sweeping over me. I realized that, down at the bottom of my heart, I had never really believed in Tremaine's guilt. Even now I hardly believed in it.

Godfrey turned to Simmonds, who stood contemplating the scene with staring eyes, his lantern still open in his hand.

"It's hard luck, Simmonds," he said. "You're not going to get the glory, after all. But who could have foreseen a thing like this?"

Simmonds opened his mouth and shut it again without uttering a sound.

"You'd better notify the coroner," continued Godfrey, "and, I suppose, to be strictly regular, I'll have to turn this necklace over to you for the night. Guard it well, Simmonds. It's worth a hundred thousand dollars."



"I heard the swish of Godfrey's cane."

"What!" stammered Simmonds. "Is it the—the—the"—

"Yes, it's the Delroy necklace. You'll have to go with us to Babylon in the morning to attend the inquest. I fancy there'll be something of a sensation when we produce the necklace there—eh, Lester?" And he laughed a grim little laugh of anticipatory triumph.

Then he glanced at his watch.

"I must be going," he said. "I've got to fire this story down to the office. What a scoop it will be! Till tomorrow, gentlemen."

I heard his footsteps die out along the hall; then a sudden horror of the place seized me, a deadly loathing, and I groped my way blindly from the room.

THE END.

Happy Derivations.

There are some very funny stories told about the derivations of words since people are likely to twist their language into strange forms. Thus, the pope is even today called by the name "pontifex," which boys in the Latin class all know is taken by him from the title of the old Roman priests. Now "pontifex" means bridge builder, and it is true that the Roman priests in the early days of the republic were in charge of bridges, but probably it should be "pomptifex," meaning "maker of ceremonies." Many of you have wondered what the priest had to do with bridge building, and this little change of "nt" to "mp" makes the whole matter clear.

An astonishing derivation is that of the word "stranger," which we are told comes from the Greek word ex, or out of. Absurd as this seems, it is easy to understand. Ex means out, from or away, the same word as the Latin ex; hence comes extra. Then comes the Latin extraneus, which means outside. The old French word, from this, estrange, means an outsider, but estrange gave us the word etranger by dropping the s and stranger by dropping the e.

After this serious example we shall not be surprised at the old joke that derived the town name "Middletown," from "Moses," by dropping the "iddletown" and adding "oses."—St. Nicholas.

The world is like a staircase—some go up and others come down.—Italian Proverb.

HOME MANAGEMENT.

The Great Secret of Success Is Tact and Good Temper.

A managing woman is quite a term of reproach, but it ought not to be so, for every wife and mother should try to be this. The fact is that women feel this pretty generally, but a good many have not the tact and wisdom they need to help them in their work.

Management when recognized is always rather resented both by children and grownup people as an indignity, but a tactful woman never lets it be seen, and peace and happiness are assured under her reign. She studies the dispositions of her husband, children and dependents and wins rather than drives. She is gentle and courteous and requests and suggests far more than she commands.

The great secret of successful management at home is to keep your own temper and to take care not to upset any one else's. In the control of her servants the good mistress gives praise where it is deserved and gives credit for good intentions even where the performance has not been wholly satisfactory. If sometimes it is necessary to administer a reproof she chooses a time when she can do so pleasantly.

Japanese Salaries.

Translated into American monetary equivalents, the commanding general of the Japanese army, when serving with the colors, receives a salary of $1,500 and a commission for extraordinary expenses of an equal amount. This brings his pay up to $3,000 a year. In the same way a lieutenant general receives $2,000, a major general $1,575, a colonel $1,176, a major $612 and a captain $420. The salary given to officers in the navy corresponds closely to that paid to those serving in the army. Admiral Togo's salary is $3,000 a year. Vice admirals are paid $2,000, rear admirals $1,650 and captains $1,248. The pay of the junior lieutenants is $300 and that of the midshipmen $222. On this basis of expenditure it is apparent that in Japan the outgo which a war involves comes much more in the cost of the materials than in the salaries of the officers and the pay of the men.—Boston Transcript.

The Chinese Army.

Dr. Morrison, the well known correspondent of the London Times at Peking, went to see the recent maneuvers of the modernized Chinese army in the neighborhood of Changtefu. He describes them as a repetition of the performance of last year—a set piece carefully prepared long beforehand by a number of Japanese advisers. The inefficiency of the officers is still conspicuous and the field training of the men inadequate, but the material is good. Dr. Morrison hints that without Japanese to direct affairs the contending armies would have been little better than a rabble.

The New Mississippi Bridge.

Borings 1,000 feet deep in New Orleans have encountered nothing more solid than mud, sand and a little thin clay; hence the problem of making safe foundations for the piers of a gigantic railroad bridge which is soon to be built across the Mississippi near the city is a hard one for engineering science. The piers will rest on timber caissons, each measuring over 60 feet by 126 and 140 feet high. The bottoms of these caissons will be 170 feet below the surface of the river.

Motor Roller Skates.

Motor roller skates have been invented by a Paris engineer. Each skate has its own motor, and the oil tank is fastened on the back of the skater. The apparatus for controlling the speed and for starting and stopping is attached to the belt. It is a compact outfit, and the user can skate along a country road at the rate of twenty-five miles an hour. They may take the place of the bicycle.

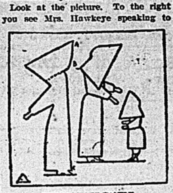
FOR YOUNG FOLKS

THE HAWKEYE FAMILY.

They Are Made of Paper and Always Wear Sunbonnets.

Perhaps you have never met Mrs. Hawkeye and her little girl. Well, here they are. One of the queerest things about the Hawkeye family is that they always wear big sunbonnets. And another queer thing is that they are all made of paper, so that all you little folks that are handy with the scissors may have a Hawkeye household of your own.

Look at the picture. To the right you see Mrs. Hawkeye speaking to her little girl; to the left you see how the lady is made out of folded paper. The line A B C shows the folded edge. You can easily trace the outline that you are to cut. When you have cut it fold over, inside out, the top part, the bonnet, making the fold on the dotted line, when the crown and the cape of the bonnet will at once take shape. Then fold the arms over, slipping them under the bonnet, and you will have a complete Mrs. Hawkeye.



THE HAWKEYE FAMILY.

The little girl is made in the same way, only she is smaller and her dress is shorter.

Figures as large as an ordinary doll may be made by using larger paper and drawing the outline of the proper size.—Chicago News.

HE LIKED SUGAR.

A True Story About a Clever English Pug Dog.

The story that I am going to tell you is about a pug that lives down in Devonshire.

This pug was a father pug who had a wife and two baby pugs. Papa pug was very fond of sugar, and his taste was shared by the rest of his family.

One morning when she was in the storeroom in the middle of giving out the stores for cook the mistress of Mr. and Mrs. Pug was suddenly called out of the room, leaving not only the outer door but also the lower door of the store cupboard open. It was quite a quarter of an hour before she was able to return. Imagine her surprise on reaching the door to see the whole family of pugs, minus papa, standing near the cupboard, with a very expectant look upon their faces.

Just inside the cupboard stood Mr. Pug. And what do you think he was doing? Handing out lumps of sugar in turn to each member of his waiting family, says Home Chat.

His mistress was very amused. She pretended to be very cross with him, but she really thought him a very clever doggie.

I thought so, too, when I was told the story, and I expect you will all of you agree with me.

Taste and Smell.

You think you know the taste of things, don't you? Well, let me tell you that if it were not for your nose you could not tell a good many things apart so far as your taste goes. A great deal of what you call the taste of a thing is its smell. You can't quite believe this? Prove it for yourselves. The trial makes a capital game. Get mamma or nurse to give you some raw oatmeal, some licorice, chocolate, apple, as many different things as she can think of that do not taste the least bit alike. Then blindfold first one and then the other of your party and let each one who is blindfolded hold his or her nose very tightly so that it isn't possible to smell things, and then let some one give him or her first one thing and then another to taste. It is good fun to give a little prize, perhaps one of your hockey sticks, Jack, or one of your dolls, Polly, to the boy or girl who guesses the most names of the things provided for the game of testing the taste. Tell mamma that this is very good fun for a grownup people's game too.

Firing Cannon.

Get a long piece of string and make a big loop at one end and a small loop at the other. Pass the big loop over your head, so that the string goes over your hands. Through the small loop fix a pencil. Another person draws the string out and, holding the pencil by its extremities, twists it round. The noise resembles cannon firing.

Their Menagerie.

The flowers once made up their minds
  They wished to have a zoo,
A place where every one could hear
  The pussy willow mew.
They caught a tiger lily fierce,
  And, wishing to be sure,
They built a cage of golden rods
  To keep him quite secure.

A dandelion, tawny maned,
  They trapped with greatest care.
Their hunters found the shady dells
  The foxglove had his lair.
They fed them with a beefsteak plant
  Each afternoon at two,
And just before the moon came up

SELECTIONS

FREAKS IN NATURE.

The Stone Man, the Brittle Man and the Poison Proof Man.

When she is in a freakish mood nature seems to revel in making human beings who defy all her most cherished traditions and are a constant mystery to their fellow creatures. Such a man is Herr Schwarz, "the armor plated man," who is such a puzzle to the doctors of Europe. Herr Schwarz has been for some years undergoing an ossification of the whole of his body and is rapidly developing into the hardness and immobility of a statue. His back has now become quite rigid, the muscles standing out hard and immovable. In fact, he seems to be enveloped in a kind of armor plating, consisting of surface bone as hard as stone. He is no longer able to move his jaws and is compelled to take food in a liquid form through a tube, some of his teeth having been removed for the purpose. And yet, singular to say, this osseous man enjoys excellent health and not long ago was married to a charming young Berlin woman.

In curious contrast to this indurated man is Herr Stahl, whose bones are so brittle that he can scarcely move without fracturing one of them. By simply stepping on a pavement he has broken a leg more than once. A hearty handshake has broken his arm, and a slap on the back not long ago laid him up for weeks with a fractured shoulder. Herr Stahl has only numbered twenty-four years, yet he counts two fractures for every year he has lived—in fact, as he humorously says, the only safe place for him is a glass case.

Captain Vetrio, an American, is a freak of another order, for he can make a hearty meal off poisons which would provide work for quite a large number of undertakers if others were to partake of it. Not long ago in Berlin he sat down to a dinner which consisted of a plate of verdigris, a liberal portion of ultramarine and a compote of sulphur and borax, followed by a dessert of white sulphur. These edibles were washed down by a solution of strychnine and a bottle of patent rat killer made of powdered glass, arsenic and atropine. This meal he devoured with evident enjoyment, to the amazement of the government officials and doctors who looked on and who to a man declined the captain's invitation to join him in his repast.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The New Drug Stovaine.

According to a Birmingham newspaper, quoted by Consul F. W. Mahin, a new drug, called stovaine, has come into use in England and abroad to prevent pain in surgical operations. It does not produce unconsciousness. A patient who has nerves strong enough can watch a surgeon operate while under its influence. Stovaine is injected into the lumbar region of the spinal canal and acts on the roots of the nerves entering the spinal cord. The injection produces a certain amount of shock, as well as occasional sickness and headache. How long the effect of this anaesthetic will last is not stated, nor whether further injections may be made during an operation. Presumably the duration of the effect is not great, and only one injection is deemed prudent, for a recent instance is noted of a surgeon speeding an operation to the safety limit in order to outstrip the recovering nerves.

How Herring Grow.

Some new facts concerning the herring are contained in the scientific section of the annual report of the fishery board for Scotland. According to a paper by Dr. Wemyss Fulton, certain theories as to the growth and age of the fish which have been accepted for the last quarter of a century are not well founded. It now appears that the herring is a fish of slow growth and is barely two and one-quarter inches in length when one year old. It does not reach maturity and spawn until five years old and is then of an average length of nine and three-eighths inches. Herrings over twelve inches long, like the large Loch Fyne fish, may be ten years old and more, and the large specimens that are occasionally caught, measuring from fourteen to fifteen inches, are probably over fifteen years old and may be twenty.

The Stars on the Flag.

Oklahoma's star will be added to the flag on July 4 next year if the formal admission of the state to the Union takes place before that time. The war and navy departments have agreed upon the arrangement of the forty-six stars to accommodate the new one and to make it easy to add two more when New Mexico and Arizona are admitted. The plan provides for four rows of eight stars each and two rows of seven stars each. The rows of seven are the second and the fifth. The rows of seven can be made into rows of eight when the other territories are admitted, and the arrangement will then be absolutely regular.

Newly Discovered Work of Menander

A highly interesting discovery is announced from Egypt. M. Lefebvre, one of the inspectors in the service of the Egyptian department of antiquities, has been fortunate enough to disinter a large number of leaves of a papyrus codex of Menander, containing upward of 1,200 lines. The publication of this most welcome discovery should enable modern scholars for the first time to form an independent judgment on the style and genius of the famous comic dramatist.—London

ECZEMA FOR 25 YEARS

·HANDS·SO·BAD·OBLIGED·TO·WEAR·GLOVES·DAY·&·NIGHT·

ZAM-BUK, the great herbal balm, has just worked such a sensational cure in Montreal that it has set the city talking. Mr. T. M. Marsh, of 101 Delorimier Avenue, is the grateful subject of this cure. He says:—

"For 25 years I had eczema in my hands. It started in red blotches, which itched and burned so that I felt I could almost scratch the parts away. Then after the itching came the pain and the soreness. Great open wounds formed and set up terrible agony. I went to a doctor when first the trouble started. He did me no good and I tried another. He also failed, and I tried a third, and then a fourth. My case baffled them all, and I paid my money for no good. Then I tried embrocations, and salves, and liniments, and creams, and preparations recommended by druggists and by friends alike. It was no good. The eczema continued, and I never believed I could be cured. Fancy suffering in that way for 25 years! For the past two years the pain and irritation were so bad that I was obliged to wear gloves day and night.

"Zam-Buk was brought to my attention and I tried a little. To my amazement it did me good. I bought another box, and it did still more good. I tried another, and to my intense delight this herbal balm did what I had been hoping for for 25 years—it cured me. My hands are now healed, and I have put away the gloves which, for two years, had been indispensable day and night. I have been well-known in Montreal and Eastern Ontario for over 30 years, and my case is one which hundreds of people know of. I am glad to make the facts known in the interests of other sufferers who may not yet know how superior and how wonderful Zam-Buk is."

WHAT ZAM-BUK CURES, AND WHY.

ZAM-BUK can do what other ointments fail, because it is free from all animal fats and oils and from all mineral matter. It stands alone in its peculiar composition, being made entirely from herbal saps, essences and juices. Even its color—green—is due to Nature's own coloring, as in the leaves of the forest and the herbs of the field.

ZAM-BUK heals all skin diseases—eczema, scaly sores, ulcers, ringworm, poisoned wounds, barber's rash, pustules, face blemishes due to blood poison, chapped hands, cold cracks, etc. It heals cuts and lacerations, stops bleeding, cures piles, eases fistula, reduces enlarged veins. It cures burns and scalds, and it is an excellent "first aid" remedy. It is highly antiseptic.

All Druggists and Stores sell at 50 cents a box, or from ZAM-BUK CO., TORONTO, for price. Note free sample offer herewith. 6 boxes for $2.50.

An Astronomer Royal.

One of the best known of living astronomers is Sir David Gill, who has been royal astronomer at the Cape of Good Hope since 1879. Sir David, the son of an Aberdeenshire magistrate, was educated at Aberdeen University, and after graduating set up a small private observatory near the college. Here he pursued his studies for a number of years until engaged to conduct the private observatory of the Earl of Crawford, and to organize his expedition to Mauritius to view the transit of Venus. In 1877 he proposed and conducted an expedition to Ascension Island to determine the solar parallax by observations of Mars. For his success at this time he received prizes from the Royal Astronomical Society and the Institute de France. Since then he has organized several expeditions, and has been connected as director with a large number of geodetic surveys, principally in Africa. In 1882 he photographed the great comet, and pointed out the desirability of using photography for cataloguing stars. His publications are numerous, all dealing with astronomical and mathematical questions, and the annals of the Cape observatory contain heaps of unpublished manuscript records and observations.

A Castle In Ireland.

The name of castle for a country house is preserved in Ireland, rather curiously, for Ireland has not the vestiges of French customs so noticeable in Scotland. The dullest little villa, so it be solitary in an Irish country place, bears that name, and the smile of the Saxon when he arrives and sees the castle is cheap and unscholarly. Where the Celt—the female Celt, that is—does earn and deserve that slight sign of derision is in her practice with her visiting cards intended for London use. The word castle there for a second and country address does seem to suggest machicolations, if not sieges and sally ports.—London Chronicle.

109, he will find that on the opening of negotiations with Sir Charles Ross, before anything had been done or any money had been expended by the company, $62,971 was paid and that in 1904, Q-116, we handed over to Sir Charles Ross $159,262. In the year 1905, Q-100 we handed over $260,000 and in the fiscal year, closing on the 30th of June, 1906, we handed over $347,689.22 making a total in round numbers of $830,000 that the people of this country have paid Sir Charles Ross for 4,695 rifles.

It is all very well for hon. gentlemen to say that an advance has been made on account of other rifles. Evidently an advance has been made on other rifles to the extent of the difference between the cost of 4,000 rifles at $25 each (or $100,000) and $830,000. Is that a business transaction; is that the kind of a contract a man sitting on the treasury benches would make for himself if he were dealing with his own property? I do not think so. When this bargain was originally made with Sir Charles Ross, it was agreed that this country should pay him $25 a rifle. We have not the contract before us, but no doubt it contained the usual terms that 75 per cent. should be advanced. Advantage has evidently been taken of that, and I challenge the minister to dispute his own figures — for I quote his own figures —when I say that with authority to pay $25 a rifle and advance 75 per cent., he only received 4,695 rifles and he paid $830,000. And what kind of rifles were they? You would think that when we paid $179 a rifle we ought to have something worth having. Well, the Minister of Militia told us that 1,000 of these rifles went to the Northwest Mounted Police, and we know the kind of rifles these were, for I find that two different police inspectors report that the annual practice had to be abandoned because the men were not willing to take any chances behind the Ross rifle.

Mr. Sam. Hughes. Will the hon. gentleman be good enough to refer to any report of an inspector made to that effect?

Mr. Northrup. I will be very happy to substantiate any statement I have made. I said that reports had been made by two police inspectors condemnatory of the Ross rifle, and on page 13 of the report I find the following from Commissioner Perry:

"Some serious defects were found in the Ross rifle with which the force were re-armed last year, when it was put to the severe test at the annual target practice. As soon as these were discovered the practice was suspended as it was thought some serious accident might happen."

At page 39 of the report, I find that Superintendent Saunders says:

"Owing to some defects being discovered in the Ross rifle it was not thought advisable to finish the annual course of musketry, and target practices ceased before the preliminary stage was completed."

Now, remark the contrast between a proper, suitable arm, and an unsuitable, improper arm.

"The shooting with the Colt's revolver was good, and this arm has proved itself to be trustworthy and suitable for our purposes. A large number of the divisions belong to the rifle club which is supplied with Lee-Enfield rifles borrowed from the Militia Department. During the summer months shooting took place every Wednesday and Saturday afternoons, the season ending with the annual rifle matches. Excellent prizes were offered and some very keen and close competitions resulted. The shooting on the whole was of a high average."

But the Minister of Militia repudiates the Lee-Enfield which is proved by experience to be a first-class article, and he puts in the hands of the men, at the expense of $830,000, the Ross rifle which the men themselves decline to use. The hon. gentleman (Mr. Sam. Hughes) referred to the prejudice which exists against the Ross Rifle. I think myself it would not be unnatural if Canadians had some prejudice against any rifle which was produced by a company or an individual under the circumstances under which this rifle was produced. But surely it is rather abusing one's credulity too much; surely it is a base, groundless, reflection on Canadians to say that the objections to the Ross rifle which came from all parts of Canada between the Pacific and the Atlantic, were based on prejudice. Surely the more commonsense view would be to say, that the arm was defective, that the minister did wrong in making this bargain, and that he should try to get out of it as soon as possible. Surely that is a more sensible opinion, than to say that the people of Canada complained against this unfortunate arm because they were prejudiced.

Then it seems, that not content with paying this fancy price for the rifle, there was a claim for damages made by the Ross Rifle Company. The Auditor-General, in his correspondence, calls attention to the fact that the Ross people have forfeited their rights under the contract, and while we have not seen the contract, it is hardly conceivable that it could have been so drawn, that even under the admissions made by the minister himself, it would not have been voided. There was some correspondence with the Auditor-General as to the voiding of the contract, and then the question was referred to the deputy Minister of Justice.

Sir Frederick Borden. My hon. friend does not wish to misrepresent.

Mr. Northrup. I do not.

Sir Frederick Borden. It was not the contract with the Ross Rifle Company that the Auditor-General refers to, but a contract for gauges. There was never any question about the contract for the rifles.

Mr. Bergeron. When the House last discussed this matter, the minister promised to bring down the contract between Sir Charles Ross and the Government.

Sir Frederick Borden. The papers are being prepared; the contract was laid on the table of the House two or three years ago.

Mr. Bergeron. There was a discussion in the House quite recently as to whether the contract was signed by Sir Charles Ross alone, or whether there was a company, and I remarked that the best way to decide that was to see the signatures to the contract.

Sir Frederick Borden. I have the contract here; I send it over to the hon. gentleman.

Mr. Northrup. At all events the question was referred to the deputy Minister of Justice, as to whether or not the company was entitled to damages because they had been stopped in making gauges. The gauges were in connection with the rifle, marked I. The Government had decided to take the rifle known as mark II., and the deputy minister in his opinion is very careful to state that he assumes that the Government had directed the company to make the changes. I quote the letter of the Auditor-General.

Sir,—With reference to your letter of December 19 last, relative to payments on account of the contract with the Ross Rifle Company for gauges, in which you state as to the balance still to be paid under the contract, while the department will no doubt be obliged to pay it, the delivery of the balance of the gauges has not been pressed, as a new pattern of rifle, known as mark II., has been adopted in the place of the pattern for which the gauges were contracted for. Sufficient gauges have been delivered for the former mark II. they are not required at all.'

I beg to say that as the Ross Rifle Company has failed in the fulfilment of the contract, there is a doubt in my mind as to the Government being liable for any further payment in this connection.

I have, therefore, to request that no further payment be made on the contract out of your letter of credit and that you obtain the opinion of the Department of Justice as to the liability of the Government in the matter.

Then the opinion of the Department of Justice reads:

Sir,—Referring to your letter of the 27th ultimo, 72-15-2, with respect to the contract with the Ross Rifle Company for rifle gauges; I beg to state that it, as the papers seem to show, it is true that the work was stopped upon this contract when and because (I assume at the instance of the Government) the pattern of rifle to be furnished by the Ross Rifle Company was changed from mark I. to mark II. the gauges contracted for not being of any use in connection with the mark II. rifle, I am of opinion that the contractors are entitled to be paid for the work done by them quantum meruit having in view the terms of the contract. The measure of the amount to be paid them should be their necessary expenditure under the contract plus such allowance for contractors' profit as the facts warrant. Thus, if an estimate can be made of the profit which they would have received if the contract had been fully performed, so much of such estimated profit might be allowed as bears to the actual necessary expenditure the ratio which such estimated profits bears to the total expenditure which would have been incurred if all the gauges contracted for had been manufactured and delivered.

No lawyer could possibly object to that, but the point is that the opinion of the Deputy Minister of Justice is based on the assumption that it was the Government which stopped the manufacture of mark I. And if what the Minister himself has told us is correct, it was probably the most disgraceful contract the Government ever made, to have mark I manufactured at all. They should have been ashamed to give such a contract, and if mark I was not what it was represented to be, certainly the Ross rifle people had no right to claim any damages, because the rifle they had represented to be a proper one proved so inferior, that a different kind of weapon had to be ordered. And yet, this company had the nerve to claim damages because the gauges they had made for the rifle which they represented to be a good one, and which turned out to be of no use, could not be used for mark I., which appears to be the only presentable rifle they furnished. Now, it seems to me that the case may be put in a nutshell, and it is needless to occupy further time on it. It will be admitted that when this contract was made by the Government with Sir Charles Ross, no civilized country had ever adopted that weapon. I wonder if the Minister ever took the trouble to inquire whether it had been submitted to the war authorities in England. May I ask the Minister if it had been?

Sir Frederick Borden. It had been.

Mr. Northrup. And it had not been accepted, for it is not in use there to-day. Canada alone, of all the civilized countries of the world, was found willing to adopt the Ross rifle, which was submitted to the Imperial authorities, but men of the stupidity of Lord Roberts, and Lord Wolseley could not see the advantages of it, and preferred to stand by the Lee-Enfield, which had done good service on many well-fought fields. Nor did Sir Charles Ross succeed in persuading the Americans to adopt the rifle. So he came to Canada; and how absurd it is for a little country like Canada, where militarism is after all a bit of play, to spend millions of dollars in experimenting with a toy rifle to see if we cannot, with the aid of Sir Charles Ross, perfect a rifle which has been practically rejected by the Imperial authorities. Not content with the rifle which was good enough for the Imperial troops of Great Britain and for the troops of the United States, we in Canada had to speculate and squander our money in the hope of inventing something better. The Minister said he was getting a cheap article. I say it was one of the dearest rifles ever known. It was dear at any price, and yet a good rifle would be dear at $25. I see different answers in 'Hansard' of this year and last year as to what the rifle cost. I take the responsibility of saying that the Lee-Enfield in England costs £3 16s. and I challenge contradiction. In the United States the American magazine rifle without bayonet costs $14.90. To this must be added 24 cents for a jointed cleaning rod in three sections and $1.43 for a 12-inch knife bayonet. So that the American rifle costs about $16. If the Minister had taken the trouble to look at the records of his own department, he would have seen that in the last year of Tory rule we bought 20,000 stand of arms in England for $17.59 each.

Mr. Sam Hughes. How does the hon. gentleman explain the fact that the Imperial Government has paid $27 each for 200,000 rifles and $24 each for another 200,000 within twelve years?

Mr. Northrup. When I make such a statement as the hon. gentleman has made, I shall be prepared to explain and substantiate it, but I decline to accept the responsibility of substantiating every statement the hon. gentleman makes. If my memory serves me rightly, the hon. gentleman himself read an account of the sale of Lee-Enfield rifles in the last few years in England at £3 15s. Am I not correct?

Mr. Sam Hughes. I will answer the hon. gentleman in due time.

Mr. Northrup. I hope the hon. gentleman will answer that question. These facts seem to be unquestionable—that the Minister made a contract for a rifle that had been rejected—or at least it had been offered to and had not been accepted, which is tantamount to rejection—by the Imperial authorities, and for which he agreed to pay $25, away and beyond what the American Government and the Imperial Government were paying, and away and beyond what the Canadian Government had bought the Lee-Enfield rifle for from the Imperial Government 10 years ago. I submit that that is evidence of either extravagance or incapacity. When he came to make his contract, a high-flown company was formed, and some of the very best names in Canada were connected with it. I cannot remember all the names, but among them were Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, Senator Beique, Senator Gibson and Mr. Angus. Certainly no better names could be found among the capitalists or men of standing in Canada; and a large amount of credit was given to that company because of the reputable names on its prospectus. But when the question was asked in the House, it turned out that that company had never come into existence, and that it had nothing to do with the Ross rifle. We are told that the sole owner of the Ross Rifle Company is Sir Charles Ross. When the Minister comes to explain he will perhaps say what particular advantage it was to this country that Sir Charles Ross saw fit to come here with an experiment in his hands, and to induce this country to venture into it to the extent of over $800,000, in return for which it has received 4,695 rifles. In one of the answers the Minister gave to certain questions which were asked, it was stated that rifles sold by a small arms manufacturer in the old country, cost more on account of interest for land and other items of that kind. I would like to know how much Sir Charles Ross charged on these rifles for the interest on the land on which his factory is built, one of the historic fields which Canada has discarded for this Ross Rifle Company. For what reason was this historic field given to Sir Charles Ross and this country pledged to such an enormous payment? This afternoon the gentleman who preceded me read a letter showing that a small arms factory in Birmingham is prepared to sell the Lee-Enfield rifle for 80 shillings with the bayonet, and the bayonet cost 7s. 6d., so that this private firm in Birmingham is offering to sell the Lee-Enfield rifle for $18 or $19, and I challenge the Minister to contradict the statement that the price of the rifle from the Imperial authorities is £3 15s.

Now, there is another feature of this case. It was bad enough that such a contract should be made. It casts reflection on the intelligence of the Militia Department that it should have entered into such a contract, and it makes one wonder at times how the right hon. gentleman who leads the Government could have allowed his Minister to make—and make without punishment—such a contract as this. But what is worse is that no consideration appears to have been given to the man behind the gun. When this contract was made was there any thought of him at all? Did it ever enter anybody's mind that he had any rights—that our Canadian citizen soldiers, who give up their time and money out of pure love of country and loyalty to the flag, had any rights? Just think what a condemnation it would have been of the Minister of Militia (Sir Frederick Borden), had this bolt which burst into three pieces and flew past the soldiers' heads, struck one of the soldiers and killed him. That there were no serious consequences was purely accidental. It was purely due to good luck on the part of the soldier that he did not lose his life at the wrong end of the Ross rifle; and from what we have heard, it is only from that end that a man runs any danger.

I do not propose to occupy the time of the House any longer. Let me say that, in the first place, the bargain made was an improper one. I have shown that nothing could be more outrageous and extravagant, after our three years' experience of it. Just fancy $830,000,000 paid out and 4,695 rifles delivered, of which 1,000 went to the Northwest Mounted Police and were rejected by them, 500 went to the permanent force and could not be used, and 320 went to St. John, and we have heard nothing about them. So that for all practical purposes, at the end of three years we have not a single rifle fit to use in return for this expenditure of $830,000. What is the use of our having a military force in this country? Surely it is not all play. Surely there must be some substantial idea behind it. The time may come when we shall require soldiers, though we all hope it never will, but suppose it came any time in the last three years, what would have been the predicament in which the Minister of Militia (Sir Frederick Borden) would have found himself? He would have had to tell the Canadian soldiers who were called to the front that all they could have was what was coming to the militia under the clauses of the Ross contract. Surely if the Minister has the power to make contracts the people should hold him to strict account for the way he has used that power. It seems to me, without minimizing the other scandals that have come before this House, without in any way detracting from the gravity of the many other charges made against this Government —it seems to me that since that blackest day in Canadian history, the day of the scandal of the emergency rations, there has been no charge made against the Government which should more properly call a blush to the cheeks of its supporters than this contract made with the Ross Rifle Company. It is not merely a question of the amount paid, because Canada is a rich country, and while we do not wish to spend our money recklessly, we can stand the loss; but it is the unnecessary risks we impose on our troops, should we require to call them out to repress disorder at home or defend our shores when, instead of being armed as well as they might be and as English troops are armed, all they would have for this expenditure of about a million dollars is a few hundred rifles so useless that whether given to the volunteers or the Mounted Police or the permanent force they are discarded and discredited by those to whom they are given.

MISS ADELAIDE NICHOLS

PERIODS OF PAIN

While no woman is entirely free from periodic suffering, it does not seem to be the plan of nature that women should suffer so severely. Irregularities and pain are positive evidence that something is wrong which should be set right or it will lead to serious derangement of the feminine organism.

Thousands of women have found relief from all periodic suffering by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is made from native roots and herbs, as it is the most thorough female regulator known to medical science.

It cures the condition which causes so much discomfort and robs that period of its terrors. Women who are troubled with painful or irregular functions should take immediate action to ward off the serious consequences and be restored to health and strength by taking

Mrs. Pinkham's Standing Invitation to Women

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to write Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. From the symptoms given, the trouble may be located and the quickest and surest way of recovery advised.

A Boston schoolboy was tall, weak and sickly.

His arms were soft and flabby. He didn't have a strong muscle in his entire body.

The physician who had attended the family for thirty years prescribed Scott's Emulsion.

The Death Song Of the Brave.

(Toronto Telegram.)

Salvation soldiers are reported to have faced death on the foundering Larchmont with a Hymn of Faith on their lips. No painter may immortalize these last brave moments of dying men and women.

No Kipling may sing of them;

To take your chance in the thick of a rush with firing all about,
Is nothing so bad when you've cover t' 'and and leave and lik, in' to shout;
But to stand and be still to the Birkenhead drill
Is a damn tough bullet to chew.
And they done it the Jollies—'Er Majesty's Jollies — soldier and sailor, too.
Their work was done when it 'adn't begun; they was younger than me and you;
Their choice it was plain between drownin' in 'eaps, an' bein' mopped by the screw;
So they stood an' was still to the Birkenhead drill — soldier and sailor too.

It is all right. The Salvationists, going down to death on the Larchmont, could not be ranked as notables. They had not the genius of a Stanford White who could plan great triumphs of architecture out of the ruins of his own decayed character. The wealth of a Harry K. Thaw or the beauty of an Evelyn Nesbit was not theirs. They were humble men and women who knew how to die because they had learned how to live.

Their voices will sing immortal out of the miseries and terrors of the Larchmont. They bid humanity be of a good cheer. They tell of a Faith which still builds its splendors of human architecture, splendors that stand unshaken amid the storms of death. And the spiritual genius that rears triumphs of character has a value not inferior to the material wealth and genius that rears triumphs of bricks and mortar, steel and iron.

AS AN EXAMPLE

Of what we have been saying about overlooking the strain on the ocular muscles, the following is to the point: Mr. H. A. K., 35, bookkeeper, gave history of pain in eye-balls, headaches, and pain between the shoulders which first appeared in childhood. In later years nausea, indigestion, and 'sick headache' developed. He had his eyes examined by a specialist, when a high degree of oblique astigmatism was found, which he corrected with proper glasses, thinking this was all that was necessary; the glasses greatly improved vision, but the distressing symptoms mentioned still continued. At this stage a careful examination of the ocular muscles revealed 7 degrees of exophoria (a weakness of the internal recti, which receive their working powers from the nerve-centres at the base of brain) The proper glasses were given for the relief of the brain-strain induced in this way, as well as exercise to strengthen those weak muscles, when in a short time all the pain, headaches, and digestive troubles entirely disappeared.

The Ross Rifle.

MR. W. B. NORTHRUP, M.P., SAYS SOME SCATHING THINGS ABOUT THAT AND ITS PROMOTERS IN THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

During the course of a debate on the Ross rifle in the House of Commons, a speech was made by Mr. W. B. Northrup, M. P. for East Hastings, which is thus reported in Hansard;

Mr. W. B Northrup (East Hastings) —Mr. Speaker, I was exceedingly sorry this afternoon, when my hon. friend from Victoria and Haliburton (Mr. Sam. Hughes) brought this matter before the House, that the hon. the Minister of Militia (Sir Frederick Borden) was not in his place for it did seem a pity that he should not have had the pleasure of hearing sweet music fall on his ears and a good word said for the Ross rifle, probably the first and possibly the last time he will have such a pleasure. I listened most attentively to the hon. gentleman who so vigorously and eloquently presented the claims of the Ross rifle and the weaknesses of all the other rifles, and I was able to come to the conclusion in the first place, that it was a pity that there was not a little intelligence somewhere in the world outside of Canada, for it is perfectly clear that no other nation is armed with a rifle that should be put in the hands of civilized men; and in the second place I was rather pleased to find that the Ross rifle has been as much improved as the hon. gentleman stated. He gave us a list of some ten or twelve improvements which distinguish Mark II. of the Ross rifle Would it not strike any ordinary person, that, when this country entered into the immense contract that they did with the Ross Rifle Company and when they received a rifle which was so defective that before it could be put into the hands of the companies a dozen defects which had been discovered had to be remedied, we would be justified in finding fault with such a contract as that? This rifle has been condemned from the Yukon to the sea. Wherever it has been given out it has been condemned and despised whether by the police, the permanent force or the volunteers. Certainly no man in this House and probably few in the country have had greater experience in warfare than the hon. member for Victoria, and yet, when he came to give his own personal experience with that rifle, he said that he could not hit a target once out of eight times with the Ross rifle. I think these are facts that we should bear in mind. Let us see what facts there are about the Ross rifle that are undisputed, that the hon. Minister of Militia cannot and dare not deny, I recognize the difficulty that the last speaker has also recognized of presenting an argument founded upon answers given by the hon. Minister to questions asked in this House. We have these answers and we find them to be contradictory one of another. When we have an answer of the hon. Minister of Militia flatly contradicting an answer of the hon. Minister of Customs (Mr. Paterson), you can understand the difficulty we feel in fairly, impartially, and dispassionately discussing this question. We have the records of last year and, leaving aside the records of this year because I have not the current public accounts, we have some facts and statistics which will enable us to form some kind of an idea as to whether or not an intelligent bargain was made by the Minister of Militia with Sir Charles Ross when he entered into this unfortunate contract with the Ross Rifle Company. We find that in 1903 Sir Charles Ross first appeared upon the scene. As far as appears he brought nothing with him but his title and the drawing of a rifle. He was better equipped than some other distinguished Englishmen who have come to this country and naturally he expected and deserved to do better. Only a few days ago our attention was called to Guy Tracy Robins who blew on to the prairie with nothing but a flannel suit and a tennis racquet and who pulled out with $500,000 in one year. Is it any wonder that Sir Charles Ross with an Imperial title and the drawing of a rifle managed to pull about $830,000 out of the people of Canada? The Minister of Militia tells us that the price of these rifles is $25 a piece. That may be the contract price, but I think our experience in this House in the last year or two has led us to place very little confidence in the figures given in the contract as shedding any light on the question of how much the country pays. It may surprise the Minister of Militia to be told that up to the end of last year we had paid pretty nearly $200 for every rifle we got from the Ross Rifle Company. The figures are his own. A question was asked the minister on the 14th of May last, page 3246 of last year's 'Hansard';

How many rifles have been manufactured by the Ross Rifle Company since its organization?

And the answer was:

Total number 16,500 to date.

How many have we distributed for actual use up to date?

On the 14th of May, 1906, after this contract had been in existence for some three or four years, the number of rifles which actually had been delivered—the minister himself says it, and he cannot dispute his own figures,—was 4,695. Let us consider. For three years this wealthy company delivered to the people of Canada 4,695 rifles and how much have we paid for them. I hardly expect the minister to take my words, but the public accounts and Auditor-General's Report are here, and if he will take the trouble to look at the Auditor-General's Report for 1903, Q-

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

HOCKEY.

A Junior Match

An exciting game of hockey was played last night at the arena, and the Maple Leafs beat the Winchesters by a score of 4 to 2. Ralph Graham was referee and pleased both teams. Morden and Greene played star games, and Thorpe in goal stopped a few swift ones. This was the line-up:

Maple Leafs—Goal, G. Thorpe; point, H. Rogers; cover, C. McBride; rover, W. Tedman; centre, F. Morden; right wing, C. Pearce; left wing, M. Greene.

SPORTING NOTES.

Belleville will have its first taste of professional hockey next Thursday, March 7, when the fast Guelph professional team, which was about the best in the senior O.H.A. till that body mirthfully fired them out, will come here and clash with the best bunch Belleville can produce. This will be the best local match since the days when the old intermediate team covered itself with glory and advertised this city from one end of Ontario to the other. It is believed that at least four expert senior players can be secured here, and the promoters of the match will spare no pains or expense to secure three stars to round out the septette. Three of Cornwall's best players, including our old friend "Reddy" McMillan, and Hunter, the star goal-tender, between the poles, with McCourt, a dashing forward, have been engaged. The Guelph men have a lightning forward line, including little "Jukes" Mercer, the trickiest lad of his years in O.H.A. hockey. Here is a chance for local hockey-lovers to see what professional hockey is like. There should be a big crowd at the rink next Thursday.

Lindsay Post: The Stratford Midgets are a speedy septette, but they are not invincible. The Guelph Lyons proved a trifle more adept at the Canadian winter game, than did the Midgets and beat them twice. If the lads from the Farmer City had been as lucky as many other teams they would have been in the finals now, but it got round that Mercer, of last year's Port Hope champions, who played rover for the Lyons, wasn't strictly amateur and he was called before the O.H.A. executive, where he failed to make good.

Port Hope Guide: The above is from the Lindsay Post and we might add that had Guelph been as lucky as Lindsay they would be in the running yet. The O.H.A. made a great plunge in endeavoring to stamp out professionalism, but had the association treated all teams in the same manner they did Guelph there would have been very few teams left. Lindsay shouldn't brag yet, it is a little early.

The big match between Wanderers and Ottawas to-morrow night is exciting as much interest down east as the result of a general election. On form the Wanderers appear to be quite as good as the other fellows, but the Ottawas are practically unbeatable on their own ice. The series will probably end in a tie, and then there will be home and home games, with a barrel of money for both clubs.

Smith's Falls and Berlin intermediates played in Port Hope last night, and the latter won by 4 to 1. The intermediate Dutchmen now look like good things for the championship.

Charles Spittal and Alf. Smith, two Ottawa players charged with assaulting two Wanderer players during a match, were found guilty and fined $20 and $19 costs each.

The dates for the finals in the senior and junior O.H.A. series have been fixed, as follows: Senior—Kingston at Stratford Monday; Stratford at Kingston Friday. Junior—Stratford at Lindsay Monday; Lindsay at Stratford Thursday.

Bill Crowley, of Peterboro, has decided to desert the amateur ranks, and will join the Toronto pro. hockey team.

Jack Winchester, the Pittsburg goal-keeper, has been released for talking out of his turn to Manager McSwiggan.

It is said that the Toronto cup at the O.J.C. meeting will have $5,000 added, making it the richest race ever run in Canada.

The Canadian Amateur Athletic Union has relieved Longboat, the Indian runner, of the suspicion of professionalism.

Kenora Thistles have wired Toronto for another defence man. They want Hugh Lambe or Rowley Young, but it is not at all likely that either player will go West.

Lawrence Solman, of Toronto, has received a cablegram from Edward Durnan, in which the Toronto sculler said he was in fine condition, and confident of defeating Towns in the match to-morrow at Sydney, Australia, for the world's championship.

records, held by himself, up to and including the 1000 yard mark. He covered the latter distance in 13 minutes, 21 3-5 seconds. The former mark was 14.04 seconds.

STILL ANOTHER RAILWAY HORROR

Two Express Messengers Were Burned to Death.

Smith's Falls, Ont., Mar. 1.—(Special.) — A head-on collision occurred on the C. P. R. at Mountain Station at 6 o'clock this morning, No. 6 express, east-bound, which left Smith's Falls at 5 o'clock, crashing into a freight west-bound on the same track.

The crews of both trains jumped and escaped serious injury.

The two engines were telescoped into each other.

The express car and the baggage car were burned, and one freight car was destroyed.

The two express messengers were burned up with their cars. Their names were William Hutchins, of Toronto, and J. J. Nicholson, of Montreal.

The passengers on the express escaped.

Sudden Death Caused By Heart Failure.

Mrs. John Hetherington, who resided on Herchimer avenue, just east of the city limits, died suddenly yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock, from an attack of heart failure. During the day the deceased was about the house, in apparently her usual health, and only complained of feeling ill shortly before she died. Heart disease was given as the cause of death. Mrs. Hetherington was only 29 years of age, and had resided in this vicinity only a short time, having come here from Parkhill. Those who were acquainted with the deceased lady speak in the highest terms of her. She was a daughter-in-law of Mrs. Wm. Watkins, of this city. Deceased was a member of the Anglican Church. A husband but no family survives. The remains will be interred here.

For any disease of the skin we can recommend Chamberlain's Salve. It relieves the itching and burning sensations instantly and soon effects a cure. This salve is also invaluable for sore nipples. To be had at R. Templeton & Co.'s drug store.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

MOVING PICTURES.

The moving picture show in the City Hall last night attracted a fair-sized audience, and those who attended got their money's worth. The moving pictures were good, and the illustrated songs, given by a lady, with guitar accompaniment, pleased the audience.

"THE VOLUNTEER ORGANIST" TO-NIGHT.

A play without a deep-dyed villain, a murder, an old will or a persecuted heroine would, to some people, until they witness "The Volunteer Organist," almost seem like no play at all. But it is in the elimination of all the above mentioned time-worn melodramatic perquisites that lies the strength, the beauty, the success of the piece. Its story is laid mid the hills of Vermont, and its many characters are as true to life as it is possible to make them. That Cambridge folk are warm-hearted and sympathetic has always been supposed, and as the story is gradually told by these generous-hearted New Englanders, it becomes an acknowledged fact. Theatregoers have not had a play offered them since "The Old Homestead" that has caught the public fancy so thoroughly as has this one, which will be seen at the Carman to-night.

Liverpool, Feb. 28.—Liverpool and London cables are steady at 11c to 12½c per lb., dressed weight; refrigerator beef is quoted at 9c to 9½c per lb.

Toronto Live Stock.

Toronto, Feb. 28.—Receipts of live stock at the City Market on Wednesday and Thursday were in the neighborhood of 100 loads. The Grand Trunk figures not being available, we could not give full particulars.

Exporters.

About two loads and one or two lots of 3 in one lot, and 13 in another lot, sold at $4.80 to $5.15 per cwt. There were 3 weighing 1330 lbs., and 3 weighing 1250 lbs. sold by McDonald & Maybee at $5.25 per cwt. for butcher purposes. Export bulls were quoted at $3.75 to $4.25 per cwt.

Butchers.

A few picked lots of good butchers' cattle, 1050 to 1150 lbs. each, sold at $4.50 to $4.75. George Rountree, who bought the largest number of fat cattle, reported the butchers as follows: Best butchers at $4.35 to $4.75; medium to fairly good, $4 to $4.35; medium and good cows, $3.70 to $4; common cows and canners $1.50 to $2.25 per cwt.

Feeders and Stockers.

Charles Zeagman bought 1 load stockers, 700 lbs. each, at $2.90 per cwt.

Milch Cows.

About 60 cows changed hands on Wednesday and Thursday at $30 to $62.50 each. The bulk sold at about $40 to $50 each, and these were high prices, considering the quality.

Veal Calves.

Deliveries were large, over 200 since Tuesday. The market was strong for all of good to choice quality. Prices were quoted from $3 to $7.25 per cwt.; but there was $7.50 per cwt. paid for a few prime new milk fed calves this week, that is calves that sucked the cow.

Hogs.

Mr. Harris reported prices unchanged with a weaker tendency for the market. Selects, $6.90; lights and fats, $6.65 per cwt. for fed and watered.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

East Buffalo, Feb. 28.—Cattle—Receipts, 100 head; steady; prices unchanged.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 2000 head; sheep, active; lambs, slow and 10c lower; lambs, $5 to $7.75; wethers, $5.75 to $6.

New York Live Stock.

New York, Feb. 28.—Beeves—Receipts, 48; nothing doing to-day in live cattle. Feeling steady to strong, with 25 cars expected to-morrow. Dressed beef, steady, with fair demand at 7c to 9c. Exports, 1010 cattle, 1225 sheep and 2850 quarters of beef; none to-morrow.

Calves—Receipts, part late yesterday, 460 head. Veals, generally steady, at yesterday's decline; no barnyard or western calves; all sold. Veals, $5 to $9.50; dressed calves, full steady; city dressed veals, 8c to 14c per lb.; country dressed, firm, 8c to 12½c.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 1445; market very dull and feeling easier; no sales up to noon.

Hogs—Receipts, 2097; market a trifle weak; good medium state hogs, $7.70.

McINTOSH BROS.

OLD FOLKS.

THEIR DAYS MAY BE PROLONGED

How the Evening of Life May be Made Happier For All.

"If people only knew the good that Vinol does old people," said Mr. J. S. McKeown, our well known druggist, "columns of space in our newspapers would be devoted to the subject for the benefit of mankind in general. I can truly say that we have never sold anything in our store equal to Vinol as a strengthener and body-builder for old people.

"You see, with old age comes feebleness and loss of power, the organs act more slowly and less effectually than in youth, the appetite is poor, the digestion weak, and there is not that same renewal of body tissue.

"There is nothing more pitiful to me than to see old people tottering around. I know that Vinol cannot bring back lost years, but it will lengthen life and brighten the years that remain.

"We are hearing from all over the country remarkable results which prove my statement, and we have received letters from sons and daughters of old people telling how father or mother has been made well and happy by the vigor and strength which Vinol brings the old.

"It is just this way," continued Mr. McKeown, "Vinol invigorates the stomach first of all, creates an appetite and enables the stomach to separate from food the elements needed for rich, red blood, healthy body material and sound, steady nerves. In this natural manner it repairs worn tissues, checks the natural decline and replaces weakness with strength.

"For any one suffering from any weakened, run-down condition Vinol will do the same; and it is because we know so well what Vinol will do that we guarantee its action, and we will gladly refund the money paid for it to any one who is not satisfied. I wish every old person in this vicinity would just try Vinol on our guarantee. If it does not satisfy, then it will not cost them a cent." J. S. McKeown, druggist.

TRAGEDY OF WEST.

Man Dies of Frozen Feet, One Kills Himself, Another Is Injured.

Battleford, March 1.—A horrible occurrence has been revealed by the investigations of the police following the rumor of tragedy near Eagle Lake, in the German settlement. A settler named Kuscher had both feet frozen, and while being treated in the house of a neighbor named Ryder went insane through suffering, having no medical attendance. He attacked Ryder while the latter was asleep, and nearly murdered him with an iron bar, beating him so that he will be disfigured for life, although the injuries will not prove fatal. The arrival of neighbors saved Ryder's life, and the maniac was overpowered and bound. He was taken to another house, and his sufferings were so terrible that a man named Stubbert, who was nursing him but dared not free him, also went insane and blew out his brains. Kuscher afterwards also died.

SUFFOCATED BY SMOKE.

One Life Lost In Incendiary Fire In Cleveland, Ohio.

Cleveland, Ohio, March 1.—In a fire believed to have been of incendiary origin the Waldheim & Co. furniture house, a five-storey brick structure, in Ontario street, was destroyed Wednesday night, and John Shafter, asleep in a rooming house, adjoining, was suffocated. The property loss is $150,000. The police are searching for a man said to have been seen in the Waldheim building before the fire.

KICKED BY A HORSE.

English Immigrant In Brockville Hospital In Serious Condition.

Brockville, Ont., Mar. 1.—William Parker, a young English emigrant in the employ of James Chalmers, a farmer of this district, while in the stable feeding the horses, was kicked on the side of the head. His face was badly lacerated and his tongue nearly severed. He was found unconscious, and lies in the hospital in a very critical condition.

Shut Out Emigrants.

London, March 1.—(C. A. P.)—General Booth, in an interview with the British Australasian, before sailing, said: "I offered Australians all the men they wanted, and they shut the door in my face. We do not propose to risk any more flouts and sneers. By the suspicions with which they received me they thought I was going to send them drunks, prisoners, or the refuse of Europe. Australia must be earnest about the matter before we send out emigrants."

Barred From Throne.

Berlin, Mar. 1.—Chancellor Von Buelow presided yesterday at a meeting of the Federal Council, at which it was decided unanimously that under the present circumstances no member of the House of Cumberland will be allowed to succeed to the throne of the Duchy of Brunswick.

Wisconsin Swept by Blizzard.

Superior, Wis., Mar. 1.—Superior yesterday suffered the worst blizzard of the winter, heavy snow being driven by a high wind. Incoming trains are badly delayed.

Typhoid On Battleship.

New York, March 1.—The battleship Connecticut, of whose crew a large number contracted typhoid fever while cruising in West Indian waters, arrived here yesterday. It has been reported that 65 members of the crew were stricken with the disease, and of these 15 were in a critical condition. All of the sick men were landed at the navy yard yesterday, and transferred to the naval hospital there, where preparations have been

BLACK HAND STRIKES

Member Murdered in Free Fight in Saloon.

Italian Slain As An Act of Reprisal For Breach of Confidence—Had Four Bullets In His Body—Room Was Filled With Men—Two Wounded By the Fusillade—Zimmerman and Indorf Were Arrested.

New York, March 1.—One man is dead and two others have serious bullet wounds as a result of a free fight in Curley's saloon at Third Avenue and 117th Street early yesterday. All of those involved were Italians. Michael Gallo, the dead man, is said by the police to have been prominent in the Black Hand Society, and their theory is that his murder was an act of reprisal for a breach of confidence on his part. Louis Indorf, bar tender; Louis Zimmerman, contractor, and Lorenzo Condessa were arrested. Indorf and Zimmerman are wounded. Zimmerman told the police that he had gone to the back room of the saloon with a woman about four o'clock yesterday morning. There were many persons there. Suddenly there was a shot, followed by a regular fusilade, and in a moment the room was so filled with smoke that it was impossible to see anything. When the police reached the place they found Gallo dead with four bullets in the body. Five more bullet holes were found in the walls of the back room. Zimmerman and Indorf were arrested when they went to a nearby hospital to have their wounds dressed.

BUCKET SHOP BROKEN.

American Accused of Swindling Clients In the Northwest.

Winnipeg, March 1.—George D. Woods, president of the Canadian Stock & Grain Co., a prominent member of the Minneapolis and St. Paul bucket-shop fraternity, was arrested last night by Chief of Police McCrea, charged with the theft of $1,000.

J. J. Carrick of Port Arthur alleges that on Feb. 4 he purchased on margin 100 shares of Canadian Copper Co. stock. Recently his account was closed out, presumably for the reason that his margin was exhausted. Investigation has shown that the stock has risen in value from $26 a share to $35. The Canadian Stock & Grain Co., in closing Carrick out, said the stock had gone down to $17 1-2.

The Canadian Stock & Grain Co. opened an office here last September, and has been carrying on an extensive business through the whole of the west, advertising extensively in all parts of the country.

Gilbert Appeal Dismissed.

Ottawa, March 1.—In the supreme court yesterday the appeal in regard to the Northwestern murder cases, Gilbert v. the King, was dismissed.

Food Poisons.

90 PER CENT. OF ALL DISEASES THE RESULT OF UNDIGESTED PUTREFYING FOODS.

Men of affairs, women of society and children with active brains are too often sedentary in their habits, giving little time to exercise. To this evil is added that of high and irregular living—as a result, the stomach cannot stand the demands made upon it, the abused and overtaxed stomach does not properly do the work of digestion, food taken in ferments and the poison permeates the whole system. The body loses in weight and becomes a prey for the attack of whatever disease it may encounter.

Did it ever occur to you how busy that stomach of yours is? It only holds three pints, but in one year you force it to take in 2,400 pounds of material, digest it and prepare it for assimilation into the blood. No wonder it rebels when overworked. We crowd it with steaks and pastry, irritate its juices with spices and acids, and expect the stomach to do its work It can't do it.

All over the inner layer of the stomach are glands which secrete the juices necessary to digestion. The entrance of food into the stomach is the signal for these glands to do their work. The more the food, and the more indigestible, the greater the demand upon them and upon the muscles of the wall adjoining.

Think of the tons of high-seasoned game, sweetmeats and appetizers crammed into this little four-ounce mill, and then wonder, if you will, why you are dizzy or nauseated or constipated. Don't blame your stomach or curse your fate that you should be born so unfortunate. Blame yourself and apply the remedy.

First, get a small package of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, taking one after each meal and at bed time. They are not a medicine, but a digestive. Your stomach is worn out and needs help, not medicine. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will do the work that the stomach fails to do. There's enough power in one grain of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets to digest 3,000 grains of ordinary food, so you needn't fear that anything you eat will remain in your stomach undigested.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will rout the poison because they remove the cause—food fermentation. They are nature's own cure for dyspepsia. The host of troubles dyspepsia is father of cannot be numbered, for a healthy stomach is the source of all health.

Seize your opportunity before worse conditions confront you. Send to-day for a free trial package of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. They will bring your stomach relief. F. A. Stuart Co., 83 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Naval Estimates Presented in British House of Commons.

Construction of New Battleships Will Be Dependent Upon Hague Peace Conference—Three More Vessels of the Dreadnought Type to Be Added—Fleets to Be Re-Distributed—Important Changes.

London, March 1.—A statement of the naval estimates for 1907-8, presented to Parliament last night, introduced quite a novel feature, for it makes the construction of battleships during the coming year dependent in a measure upon the defence reached at the next peace conference held at The Hague.

The new construction, estimated at £40,500,000, against £46,175,000 for 1906-7. Lord Tweedmouth, first Lord of the Admiralty, says, will include two, or unless an understanding between the naval powers is reached at The Hague conference, three large armored vessels of the Dreadnought type.

One was unarmored cruiser, five torpedo boat destroyers, 12 torpedo boats and 12 submarines also are provided for.

On April 1 there will be under construction five battleships, seven armored cruisers, eight torpedo boat destroyers, 17 torpedo boats and 12 submarines.

Big Reduction In the Year.

The estimates for the year show a total reduction of 1,000 men and $5,675,000 as compared with 1906-7.

Lord Tweedmouth comments upon the striking improvement in the gunnery of the fleet compared with last year. The average of hits was practically doubled.

The First Lord of the Admiralty mentions also the highly satisfactory performances of the battleship Dreadnought and the greater efficiency that has resulted from the system of nucleus crews.

As an illustration of this system and the better state of repair emanating from it, he compares the condition of January, 1904, when, out of 60 battleships, 30 were not available, owing to the need of repairs, with that of January, 1907, when out of 51 battleships, only eight were not available.

Redistribution of Fleets.

In dealing with the re-distribution of the fleets, Lord Tweedmouth touched indirectly upon the position of Admiral Lord Beresford. He explained that the home fleet was still in process of development and that some time would elapse before it could reach its full strength.

He said the fleet at home will continue to be combined for war purposes under orders of Lord Beresford, while the Channel, Atlantic and Home fleets will carry out their periodic manoeuvres together under his command.

Lord Tweedmouth said further that the Channel and Atlantic fleets still occupy the principal fighting position, and will in no way be interfered with by the home fleet, except in the event of a totally unforseen outbreak during the absence of the Channel and Atlantic fleets from home waters.

LORD'S DAY ACT HELD UP.

No Prosecutions In British Columbia, Pending Provincial Law.

Victoria, B. C., Mar. 1.—The British Columbia Government has under consideration the question of introducing legislation in connection with the Lord's Day Observance Act, a Federal law, which comes into force to day.

Under the Dominion law, no prosecution can be taken unless authorized by the Provincial Attorney-General, and, pending a decision by the British Columbia Government as to a provincial law, no prosecution for infractions of the federal act will be authorized or assented to.

Italian Shot Himself.

Hamilton, March 1.—Charles McCue, an Italian living at 230 James street north, attempted suicide by shooting himself with a revolver yesterday about noon. He shot himself through the chin, but the bullet did not touch a vital spot. It is said he was under the influence of liquor and was despondent. It is thought he will recover.

Race Horses Burned.

Quebec, March 1.—The Quebec stables owned by Major Ashmead were destroyed by fire Wednesday night and the race horses "Belcourt" and "Senere" perished in the flames. Major Ashmead is absent from the city, being in Ottawa to attend the Governor-General's dinner in commemoration of the battle of Paardeberg.

Four Killed by Dynamite.

Carmi, Ill., Mar. 1.—By an explosion of dynamite yesterday the Rev. J. B. Tittle, his father, his wife and baby were killed, and two children of the family were fatally injured.

Mr. Tittle was a Baptist minister and had the dynamite in his house expecting to use the explosive in blowing out stumps.

New Brunswick Auditor-General Dead.

Fredericton, N. B., March 1.—James S. Beck, Auditor-General of New Brunswick, died early this morning at his home here after a long illness. He was 92 years old, and had been Auditor-General of New Brunswick for the last twenty years. One daughter survives.

Kills Man and Three Women.

Colfax, Ills., Mar. 1.—Thomas Baldwin, a rich farmer and former merchant, yesterday shot and killed Chas. Kennedy and wife, and Mrs. Sim Elsman and daughter, Cora.

Baldwin narrowly escaped lynching. He surrendered to the authorities.

To Protect The Schools.

Minister Of Education Takes Precautions Against Fire.

Premier Whitney Stirs Up the Members—Fire Drill To Be Compulsory In All Schools--To Expropriate Land For Sanatoria—Two-Cent Rate on T. & N. O. Railway—Mining Companies in 1906.

Toronto, March 2.—The appeal of the Prime Minister, Hon. J. P. Whitney, at the close of the sitting on Thursday night for greater activity and less lethargy on the part of the members at the week-end, brought admirable results. A good deal of business was transacted in a short time yesterday. The budget debate goes over till Tuesday, and the order paper was tackled with a vim that surprised the old-time habitues of the House.

The Prime Minister himself is an indefatigable worker and he has the happy faculty of rousing the energies of those about him. "We want no hasty legislation," he declared, "but we want no time wasted." So it was a busy Friday afternoon, despite the fact that the Liberal benches were almost empty.

To Protect the Children.

Hon. Dr. Pyne, the Minister of Education, announced that the Education Department is providing by definite regulations for the prevention of any repetition of the recent terrible Montreal school fire catastrophe in this Province.

Mr. Preston (Brant) drew attention to the disaster in the eastern metropolis and defined its causes as the location of the kindergarten and junior classes on the upper floor of the building, faulty construction, the absence of adequate fire escapes and the neglect of fire drill.

Hon. Dr. Pyne said the matter had already received the consideration of the Department. It was proposed to provide proper protections in all lines in the regulations. At present these did much in the lines desired and excellent results had followed the training in the fire drill. In the schools of Gananoque, Chatham, St. Thomas and Windsor particularly, it had been accomplished with remarkable success, one of the largest schools being cleared of pupils in less than sixty seconds.

Hon. Mr. Whitney expressed his personal gratification at the results achieved. To his mind the fire drill in the schools was one of the most important factors and worth all the fire escapes imaginable.

Sanatoria For Consumptives.

Mr. J. P. Downey (Wellington) introduced a bill amending the act "providing for the erection of municipal sanitoria for consumptives." The act in question makes provision for the expropriation of property for the erection of a sanitarium in cases where two or more municipalities unite for that purpose. By an evident oversight, Mr. Downey pointed out, the same powers are not conferred upon a single municipality entering upon the enterprise. At present municipalities enjoy expropriation privileges for the purposes of isolation hospitals. The object of Mr. Downey's bill, which passed its first reading, is to confer on each single municipality similar powers where it is desired to erect a consumptive hospital.

Two-Cent Rate.

Mr. Pense (Kingston) asked if it was the intention to establish a two-cent per mile passenger rate upon the Temiskaming & Northern Ontario Railway, and to provide for it upon all railways hereafter voted subsidies by the Legislature.

Hon. Dr. Reaume pointed out that the query entailed a matter of Government policy, which would be answered by later declarations.

Gillies' Limit Rights.

In response to an enquiry from Mr. Labrosse (Prescott), Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Lands and Mines, gave some interesting information regarding the Gillies' Limit. The Government had not, he said, received any bona fide offers for the mineral rights in the Limit or any portion of it, nor was it the present intention of the Government to parcel it out and sell or lease it. Neither was it the intention of the Government to open the Limit to prospectors."

Mining Companies In 1906.

Mr. Pearce secured an order of the House for a return showing the number of mining companies incorporated in the year 1906, also total amount paid into the Treasury Department from incorporation of mining companies in 1906, including licenses to companies previously incorporated.

The second reading of a number of local private bills concluded the session.

To Assist Firemen.

Toronto, March 2.—A deputation representing the voluntter firemen of the province waited on Hon. Mr. Matheson yesterday to ask assistance for the establishment of a home for aged and disabled members from among their ranks.

The suggestion was made that the municipalities collect two per cent. on all insurance policies to be devoted to this purpose.

Mr. Matheson pointed out that under the Supplementary Revenue Act the province had only power to collect one-third of one per cent.

PATERSON'S
COUGH DROPS

Bitten by Mad Dog, Deported.

Port Huron, Mich., March 2—Aboud Abraham, aged 28, a Syrian, suffering from hydrophobia, has been deported to Canada by immigration officers at the tunnel. Abraham was bitten by a dog several days ago and his mind has already become affected. He said if he could get to Point Edward, Ont., friends would care for him.

No More Cooking For Troops.

Kingston, March 2.—For the first time in Canada the permanent army service corps will proceed to buy, store, cook and distribute all rations for the garrison at this point. Hitherto, the supplies have been purchased by contracts, and each unit did its own cooking.

FIRE VICTIMS BURIED.

Touching Scene At Funeral of Montreal School Children.

Montreal, March 2.—A touching scene was witnessed [illegible] Hochelaga when ten little coffins were removed to St. Mary's church at noon yesterday for the funeral service over the remains of the victims of the Hochelaga school holocaust.

When the coffins were ranged along in front of the altar they were literally covered with flowers from all sections of the community, from schoolmates and teachers, from citizens of high and low degree, from French and English Canadians alike.

The fact that many of the bereaved parents have been but a short time in Canada, having recently come here from England, gave additional impetus to the desire to prove the sincerity of feeling for them in their affliction.

Thousands of Mourners.

The service was directed by the Rev. Henry Jekell, rector, one of whose children narrowly escaped.

The service was most affecting. An immense throng collected, far greater than could gain admittance to the church. A pathetic picture was the part taken by the little school mates of the deceased. When the funeral cortege of ten hearses left the church for Mount Royal cemetery, there was an escort of 35 police and an immense concourse of people.

THREE YEARS FOR M'INTOSH.

Man Who Posed as J. J. Hill's Representative Goes to Pen.

Hamilton, March 2.—J. A. R. B. McIntosh, the stock broker, who got into the confidence of a number of people by representing himself as the representative of James J. Hill, the railway magnate, and then obtained from them large sums of money to be invested by him in railway stocks, was before Judge Monck yesterday. He pleaded guilty to three charges of obtaining money under false pretences, and was sentenced to three years in the Kingston penitentiary. McIntosh is supposed to have operated in other cities besides Hamilton.

BARMAIDS IN ARMS.

Angry Over Proposed Bill to Stop Their Vocation.

London, March 2.—The thousands of women of all ages who under the name of barmaids tend a large proportion of the saloon and restaurant bars in this country, are angrily excited at the prospect of their occupation being compulsorily closed to women. A bill has been introduced in the House of Commons with the object of making the tending of bars illegal for all women except publicans' wives and daughters, and empowering the authorities to refuse a license unless men only are employed.

Quest For South Pole.

London, March 2.—The Argentine Antarctic ship Uruguay, which left Buenos Ayres, Jan. 29, 1906, has arrived at Scotia Bay, South Orkney Islands, after a perilous voyage, during which she encountered hundreds of icebergs and heavy pack ice, and sustained considerable damage.

The Scotia Bay station was established by the Scottish Antarctic expedition of five years ago, and was

Cash Business

It is scarcely necessary to call attention to the advantages both to buyer and seller of the CASH SYSTEM of doing business which is now so universally recognized in the business world. The merchant who sells his goods for CASH and has the CASH to buy is able to do much better for his customers than those doing a credit business with its necessary losses including office expenses, bad debts, interests, etc. Where an extended credit business is done, those who pay their bills promptly are made to pay for the losses incurred by those who buy goods and fail to pay for them.

It is our intention to adhere firmly to the CASH SYSTEM and we rely on our customers to assist us in carrying out this principle which is so advantageous to both.

Standing as we do directly between the world's largest producers and the consumers, it is our determination to make our service the most efficient to be found in CANADA. This can only be accomplished by buying and selling our goods for prompt CASH.

MR. DOOLEY'S OBSERVATIONS.

"Is it true, Dooley," said Mr. Hennessy, "that ye're thinkin' of applyin' for the job of manager of the gas werruks?"

"Not me," said Mr. Dooley, "jist at prisint I'm too busy gettin' up a petition to the School Board, setting forth why boxing should be included in the curriculim of the Board of Edycashun."

"What's a curriculim?" said Mr. Hennessy.

"It's somethin' ye curry a horse and break a boy's proud spirit wid," said Mr. Dooley. "But talkin' of the gas works, Hinnissy. I'd be glad to see the Gas comity set their feet down harrd and announce in thunder tones that nobody need apply unless he has the goods on him and can show testymonials to the effect that he is as well able to run a gas plant as my neighbor is to run a phonygraph. And thin he must have no frinds, Hinnissy, and be prepared to serve ivirybody alike. If he sees that somebody is burning gas to light his house, and havin' it charged up as cookin' gas, the manager must jump on that man like a thousand of brick."

"Are such thing done in Belleville?" said Mr. Hennessy.

"Av course not," said Mr. Dooley, explosively, "is it crazy ye are, to think of such a thing? But can't a fellow imagine a case, once in a while? To continue, though, Hinnissy, the new manager, to my mind, should be a man of few words and fewer friends. How would I do as manager? I find out that Clancy's gas bill has not been paid whin it should be. Would I ordher his gas shut off and him summoned for not payin? How cud I, whin for years he and I have played forty-five together, and his boy and my gyurl skhate together at the rink? I'm tould that Casey has gas lights in his parlor, which he uses to play the pianny by, and all the time he pays only for cookin' gas. Would I go and find out, whin I know that only lasht month his wife brought over some goose oil for little Patsy's whoopin' cough. 'Tis not human nature Hinnissy, that we should be too harrd on our frinds and neighbors. Anyhow, don't most people think that the civic cow is there to be milked?"

"They seem to," said Mr. Hennessy, "but tell me, who would you get to run the gas works as he'd run his own business?"

"A man wid blood in his eye and an overgrown backbone," said Mr. Dooley, "a man who'd make ivery gas user pay and iviry imployee earn his money; who'd shut off the gas whin the bills weren't paid and who'd show as little mercy to the rich as he did to the poor. Take my worrud for it Hinnissy, wid such a man as that at the head of the gas works ye'd see no more deffycits."

"But ye might have to go out of town to get a man like that," said Mr. Hennessy.

"And why not?" said Mr. Dooley.

Ottawa Journal: Belleville announces that it will engage a qualified manager for its municipal gas plant. Strange that this idea never occurred before.

Railway wrecks are almost as numerous in Canada just now, as drowning accidents in "the good, old summer time."

People of Prince Edward County who live near Rossmore are very much concerned over the report that the post office is to be abolished in the latter village. The present postmaster, we are told, is to leave shortly. A party has been found who is willing to take over the duties, but he, it is said, is not persona grata with the Government because he is a Conservative. The salary mounts up to the princely sum of about $30 a year, but that is not the question. If the post office is abolished about 200 people will be seriously discommoded. Surely the Government will not carry political animus so far as to deprive 200 people of a privilege they are justly entitled to, especially as a reputable man is ready to take the job of postmaster and run the risk of becoming a bloated millionaire by drawing the salary. Let us hope not! Let us hope not!

Being a practical man, ex-Mayor Johnson, in his letter which appears in another column, makes some very practical suggestions in regard to the annual financial statements of our municipal utilities, which, as he points out, the citizens, who own the utilities, have a right to look for. With Mr. Johnson's views everybody may not agree in toto, but no one will deny that he is correct in his remarks re the duties of auditors. Belleville, by the way, seems to be about the only place where financial statements of municipal utilities are not forthcoming when asked for.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

THE TABERNACLE CONCERT.

Pleasing to a degree was the programme given by students of Albert College, assisted by Prof. Hunt and Mr. D. A. Cameron, in the Tabernacle Church last evening. A large audience had assembled when Rev. Geo. Brown assumed the duties of chairman. The programme was as follows:

Organ solo ... ... Prof. V. P. Hunt
Reading — "How Girls Study," Miss M. Stevens.
Songs—(a) "My Gentle Child ...
(b) "May Morning," Miss Mollie Munns.
Violin solo ... ... Miss Ethel Clowes
Reading — "Mince Pies," Miss Ethel Cody.
Piano duett, Misses Terwilligar and Brown.
Songs—"I Know a Lovely Garden," "Parting," "At May Time," Miss Annie Mair.
Organ solo — "Forget - Me - Not," Marcl. .... Prof. Hunt
Reading — "A Second Trial," Miss Helen Pettingill.
Song—"Sing On," Miss Flossie Thorndyke.
Violin Solo ... ... Miss Ethel Clowes
Song—"Good-Bye," Miss Flossie Moon
Reading — Selection from "A Window in Thrums," Miss Jessie Tuite.

After the programme the ladies of the congregation served cake and coffee in the church parlors, a very happy social hour thus ending an enjoyable evening.

"THE VOLUNTEER ORGANIST."

The above attraction drew a good house to the Carman last night, and the performance gave satisfaction. The company is even stronger than before, and the beautiful play received an excellent presentation. "The Palms," as sung by the boy soprano, was loudly applauded. The scenery was good and the cast quite up to requirements. The augmented orchestra last night was by no means one of the least pleasing features, and its playing was appreciated.

"UNCLE JOSH SPRUCEBY."

"Uncle Josh Spruceby," the first of the many rural plays now being presented in the different cities will be seen at the Carman on Friday, March 8. This production is said to be different from all others, as it contains much comedy as well as pathos, and the realistic saw-mill scene is said to be the most exciting and intense effect ever produced. The scenes of the play are laid in Vermont and New York, which gives ample opportunity for portraying the simple rustic characters in country as well as the many incidents that befall the simple country folks that visit the metropolis.

Patronage In Prince Edward County.

A correspondent, who signs himself "Equal Rights," writes from Bloomfield to The Toronto News:

"Being a resident of Prince Edward County, it was with much interest I read what appeared in your columns as regards the dismissal of Sheriff Gillespie, of Picton. I have always been a resident of this county, and, therefore, am well acquainted with past and present conditions. Sheriff Gillespie has always been a partisan of the worst type, and would vote for a dog sooner than he would for a good, fair-minded Conservative. True, he has held office for a good many years. But it was not through his personal popularity, but simply because he has always been a valuable asset to his party at election times. His son, who was Deputy Sheriff, was also an active partizan. Dr. Currie, the member for our county, forgets that it was through the Conservatives he got his scant majority of five. I am a Conservative, but have supported Dr. Currie as a man, not because I upheld the principles he advocated. I do not uphold wholesale dismissal of civil servants for simple party reasons, but do not think Dr. Currie has added any to his laurels by his recent attack for this office-holder's dismissal. The Whitney Government, in its short term of power, have an admirable record, and deserves great credit. And I think have been very lenient, especially in this county, in dismissal of officials. There are others here who deserve the same as Sheriff Gillespie. The people of Prince Edward do not feel nearly so bad over the matter as Dr. Currie leads to believe. Dozens of good, honest Liberals say he has outlived his usefulness, and say it is a wonder he was not dismissed before. The Conservative party have been in the cold shades of Opposition for thirty odd years, and it is high time an occasional one is rewarded. Dr. Currie has twice been elected to honorable position as member of this county. But if I am not much mistaken Prince Edward will send a supporter of the Whitney Administration at next opportunity.

School Salaries.

THEY SHOW UPWARD TENDENCY IN RURAL SCHOOLS.

In the annual report of the Education Department for 1906, just out Hon. Dr. Pyne records his gratification for the interest and enthusiasm evinced both inside and outside of the Legislature by the recent educational reforms.

The Minister states the efforts now being made to reconstruct the educational affairs of Ontario "should be regarded as only the beginning of a movement to raise the standard of efficiency, for there remains much to be done, and further advances will depend in no slight measure upon the co-operation afforded by the people of the province."

Concerning the needs of rural schools, the Minister said: "The objects sought by the legislation of last session should be regarded as a principle from which a backward step must not be taken."

In dealing with the work of the Commission on School Text Books, the Minister states that "action consistent with the information gained will be taken with a view to relieving the parent of unnecessarily high prices for text books, and with the aim of providing better books."

The Minister also states that "it may be necessary to treat the educational problem in all our newer districts on lines somewhat different from those found to be suitably adapted to older Ontario."

Some interesting statistical information is given.

The report shows that in 1905 there were in Ontario 5,798 Public schools 428 Separate schools, 140 High schools and Collegiate Institutes. The pupils number respectively 397,170, 49,324 and 28,661. The expenditures were: On Public schools, $5,524,102; on Separate, $637,134; on High, $1,004,498 making a total of $7,165,734. The total number of teachers was 10,326. A tendency toward increased salaries in rural districts is noted the average for male teachers increasing from $383 in 1904 to $402 in 1905, and for females $294 to $311. This, of course, was before the legislation of last session went into effect.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When the tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

To Owners Of Bad Breath—

FOUL ODOR OF INDIGESTION, SMOKING, EATING OR DRINKING STOPPED AT ONCE WITH STUART'S CHARCOAL LOZENGES

TRIAL PACKAGE TO PROVE IT SENT FREE.

Bilious breathers, onion eaters, indigestion victims, cabbage consumers, smokers, drinkers and those with gas on the stomach are in a class all by themselves, distinguished by a powerful bad breath.

They all breathe, and as they breathe they whiff out odors which makes those standing near turn their heads away in disgust. The pitiable part of it is that these victims do not realize what a sickening thing a bad, offensive breath is to others.

Charcoal is a wonderful absorber of gases and odors. It absorbs 100 times its own volume of gas.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges will put a stop to your bad, offensive breath, and to your belchings, whatever the cause or source, because the charcoal quickly absorbs all noxious, unnatural odors and gases.

If you suffer from indigestion and belch gas as a result, Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges will absorb all the gas and make you stop belching.

If on getting up in the morning you have such a bad, bilious breath that you can almost smell it yourself, Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges will get rid of it for you quickly.

If you have been smoking or chewing, or have been eating onions or other odorous things, Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges will make your breath pure and sweet.

Charcoal is also the best laxative known. You can take a whole boxful and no harm will result. It is a wonderfully easy regulator.

And then, too, it filters your blood —every particle of poison and impurity in your blood is destroyed, and you begin to notice the difference in your face first thing—your clear complexion.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are made from pure willow charcoal, and just a little honey is put in to make them palatable, but not too sweet.

They will work wonders in your stomach, and make you feel fine and fresh. Your blood and breath will be purified. You will feel clean inside.

We want to prove all this to you, so just send for a free sample today. Then after you get it and use it, you will like them so well that you will go to your druggist and get a 25c box of these Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges.

Send us your name and address to-day and we will at once send you by mail a sample package free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 93 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

SPORTING NOTES.

Everybody is pleased to see that we are going to see a cracking good game of hockey before the season closes. Belleville's former stars are indulging in hard practice, and will be in fine form when the bell rings. The three men coming from Cornwall will be as good as there are in the Federal league, and the bunch which plays under Belleville's colors will put down the long end or make the Guelph men let out every link to beat them.

Picton Gazette: The Rev. Mr. Armstrong, President of the Trenton Hockey Club, is a whole host in himself. He met the Picton team at the train, and was as solicitous for their welfare, from the time they reached Trenton until after the match, as though they had been his own boys. Trenton ought to feel proud that a clergyman of Mr. Armstrong's standing takes such an interest in her sports. Such an influence cannot help but elevate manly sports above the ordinary level. Trenton will erect a splendid skating and curling rink combined next season. The plans are being prepared now. Mr. Armstrong is profiting by other towns' experiences, and thinks they will have a model rink.

The Toronto Globe thus talks of a hockey match which took place in that city: "Two free fights, in which the rooters of both teams climbed over the boards and proceeded to mob each other, the players and everything in sight, marked the contest. One player broke a hockey stick over another's head, and just about every man on the ice singled out an opposing player and went for him with his fists. Oh! it was lovely, hockey—all right—and a Methodist Young Men's League, too! If this is the best these Church athletic organizations can do, the sooner they cut hockey off the list, and settle down to cricket and ping-pong, or something where angry passions do not rise, the better."

MARRIAGE LICENSES ISSUED at Intelligencer Office by J. D. Ford. Also at residence, Murney St.

PERSONAL ....AND.... SOCIAL.

Mr. E. E. Thompson, Ann street, leaves on Monday for Chicago.

Mrs. Herbert Morton, of Tweed, is visiting Mrs. Herity, Lewis street.

Mrs. John Milligan, Cedar St., who was visiting her sister in Trenton, has returned home.

Mrs. W. J. Corbett and Master Frank, of Port Hope, are visiting Mrs. Corbett, Charles St.

Mr. Harvey Beattie left for Kingston this morning, rumor says on a very important mission. Mr. Frank Fitzpatrick accompanied him.

Mrs C. W. Taylor, of Buffalo, who was called here owing to the fatal illness of her father, the late Owen R. Weese, has been recalled home owing to her husband's illness. Mrs. Taylor may be doubly afflicted.

For any disease of the skin we can recommend Chamberlain's Salve. It relieves the itching and burning sensations instantly and soon effects a cure. This salve is also invaluable for sore nipples. To be had at R. Templeton & Co.'s drug store.

NO SENSE OF HUMOR.

A Scientist's Criticism of a Comic Book For Children.

Charles Monselet, a Frenchman of letters, published a comic "scientific dictionary" for the benefit of children, who found no little amusement in his odd accounts of things in the animal world which were perfectly familiar to them, but which were described in a rather fantastic way in M. Monselet's book.

The editor of a certain scientific journal, however, was much surprised and shocked at M. Monselet's ignorance when he took up the book, and he wrote an article about it in his paper, which ran as follows:

"A certain M. Monselet has published a dictionary for the use of children, which contains definitions showing the most extraordinary ignorance, such as the following:

"'Sardine—A little fish without any head which lives in oil.'

"As if a fish could live without a head and in oil!

"Another definition:

"'Parrot—A bird somewhat resembling the pigeon, generally green when it is not red or yellow or blue. Cockatoos sometimes live to be a hundred years old, except when they are stuffed, and then there is no limit to the length of their life.'

"Now, it happens that the parrot is not a pigeon at all and never has the colors that M. Monselet gives to him, and, in short, this M. Monselet knows no more of natural history than he has grains of common sense."

THE MALE OPERA HAT.

Why It Rises Superior to Any Passing Fashion Dictates.

Men generally protest against the changes of style in hats, and one of the sex has written to the New York Mail this complaint:

Why attack as a "collapsible, many named pretender" the opera hat, or chapeau de claque?

I have such a hat and also a silk hat, in which respect I think I differ from most Gothamites. Whenever I have an option I wear the opera rather than the other. It's more convenient.

At the theater or opera you can carry it better on your between the acts promenades. If there is no rack for your hat under the seat you can tuck it in your overcoat and put it on the floor under you without destroying it, as you would do with a silk hat.

If you put your hat in the rack under your seat and then rise and stand close to it to permit a late comer to pass an opera hat suffers no damage. A silk hat would be either ruffled or crushed.

The opera hat looks as well at all times as the silk hat and requires much less care. Indeed, I think it looks better. The glossy surface of a silk hat, like the glossy bosom of a stiff white shirt, is an uncomfortable survival of the time when men wore polished helmets and breastplates.

There is so much reason in the opera hat that men of discrimination will continue to wear it, the style of the moment regardless.

A Dog Habit.

Have you ever thought why it is that a dog turns around and around when he jumps up on his cushion or starts to settle himself anywhere for a nap? Now that you are reminded you can recall that you have seen a dog do it many times, can't you? This habit is about all that is left to our tame little doggies of the days long ago, when they were a race of wild animals and lived in the woods. Their beds then were matted grass and leaves, and it was to trample enough grass and properly arrange the leaves that the dog always trod around a narrow circle before he would lie down. The dog of today keeps up the same old habit, although there is no longer any need for it, and of course the animal has no notion why he does it.

A Bond of Sympathy.

While the new maid tidied the room the busy woman kept on writing.

"Do you make that all out of your own head?" asked Jane.

"Yes," said the busy woman.

"My," said Jane admiringly, "you must have brains!"

"Brains!" sighed the woman despondently. "Oh, Jane, I haven't an ounce of brains."

For a moment Jane regarded her with sincere commiseration.

"Oh, well," she said presently, "don't mind what I say. I ain't very smart myself."

Similarity of Writing.

"From my pile of autographs I take one of a statesman well known and lay it side by side with the autographs of a great author and a great ecclesiastic," writes a British publicist. "All three are very small, exquisitely neat, very little slanted, absolutely legible. Well as I knew the three writers, I doubt if I could tell which wrote which. They were Cardinal Manning, Mr. Froude and Lord Rosebery. Will the experts tell me if in this case similarity of writing bodied forth similarity of gifts or qualities?"

Matrimonial.

Three Germans were sitting at luncheon recently and were overheard discussing the second marriage of a mutual friend when one of them remarked:

"I'll tell you vhat. A man vhat marries de second time don't deserve to have lost his first vhife."

BLAZE AT WOODSTOCK, N. B.

Flames Threaten to Wipe Out the the Whole Town.

Woodstock, N. B., March 2.—Fire, which broke out last night, has already destroyed a dozen of the largest business establishments here, including the New Brunswick telephone exchange.

The flames, fanned by a high wind, threaten to wipe out the greater part of the town.

The Carlyle House, the large hotel, is in the path of the fire and is in great danger, as also is the new postoffice.

ESTIMATES FOR BUILDINGS.

Railway Companies and Their Employes May Be In Labor Bill.

Ottawa, March 2.—The House was quite industrious, and after spending all afternoon in committee upon Mr. Lemieux's labor bill, this evening, went promptly into supply. The bill is now to be reprinted so as to include amendments, and will come up again on Wednesday. The Minister is undecided as to whether he will include railway companies and their employes. The sections which forbade a strike against the open shop were dropped. The arbitrators, where any, appointed under the act, must be British subjects, but they are not required to reside in Canada.

Public Buildings.

This evening Mr. Fisher, as acting Minister of Public Works, presented a number of estimates dealing mainly with public buildings and repairs thereon. The Galt postoffice, the Guelph armory, the Hamilton drill hall, and the postoffice, barracks and custom house at Toronto were among the items under consideration.

W. F. Maclean (South York) asked if the Government intended to dispose of the present custom house at Toronto. Mr. Fisher was unable to answer.

The New Barracks.

An item of $150,000, for the new barracks for the permanent corps at Toronto, led to some discussion. W. F. Maclean insisted upon knowing what the Government proposed to do in this matter, and why there had been such delay. Mr. Fisher stated in substance that the original scheme called for a number of buildings at an aggregate cost of $1,000,000. It was now hoped to reduce the cost. Plans were under way, and he hoped that two or three of the buildings would be commenced this spring.

Too Many Accidents.

Mr. W. F. Maclean drew attention to the large number of accidents that are happening to-day in Canada and all over the continent of America.

"The matter has become so serious that I think it demands the immediate attention of Parliament.

"It seems to me that the great railway corporations of this country are devoting too much attention to the expenses of their systems rather than to the operation of their systems to the satisfaction of the public.

"I take this occasion of calling the attention of Parliament to the matter by reason of another accident that has

TIMELY TOPICS.

THEY'VE GIVEN PA A RAISE.

(Chicago Record-Herald.)

Say, you ought to hear ma singin'—
she's as happy as a lark,
And her smile stays on from mornin' till a long time after dark;
She's been buyin' rugs and gettin' a new, costly switch to wear,
And she takes a cab whenever she goes callin' anywhere;
She has bought herself a dimund, and you ought to see it blaze,
Ma's as cheerful as a robin — they have given pa a raise.

Sister's busy gettin' dresses that'll cost an awful pile,
And the hats that she's been buyin'
are the very latest style;
She's to go abroad this summer with some people named the Cooks;
Is she happy? Well, I guess so! You can see it by her looks;
She goes hummin' songs and dancin'
and in forty thousand ways
Lets us know that she is cheerful since they've given pa a raise.

Pa still works the same as ever, and he's smokin' stogies yet;
Wears the suit he got last summer,
and I guess he's still in debt;
Anyway, he starts off early, and comes home fagged out at night,
And his forehead's gettin' wrinkled and his hair is turnin' white;
Can't, somehow, help feelin' sorry as
I sit and watch him gaze,
With a vacant look at nothin', Yes,
they've given pa a raise.

In a household where a child is asked to wipe the dishes, she will say that it is her sister's work, and will refuse. Likewise, her sister when asked to perform a certain duty, will complain that it is not her work. It is unfortunately true, says the Atchison Globe, that the habit of turning down a task because it is the work of some one else, also prevails in business houses. And when a clerk in a business house refuses to do a certain thing because it is the duty of another clerk, it means he will never climb any higher. There are certain marks which are as plain to read as a signboard.

The earth could be dropped into it without materially altering its appearance. Sun-spots are usually connected with unusual electrical disturbances on the earth. Photographs of them show that they are something like vast whirlpools of flaming gas. No satisfactory cause has ever been offered for their occurrence.

The New York City Bureau of Weights and Measures in its latest report makes some surprising disclosures, as far as rascality is concerned; but perhaps not very surprising to persons who have ever given the matter serious thoughts, says a U. S. paper. The report says that coal dealers were found to be swindling the public on the largest scale of any; that out of 958 tests, seventy-eight dealers were found to be giving short weights in amounts from fifty pounds to seventy-two pounds in the ton and almost every scale in Richmond and Brooklyn was found to be out of balance. This is a very serious matter to the consumers, the great majority of whom purchase their coal in small quantities. In a summary the report says that about one iceman out of three, one butcher out of nine, and one fish dealer out of ten were giving short weight. Wonder if the statement recently made, that there are ten thousand crooks on the streets of the metropolis, included the vast army who are daily swindling the public by giving short weight?

ABRAHAM PLEADING FOR SODOM —GOLDEN TEXT: "MEN OUGHT ALWAYS TO PRAY AND NOT TO FAINT."

March 3—Gen. 18; 16—33.

16. Abraham went with them. The Oriental way of "speeding the parting guests."

17. Shall I hide from Abraham. Abraham was so true to God that it was safe to let him into his plans.

21, I will go down now, and see. The angels in their human form went to visit Sodom, a realistic expression of the fact that God knows.

He found Abraham sitting in his tent door among "The Oaks." The three unknown strangers were welcomed with gracious hospitality. "Abraham supposed these strangers to be men, but his course toward them was such that he had no reason for regret when he found they were angels. That is a good way of treating everybody whom we encounter, so that if they should turn out to be angels they would have no reason to complain of us, and we nothing to be sorry for in our treatment of them." "Be not forgetful to entertain strangers, for thereby some have entertained angels unawares." (Heb. 13: 2).

He found Lot a good man, but imperfect, and on a lower level than Abraham. He had religion enough to make him sad and depressed, but not enough to inspire him to a valiant crusade against wrong and joy in victory even at the cost of his life. Yet Lot was a kind of hero, in that he did not fall into the moral slime pits of his neighbors.

"Lot, Peter tells us, that righteous man, vexed his righteous soul day by day. The fact that the verb is in the active rather than in the passive voice is worthy of note. The statement is not that the wickedness of Sodom distressed him merely. The expression, whether or not the facts warranted it, is stronger. We are told that he vexed his righteous soul over the wickedness of that wicked city; i.e., that he made himself uncomfortable, if not miserable, by contemplating its want, wretchedness and sin. He could not be indifferent to what he saw and heard. He was too good a man for that. Because he was righteous his soul was troubled."

He found Sodom reeking in wickedness (v. 20), because their sin is very grievous, and the cry of them is waxen great before the face of the Lord. The slime pits of the country were a type of the moral condition of the city. Its wickedness became proverbial. (Lam. 4: 6, Isa. 3: 9; Matt. 10:15; comp. Jude 7: 2 Pet. 2: 6).

22. And the men turned their faces from thence. Two of the three strangers to investigate the wickedness of Sodom. This is said to show in vivid colors that God never punishes rashly or unjustly. Abraham stood yet before the Lord in the person of the third angel.

23. And Abraham drew near in bodily presence and in spiritual nearness, in holy fervency. Wilt thou also destroy the righteous with the wicked? Abraham seems to feel that the only way to save the righteous was to save the wicked. And for the most part good and evil men are so intimately connected that misfortunes which overtake the one involve the other.

24. Peradventure there be fifty righteous. Abraham knew Lot was in the city, and he could not help hoping that therefore there must be more. Had Lot's influence been in vain.?

25. Shall not the Judge of all the earth do right? Implying that of course God would do right, although Abraham might not see how. But it was an appeal to God to vindicate his character, and show clearly that what he does is right. The same question still troubles men. Good and bad are often involved in the same catastrophe. The same storm that overwhelms a pirate ship wrecks the Morning Star of the missionaries. And yet more certain than the sun in its course is the justice and righteousness of God in all he does. God has no motive for doing injustice to any. There are many things that perplex us now, as they perplexed Job, but if we knew all, if we could see the hidden counsels of God, we would see that our God always does right.

26. If . . . fifty righteous . . . I will spare all the place for their sakes. Why? Because fifty men with a living, active piety and zeal could so improve the city morals and character that it would not be necessary to destroy the city to prevent it from infecting the whole region with its deadly vices.

had been a prayer—his example, his prosperity in peace and righteousness, his heroism, his generosity, all sustained by prayer, gave power to his plea for Sodom at this time. The way to save the country is by earnest prayer and the use of means. If the whole body of good people prayed as earnestly as Abraham for Sodom we would not need to exclude foreigners, but to evangelize them; and we would break the power of intemperance.

Destruction of the Cities of the Plain—Abraham was at Hebron, an equal distance, about 30 miles, from either end of the Dead Sea.

There is a division of opinion as to whether Sodom was situated at the northern end of the Dead Sea, or at the southern. Anciently the opinion was almost unanimous that the place was the shallow bay of the southern end, now covered by water. "In this awful hollow, this bit of the infernal regions come up to the surface, this hell with the sun shining into it, primitive man laid the scene of God's most terrible judgment on human sin." A few years ago the tendency was to place Sodom in the Ghor at the northern end of the Dead Sea, around the mouth of the Jordan. The modern tendency is to return to the first view, at the southern end.

Saved Baby's Life

There are many mothers throughout Canada who do not hesitate to say that Baby's Own Tablets have saved the lives of their little ones. One of these is Mrs. John Shortill, Georgetown, Ont., who says: "I have no hesitation in saying that I believe that Baby's Own Tablets saved my little girl's life. From the time my little girl was three months' old she cried all the time with indigestion. She was frail and puny; her food did her no good, and I was literally worn out taking care of her. The doctor treated her for some time, and finally told us he could do no more for her, and we did not expect she would get better. It was then I learned of Baby's Own Tablets and decided to try them. Before I had given her a box of the Tablets there was a great improvement. Her digestion was much improved, and her bowels, which had been terribly constipated, moved regularly. From that time she began to thrive splendidly, and is now as healthy a child as you could wish to see. We are now never without a box of the Tablets in the house. Baby's Own Tablets will promptly cure all the minor ailments of babies and young children, and the mother has the guarantee of a Government analyst that this medicine contains no opiate or harmful drug. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

SILVER BIRD.

About eighteen months ago there were several Cobalt companies organized, and their shares offered for subscription in Cobalt and near-by towns. Many of the laborers, clerks and other wage-earners, being on the ground, manifested their faith in the camp by placing their earnings in sums varying from $100.00 to $1,000.00 in these shares. There is not a single exception known where these shares have not advanced from 100 to 10 times the first price. This seems almost like a fairy tale, but it is the truth. There are many men who can be seen every day walking about the uneven streets of Cobalt who eighteen months ago were known as common day laborers, working for $2.00 per day, who are now actually worth from $50,000.00 to $100,000.00, all gained from pinning their faith in Cobalt and placing their savings in Cobalt mining stocks.

We are now offering for public subscription the first allotment of 200,000 shares at the low price of 15 cents per share. Now, just think of it! Compare this price with the price of the Colonial, only a stone's throw away, now selling at $3.50 to $4.00 per share, at a valuation of about four million dollars. Compare it also with the stock of the Right of Way, selling at from $7.00 to $8.00 per share. If the O'Brien mine was an incorporated Company to-day and offered for sale its stock would undoubtedly bring on the open market $10.00 to $12.00 per share on the capital of a million and a half. We have been informed from a trustworthy source that the ore blocked out and in sight in the Timmins mine is estimated at from $10,000,000 to $15,000,000. We venture to say that if this property were incorporated for $10,000,000 and placed upon the market, it would sell for $2.00 per share. It should be understood that we are in no way endeavoring to depreciate the values of the Colonial, Right of Way, O'Brien or Timmins stocks or properties, for, indeed, we believe they would be bargains at those prices and valuations. We are only endeavoring to show that Silver Bird, which is located in close proximity to these mines, is at

15 CENTS PER SHARE

In comparison with those valuable properties, positively the greatest and best purchase that has ever been offered in the Cobalt camp.

The safest and best purchase in the whole Cobalt camp to-day, considering capitalization, location, work done, results obtained, and price of the stock. There has never been a stock offered in the Cobalt district, from the opening up of the camp to the present day, that could compare with it when taking these points into consideration. Silver Bird is situated directly in the centre of the most active operations, and is surrounded by some of the most wonderful producing siver mines the word has ever known.

One of the highest recommendations for the shares of Silver Bird is the fact that the investors at Cobalt and Haileybury are buying heavily of these shares. Within the last several days we have received orders from investors in that section for more than 40,000 shares. The employees of the Nipissing, the O'Brien and the Red Rock are buying these shares.

Silver Bird is situated between and close to these mines, and these miners should know what they are buying.

Now, just consider for a moment! Here are men right on the ground, employed on the properties that surround and are in the immediate vicinity of Silver Bird, placing their money in these shares at the present market price—15 cents. THESE MEN ARE MINERS. They know the property. They can see Silver Bird every day. They are in a position to know whether these shares are a bargain or not. It is no trouble to see the property, as it is only about 15 to 20 minutes' walk from the railway station or postoffice at Cobalt to the Silver Bird mine.

Many people are visiting the property, and we do not know of one exception where they have not purchased these shares after once examining Silver Bird.

Just recently a gentleman claiming to be a mining engineer and mineralogist came into our office, stating he was just from Cobalt and had made an examination of Silver Bird Property. He placed his order for 20,000 shares for himself and friends. This speaks for itself!

Now, a word to investors: Buy the shares of Silver Bird at the present first allotment price of 15 cents. Buy all you can of these shares. Place your faith in the most wonderful mining district the world has ever known. Back it up with all the money that you can see your way clear to invest. You will never regret it, but will always rejoice.

WATCH Silver Bird.

Silver Bird will be paying dividends equal to its present purchase price within the next year on every share of its stock.

Invest your money in Silver Bird, the greatest bargain that has ever been offered in the Cobalt camp.

FACTS

We have been asked by brokers and mining men who are interested in properties at Cobalt: Why do you sell Silver Bird at 15 cents? It looks to us too cheap; you might as well sell it at 30 or 40 cents; it would sell just as fast, and would not be too high. Our answer to all has been: We are strongly recommending Silver Bird as the best investment that has been offered in the Cobalt camp. We are saying to our friends and clients: It is worth more money; it is sure to advance, etc.

We want to be able to meet these friends and clients of ours in six months face to face; we want them to smile and give us the glad hand. We want them to say to us: "You gave us the right advice on Silver Bird; you have made us some money." "We want you to do all our brokerage business."

That is why we are selling Silver Bird at 15 cents, and the reason it is meeting with such a big sale is the more Silver Bird is investigated the more evident it becomes to investors that we are not misrepresenting, but giving them

This map shows the operating and working mines in the most active portions of Coleman, Buck and Lorraine Townships. While the lot and concession lines are not marked, the shaft houses indicate most accurately the exact location of the working mines. The map is drawn on the same scale and in accordance with the official map of the Cobalt district. Silver Bird will be found in the centre of the map. There are other mines North, South and West, which do not show on this map, our purpose being to show the location of Silver Bird and other properties surrounding and adjacent thereto.

SILVER BIRD is surrounded by the greatest producing mines in the Cobalt District.

SILBER BIRD is absolutely inside property, consisting of twenty acres (patented), being the west half of the north-east quarter of the north half of lot 3, concession 6, Coleman.

SILVER BIRD is a mine in full operation, with two 25 h. p. boilers, steam hoist, steam drills and all machinery and buildings necessary to complete an operating mine.

SILVER BIRD is working two shifts and is in full operation both day and night, sinking upon three veins and in the same formations identically as in the O'Brien, Timmins and Right of Way mines, and lying immediately between these mines and the Green-Meehan, Red Rock, Cobalt Contact and Nipissing Extension. The veins are broadening out and increasing in values, with depth now 40 ft. in shaft.

SILVER BIRD has no indebtedness; there are no incumbrances against the property or stock of the company. The capitalization of THE SILVER BIRD COBALT MINES, LIMITED, is but $1,500,000, par value of the shares $1.00 each, fully paid and non-assessable, with 500,000 shares in the treasury. The first allotment of 200,000 shares are now offered to the public for subscription at 15 CENTS PER SHARE.

Considering the inside location of the property, development done, results obtained, low capitalization and the large amount of shares in the treasury, this is unquestionably one of the best bargains (if not the greatest bargain) that has been offered in Cobalt mining shares.

We predict this first allotment will be largely over-subscribed, and we urge that early application be made.

To guard against over-issue and to guarantee to investors the genuineness of the certificates when issued—also the prompt and safe delivery of same—arrangements have been made with the Trusts & Guarantee Company, Limited, 14 King street west, Toronto, to act as Transfer Agents and Registrars.

Orders may be telephoned or telegraphed direct to Law & Co., Traders' Bank building, at the expense of Law & Co. Applications and remittances, however, should follow by mail direct to the Trusts & Guarantee Company, Limited, 14 King street west, Toronto.

Within the past year you could have purchased Silver Queen at 80 cents, and that if you had done so you could now sell it at $2.10?

Don't you remember that you could have bought Buffalo within the past year at $1.00, and if you had a few shares of it to-day you could sell it at $3.50 per share without any trouble?

And now, again, don't you remember the Temiskaming & Hudson Bay Company offering their shares at 40 cents and begging the dear public to take it? Perhaps you didn't buy any of it, but if you did you could get $200.00 to-day for every 40 cents that you put into it?

Now, again, it has only been some two or three months since you could have bought Nancy Helen at $1.00. Perhaps you have some of it. If you have you can get $2.50 per share for it to-day.

Less than one year ago you could have got Nipissing at $4 per share, and if you had it to-day you could get $12.00 per share.

The same can be said of the Colonial, the Right of Way and other shares. If you had bought them at their first issue you could sell them to-day at from 300 to 700 per cent. advance.

If you have not got any of these stocks referred to above, perhaps it is because some wise friend or neighbor advised you not to buy. Perhaps you went to some good and wise friend and said, "What do you think about buying this stock or that stock?" Perhaps he said to you, "Well, I don't know about this Cobalt proposition; there may or may not be silver up there. If I were you I would not buy."

Now, are you going to go to your friend again and ask him whether you shall buy some of the first issue of Silver Bird at 15 cents per share, or are you going to back your own judgment? Here is the cheapest and best buy that was ever offered in the camp, and at the first issue price of 15 cents per share—inside property as much so as were any of these other companies of which we have written at the time they were placed upon the market.

Use your own judgment. Be your own money-maker. Don't discount your own business ability. Your own judgment will tell you that Silver Bird is a purchase. Look at the map and see where it is. Your own judgment will tell you it is bound to advance in price. Why hesitate longer? Why not get in on the ground floor and make some money? The first allotment of 200,000 shares is not going to last forever, the way it is going. The best evidence as to whether Silver Bird is a bargain or not is the fact that we are receiving many reservations from Cobalt.

We want to call to your mind this fact: If you had placed $500 in Temiskaming & Hudson Bay at its first issue price of 40 cents per share you would now have the neat little fortune of $250,000 at the present market value, and still, if you had bought $500 worth of this stock at 40 cents per share, perhaps your legal adviser or your kind, wise neighbor or friend would have laughed at you at the time you purchased it, and told you you had thrown your money away. Now, don't understand us as inferring that by putting $500 into Silver Bird it will be worth $250,000 within the next year. We don't mean to say that. Of course, it is possible, but we don't claim it will positively do it. We are only drawing an example of how foolish it is for one man who thinks an investment is a good one asking another man, who knows nothing at all about the investment whatever, whether he thinks it would be well for him to make the investment. We know from personal knowledge that many investors have been kept from investing in the first issues of Cobalt stocks, and who would have made thousands of dollars simply because some one else advised them to keep out of it. We claim that the greatest profits are made by investing when the first issues are first placed upon the market. Now is the accepted time and the golden opportunity in Silver Bird. We firmly believe that Silver Bird will sell in the open market within the next six months at a dollar a share or more. We have come to this conclusion after having had the property thoroughly examined by competent and able mining men of years of experience. Silver Bird will never sell a penny less than it is offered to-day.

We have mentioned the great advances that occurred in Temiskaming & Hudson Bay, in the Nancy Helen, McKinley-Darragh, Silver Queen and the Buffalo. We want to call your attention to the fact that Silver Bird is not as far away from the original discovery made by La Rose, on the railway at the point known as the Timmins mine, as these properties are. Let us again call your attention to the fact that Silver Bird is on a direct line with these properties and other properties that have developed far beyond the Silver Bird.

There is no question about it! This is one of the greatest opportunities, taking everything into consideration, that has ever been offered in the Cobalt camp.

Don't get the foolish idea that there is going to be any permanent depreciation in Cobalt mining shares or properties. Cobalt is only in its infancy. Within the present year Cobalt is going to see the greatest boom it ever had—for that matter the greatest boom that has ever occurred in mining shares on the American continent. Every indication points to this; besides, the development and production justify this assertion. The deeper the shafts are sunk the richer the ore becomes. The older the camp the further the developments are spread out from the original discovery.

We believe that NOW IS THE TIME TO MAKE MONEY IN COBALT, and within the coming year our judgment will be fully carried out in this respect.

Gray's Masterpiece.

The manuscript of Gray's "Elegy" remained in the author's hands seven years, receiving touches here and there, and would not have been printed then had not a copy loaned to a friend been printed.

Modern Greek.

Modern Greek as taught in the schools of Athens is so much like the old language of 2,000 years ago that any one who can understand the Alexandrine Greek of the gospels can read the new Greek gospels as they are read in the churches and can understand a great deal of the modern Greek newspapers.

Tea.

Tea was cultivated in China 2,700 years before the Christian era.

Cape Colony Forestry.

The institution of a forest department in Cape Colony dates from 1881. Since that time three-quarters of a million pounds have been expended, and the staff now numbers no less than 110 conservators and foresters.

Laura Bridgeman.

Laura Bridgeman was the most remarkable example of the patience and tact requisite in the education of blind and deaf mutes. It is said that at the beginning of her mental training one lesson was given her over 500 times before she finally comprehended it.

Oyster Epicures.

The ancient Romans were great oyster epicures. They ate the bivalves in immense numbers and were able to tell with eyes closed just what coast they came from.

Frog Leather.

The thinnest and, comparatively speaking, the toughest of all leathers is frogskin.

Russian Church Treasures.

The treasures of the various Russian churches are of fabulous value. St. Isaac's cathedral in St. Petersburg is said to have cost $50,000,000. Its copper roof is overlaid with pure gold. In the Cathedral of Kazan the name of the Almighty blazes in diamonds from a cloud of beaten gold under which are solid silver doors twenty feet high.

Weighing Names.

Scales are now constructed so delicately that a pencil signature written on a piece of paper can be weighed.

Cups and Saucers.

Cups and saucers are now all molded by mechanical appliances. The glaze is laid on, the finer qualities are hand painted and the cheaper are stamped with stencils ere the baking is done.

THE STOLEN HORSE.

An Old Proverb With a New Application.

The woods are full of "so-called" remedies for Baldness.

You may call anything in creation a remedy, but to use them is like locking the stable after the horse is stolen.

Baldness and Dandruff are caused by a germ—if you don't kill the germ the germ will kill the hair.

Scientists have labored with the problem of a preventative for Baldness for many years.

Newbro's Herpicide is the product of a modern idea, and will cure Dandruff and prevent Baldness because germs cannot exist when you apply Herpicide.

Herpicide is a valuable hair dressing and scalp disinfectant as well as a cure for Dandruff.

Bricks.

A thousand bricks closely packed together occupy fifty-six cubic feet.

The Scotch Fir.

The Scotch fir yields its timber for making fences and props for coal pits, but its leaves also produce an oil which is used as an inhalation in consumption and as a liniment in rheumatism.

Russian Peasants' Huts.

Nine-tenths of the peasants in Russia live in huts without floors and too low for a tall man to stand in.

The Vampire.

Vampire, or vampyre, was a name given to an imaginary demon which, it was pretended, sucked the blood of persons during the night and thereby destroyed them. These vampires were supposed to animate the bodies found fresh, florid and full of blood.

Whist.

It is thought that the game of whist was first played in the time of King Henry VIII. of England.

The Buddhist Hades.

Buddhists believe that hades is a place of eight divisions, each with a form of punishment somewhat different from the other seven. In the first division, which is the easiest, the sinner walks eternally in his bare feet over redhot needles, points upward.

Scotch Homespuns.

The reason why Scotch homespuns are so beautiful is said to be that they are dyed with seaweed from the wild coasts of Scotland, the tints thus secured being unattainable in any other way.

Mensuration.

The invention of mensuration and surveying is attributed by some writers to Egyptians, the annual overflow of the Nile carrying away landmarks and boundaries of the arable fields, necessitating surveys and the redrawing of boundary lines.

Scalp Wash.

A good scalp wash is made by beating a teaspoonful of liquid green soap with a raw egg and a teaspoonful of water. Wet the head and then massage the wash over it. Rinse in clear water.

Cloth Buttons.

Cloth buttons are machine made, a very intricate piece of mechanism stamping the metal, then cutting the cloth, placing it in position, drawing it over the button and putting the cap in place, leaving a projecting portion of cloth in the center for the thread.

His Horse Made Him King.

Darius was made king of the Persians by the act of his horse. The nobles having disagreed as to who should be king, it was concluded that all should assemble at a certain spot and the rider of the horse which first neighed should be monarch, and the horse of Darius gave him the victory.

Falling Soot.

The falling soot from a chimney is a tolerably sure indication of approaching bad weather.

Cornstarch In Greece.

In Greece, for some reason, climatic or other, it seems absolutely impossible to utilize cornstarch in the manufacture of cambrics and other textiles, although many trials have been made during several years past, as the spindles, especially in the case of colored textiles, clog.

Our Coined Currency.

The first coined currency made in this country was manufactured in 1652. The machinery was sent from England to Massachusetts, and pieces of the value of 1 shilling, sixpence and threepence were made.

Wheat Varieties.

There are 322 varieties of wheat which have a botanical difference from each other, and a great many others whose differences are mostly in the name.

The Russian Peasants.

The Russian peasantry are extraordinarily superstitious. One of the ideas which is received by them almost as an article of belief is that every house is inhabited by a damovoy, or spirit, who expresses his approval or otherwise of the inmates soon after they come into occupation.

Our First Fire Engine.

The first fire engine used in this country was brought from England to New York in 1731.

COFFIN WOOD MINES.

The Chinaman Digs For Wood Prized For Burial Caskets.

There exists no object which the average Chinaman exhibits more regard for than the narrow box which is destined to contain all that is mortal of him. He is never happy until it is in his possession. It occupies a conspicuous position in his house, and the richer he is the more he expends on its acquisition and adornment.

The coffins most esteemed by the Celestials are manufactured from a peculiar resinous wood, possessing quite extraordinary preservative properties and found only in one small district in Tonquin, buried in the earth, no living specimens of the tree now being in existence.

The natives search for it quite as eagerly as elsewhere gold and precious stones are run after, and, indeed, the deposits, for such they are, are to all intents and purposes mines of wood, the origin of which has never been satisfactorily explained.

Local legends have it that in a far distant past vast numbers of these trees existed in the dense forests with which the whole region was covered and that as a result of some tremendous cataclysm they were uprooted and precipitated into the ravines. Whether this account is true or not, the buried trees are today a source of quite considerable wealth to the lucky person who finds them. For a coffin made of this special wood a Chinaman does not consider £50 or £60 at all too high a price to pay.

TRADES THAT CURE ILLS.

If You Want to Drive Away Disease, Turn Shepherd.

"Oil workers are never bald," said a druggist. "Visit our oil regions or those of Russia. Examine the workmen's hair. It is soft and thick and glossy, for petroleum cures incipient baldness, and if your hair is thinning rub some in. Never mind the smell. It will do you good.

"Shepherds enjoy remarkable health. The odd odor of a sheep seems to drive away disease. Sheep are especially good for whooping cough. In the sheep country when a child takes the whooping cough it is the custom for the mother to put it to play among the sheep, and the next day it is well.

"The men and women who work among lavender, gathering it or distilling it, never have neuralgia or nervous headache. Lavender, moreover, is as good as a sea voyage for giving tone to the system. Run down persons often work for nothing in lavender plants in order to build themselves up.

"Salt miners can wear summer clothes in blizzard weather without fear of catching cold, for colds are unknown among salt workers. Breweries and tanneries and printing ink factories bar out consumption. Turpentine works and ropewalks bar out rheumatism. Copper mines bar out typhoid."

When Chloroform Was New.

Here is a curious little story about Sir James Simpson, the man who introduced the use of chloroform into surgery, and a peril which he escaped, as recorded by Lyon Playfair. Simpson when busy with his researches into the subject of anaesthetics called one day on Playfair and asked if he had anything new likely to produce anaesthesia. Playfair had just prepared a liquid which seemed worthy of trial. Simpson, who knew no fear, prepared instantly to test it on himself. This Playfair refused to allow until it had first been tried on rabbits. Two were procured and placed under the effects of the anaesthetic. Next day Simpson proposed to try it on himself. "We might as well see how the rabbits have fared," said Playfair. They found both the animals dead.

The Christian Sunday.

The keeping of Sunday, the first day of the week, as a sacred day in memory of the resurrection and of the descent of the Holy Ghost dates from the beginning of Christianity. It was called the Lord's day in all the churches, but gradually acquired the name of Sun-day from the Romans, who called the first day of the week dies solis, or day sacred to the sun. The first official recognition of Sunday as a holy day is in an edict of the Roman Emperor Constantine in 321 ordering that all work should cease in the cities "on the venerable Sunday," but permitting necessary farm work to be attended to.

Music.

The Greek word translated music meant all the circle of the arts and sciences—everything that was taught by the muses. Hebrew tradition ascribed the art now known as music to Jubal, 3875 B. C. Greek legends made Hyagnis, 1506 B. C., the founder of the science.

Halcyon Days.

Halcyon days was a name anciently given to seven days before and the same number after the winter solstice, when the halcyon, induced by the beauty of the weather, laid her eggs in nests built in the rocks close by the brink of the sea. The halcyon, or alcedo, is in ornithology a kingfisher, a genus of the class aves, order picae.

Roots, Leaves and Moisture.

Roots draw enormous quantities of moisture from the soil, and by this means it is discharged through the leaves into the atmosphere. For example, the common sunflower has been proved to exhale an ounce of water each hour, and a large oak tree, estimated to have 700,000 leaves, exhaled 700 tons of water during the seven months it carried its foliage.

Elsie's Little Miracle

By Anna Steese Richardson

Copyright, 1906, by May McKeon

It was pretty generally understood that the Billy Daltons were drifting apart. There was no particular reason for this state of affairs, save the lack of something better to do.

You see, they had just enough money so that Billy did not have to work nor Janet to worry about making both ends meet. They had danced their way through several seasons into a lazy, good humored and comrade-like engagement, thence into matrimony. After that Billy had continued to lead cotillons and Janet to dance them, but generally with other partners.

Matters between them had reached the point where the rumor laden society papers had suggested covertly that when Billy went to England and Scotland, where he had nothing in particular to do, Janet would probably take up her home in Nevada or South Dakota, there to remain until Norman Stanley returned from Africa, where he was fighting ennui by hunting big game. It was even whispered that Billy Dalton had insinuated to Stanley that it was rather better taste to stalk big game than another man's wife, especially when the other man was perfectly willing to make it clear sailing for his wife if it would make her any happier.

Of course, this sounds a bit strong on paper, particularly to the old fashioned folk who still believe that marriage is a contract for life and not a mere episode. In the set to which the Billy Daltons belonged the situation was accepted as a matter of course, and when Janet asked a lot of people down to their Long Island place for the automobile races and the week end no one thought of refusing just because the Daltons might separate within a fortnight after the gathering.

Such was the situation when the Dalton car broke down on the Jericho turnpike, and its occupants—Janet, Mrs. Greenwalt, Joe Jeffreys and "Marsh" Huntoon—decided to cut through the woods to the Dalton place and leave the car for a farmer to guard until the mechanic who handled the Dalton garage could be dispatched to the scene of the accident.

Perhaps it was not entirely impatience which led them to take the short cut through the woods, but the call of a hundred autumn voices in rustling leaves, rich, warm colorings and the chatter of squirrels laying up winter stores. And thus it was that they suddenly stopped in their tracks and listened to a sound that was not of the woods, but of the nursery—the plaintive wail of a child. Janet it was who found it—a bit of white faced, staring eyed humanity rolled up snugly in a great shawl of Iceland wool.

While she held the baby in her arms and tried to silence its wails with uncertain and awkward little pettings the quartet held a conference. The child was too young to have walked there. Mrs. Greenwalt said it was not a day over two months old. It was too far from the road to be heard by passing travelers. Ah—there was the answer, a wisp of paper tied to the end of the shawl:

"Please take care of little Elsie. It was not her fault that she came into the world, and I can do no more."

"I've always said that the government ought to regulate the question of marriage among the poor," remarked Mrs. Greenwalt severely. "Here is a case in point."

"You are jumping at conclusions," said Huntoon dryly. "Let's take it to the town marshal"—

"And what then?" asked Janet without lifting her gaze from the child's face. The baby had clutched her finger with its tiny fist and settled down as if it had found anchorage.

"Oh, there are asylums and homes for youngsters like this. You'd better hurry along home with it before it begins to howl. One of your men can take it to town before dark. Shall I carry the little beggar for you?"

"Oh, no. She's not a bit heavy, and she is quiet now. She might cry if we changed her position."

They trudged on through rustling leaves and soft Indian summer haze, three of the party chatting gayly; two, the young wife and the baby, looking into each other's eyes as if searching for a new key to the problem of life. Sometimes Janet wished that the child would close its eyes. She did not like to meet that trustful, clear eyed gaze.

• • • • • • • • •

"Have you disposed of the youngster?" asked "Marsh" Huntoon as they sat down to dinner that night.

Janet started and looked across the table at her husband. He lifted his eyebrows inquiringly.

Huntoon's good humored laugh broke the awkward silence.

"What? Don't you know that our party was increased by one during our ride this afternoon? Rather a small 'one,' but, my, what lungs it has!"

Janet drew in her breath sharply.

"I wish you would not talk any more about it at present, good people," she said, trying to speak lightly. "I've started inquiries in a quiet way. I don't want the thing to get into the papers—because if no one claims little Elsie I think I—I shall keep her."

"Keep her!" gasped Mrs. Greenwalt. "Why, my dear girl, the place for a child without a name is a foundling asylum."

Janet spoke very softly, yet every word was heard, so complete was the silence.

"I shall give her a name because once—just once—I saw a line of children walking, rows and rows, by twos, from an orphan asylum. I can't send her there."

Mentally she saw again those clear, trusting blue eyes.

"And I know you will all be kind enough to keep this very quiet until"—there was just a slight, tense hesitation—"until we decide what shall be done."

Naturally it was talked about, however. In boudoirs and at clubs the question was raised as to what name little Elsie would acquire. Was it not bad enough to be facing a divorce residence in the far west without acquiring an unnecessary incumbrance at the crucial moment?

Within the Dalton bungalow on Long Island stranger things were happening. No clew to the baby's parents had been found. When Billy Dalton dropped down occasionally, as he had been doing for a year past to keep up appearances, his first question was, "Anything new?" and this always meant "anything new about the baby's history." And little Elsie would look up at him with reproachful blue eyes as if asking, "Why do you care?" And the worst of it was that Billy Dalton began to realize that he did care. Janet had changed, and, with an odd sort of jealousy, he realized that it was little Elsie and not he who had brought about the marvelous and altogether desirable change. She was no longer bored. How could she be with Elsie cutting a new tooth every few days and such wonderful hampers of clothes to be bought, fine handkerchief linen, narrow val and convent embroidery? A more fastidious customer had never entered the shops which specialize on layettes, and with her own hands Janet made covers for down pillows, silk tufted afghans and other foolish things, while the tongue of gossip wagged gayly over the whole absurd episode.

One frosty December afternoon Dalton ran down to the bungalow and found Janet standing at the window. The low spreading evergreens on the west side of the house were powdered lightly with snow, and Janet turned to him with kindling eyes.

"Billy, I shall have a Christmas tree for Elsie. She is so bright for her age. I do believe she will notice it."

"Quite likely," responded Billy, with assumed carelessness, as she laid aside his storm coat, "but in making your plans you seem to have overlooked one important fact. As yet Elsie is not really yours. The law"—

Janet turned on him sharply.

"She is mine by right of—everything. I found her, and I love her."

"Yes, but you must formally adopt her. I thought perhaps you'd better see to that before I leave. I've changed my plans a bit. I'm going to meet mother and Grace in Rome for Christmas. The mater has not been feeling very fit. I am not fond of England in winter, and"—

Janet crossed to his side, and her hand rested lightly on his arm.

"Don't you think you'd enjoy much more seeing Elsie have her first tree? And—and I think—I need you—more than your mother does."

Something rose in Dalton's throat and threatened to choke him. It was a sensation he had never felt before, not even during the good natured, lazy run of his wooing. Janet wanted him! He thought he had not cared. Now he knew that he had cared all along. But it was characteristic he did not express his fierce joy in words. He held Janet very close and whispered:

"Well, I rather did hope you'd give the little beggar the name of Dalton. It's a pretty good name after all, eh?"

• • • • • • • •

Norman Stanley heard the news when he landed in London. He sent a lion's skin captured by his own hand for little Elsie to roll upon. Then he went to the Nile country for the winter.

Not Too Abrupt.

Radical changes in clothing are seldom safe, at least so the old time grandmothers held. The putting off of winter underwear was likely to be a gradual and prolonged process. That this belief in deliberate adjustment was widespread and inclusive is shown in W. P. Frith's story of his life. He was engaged in painting a portrait of Mrs. Birt, the wife of a prominent business man, who used to bring her little dog to share her sittings.

Mr. Birt was a great lover of dogs, but he entertained a strong aversion to dog collars, so I was surprised one day when Mrs. Birt brought her favorite dog, Ducky, to see a band around the little animal's neck.

"I thought you objected to dog collars, Mrs. Birt," I said. "I see Ducky sports one today."

"Oh, no, that's not a dog collar," returned the lady. "It's only a piece of flannel. The poor dear has had a dreadful cold and a sore throat. She has worn flannel night and day."

"Surely that is too narrow to do any good. The strip is no wider than a collar."

"Oh, it was wider, of course. We have gradually lessened it. She is leaving it off by degrees."

STEAMBOAT DRAMA.

Floating Palaces That Furnish Entertainment For River Towns.

Anybody who lives in a town on the banks of the Mississippi river and hears a calliope play at 5 o'clock in the morning knows that it is not a circus that is coming to town. It is the floating palace, which is the name given to a unique form of theatrical transportation entertainment that is used only on the river and its tributaries, the Ohio and the Missouri.

There are at the present time more than a dozen floating palaces. Each of them carries a well equipped stage, a company of from sixteen to thirty-five actors and actresses, and has seating capacity for from 200 to 700 persons. Each of the boats has a steam piano with which the people from the countryside are called to the landings, where the shows are given on the boats, and most of the boats carry pretty fair bands.

Nowhere else in this country or abroad is the drama carried up and down rivers on steamboats. Barring the railroad, the favorite means of transportation in England and in continental Europe is the wagon. There are many wagon shows in this country, but they would find it difficult to reach all the towns that are easily reached by the floating palaces. Many of the towns that get all their dramatic sustenance from these floating playhouses have no railroad connections whatever. If it were not for the shows that float down or up to them by boat they would have to go without theatrical fare.

Mark Twain, who knows the big river about as well as anybody, used to be well acquainted with the old time managers of a few of the floating palaces. He introduces one of them into "Huckleberry Finn." But times change, and men change with them, and the floating palace of today is much more elaborate and much finer than were the floating palaces of the older time.

They play to thousands of persons each season, and they give pretty good shows. Their managers, who live in Cincinnati and St. Louis, make good profits on the investment.—Chicago Tribune.

The Pace of Admiralty.

It is reported that Japan will see the Dreadnought and go Great Britain 3,000 tons better, laying down a battleship of 23,000 tons service displacement. Of course the mistress of the seas will not ignore the challenge, and we must prepare to hear of a British battleship of 26,000 tons. The Japanese, being a proud and progressive people, will not sit still and may be counted on to push the building mark on their side to 29,000 tons. By that time our own big ship enthusiasts will wake up, and the taxpayers will be invited to contribute the cash for a floating fortress of 32,000 tons. So does the race for naval supremacy go, the mind of the competing world being at present fixed upon displacement as if there was no other factor to be taken into account.—Boston Transcript.

Eating Soap.

From a communication read to the Association of Belgian Chemists it seems that continental bakers are in the habit of mixing soap with their dough to make their bread and pastry nice and light. The quantity of soap used varies greatly. In fancy articles like waffles and fritters it is much larger than in bread. The soap is dissolved in a little water. To this is added some oil, and the mixture, after being well whipped, is added to the flour. The crumb of the bread manufactured by this process is said to be lighter and more spongy than that made in the ordinary way.

An Overworked Title.

A New York book publisher declares that the house business in recent literature has been overdone. "No house book will come from our presses from now on," he says. He cites "The House of Mirth," "The House of Fulfillment," "The House on the Hudson," "The House With the Green Shutters," "The House of a Thousand Candles" and a half dozen other literary structures of like character erected recently as an evidence that architecture is being overdone by the makers of books of fiction, to say nothing of "The House That Jack Built."

Mexican Holidays.

El Mundo, a Mexican evening paper, in referring to the labor situation in Mexico, complains of the excessive number of holidays which the peon thinks he is entitled to and which he takes regardless of considerations. Out of 365 days of the year, according to that newspaper, 131 are devoted to obligatory and traditional idleness. The appalling calculation is made up as follows: Sundays, 52; saint Mondays, 52; solemn feast days, 15; holy days, 3; national feasts, 3; family feasts, 6; total, 131.

Indians In Connecticut.

Connecticut still has a few Indians in its midst. The secretary of the Home Missionary society of the state, Rev. Joel S. Ives, recently preached to a native audience at Mohegan, a Congregational church under the care of the society. There are about twenty-five members, and a young woman has recently taken charge there. The place is between Norwich and New London. —Indian's Friend.

Voting on a Play.

M. Boggiano's voting apparatus at theaters has received but scant notice. When the spectator leaves his seat he is presented with a disk, which he throws into a certain aperture if he considers the piece good and into another if he thinks it bad.—Paris Journal.

STOPPED THE OVATION.

Richard Wagner's Peculiar Experience In Vienna.

When Wagner was at the height of his popularity he visited Vienna. Baron von Beust, then chancellor of the empire, was informed that the Prussian party intended to give him an immense serenade—a serenade which would have the air of German protest against the tendency of the ministry to make the union of Hungary and Austria more intimate. The demonstration promised to arouse strong feeling.

"Your excellency is warned," said the chancellor's advisers. "It is impossible to stop this manifestation unless Wagner goes away, and he loves ovations too well. Nothing will induce him to depart."

"You think so," said Beust, with a smile.

An hour later Wagner was invited to dine with the chancellor. He was flattered by the invitation and accepted it. After dinner, at which Beust was delightfully affable and entertaining, the chancellor remarked: "Herr Wagner, are you interested in autographs? I have some very curious ones to show you." And he opened a portfolio where were letters of Palmerston, Bismarck, Napoleon III., Heine and others.

Suddenly turning to a paper, dated 1848, he said: "Ah, look at this. It is very curious. What would your friend his highness the king of Bavaria say if this paper, which would be significant in connection with the political serenade which the Germans are going to give you, should be published tomorrow in the Vienna papers?"

The composer examined the paper and recognized, with surprise, an old proclamation of one Richard Wagner, who, an ardent revolutionist in 1848, had proposed to the youth of that time to set fire to the palace of the king of Saxony. He saw his autograph and that it might be the means of getting him into serious trouble.

"Very curious, is it not, Herr Wagner?" said the minister.

"Very curious, your excellency," replied his guest.

MAKING WAMPUM.

A Process That Requires Both Patience and Skill.

With certain tribes wampum is still highly prized and necklaces are worn by men, women and children when they are the fortunate possessors of them. To make wampum various kinds of shells are used, white and those having a lavender hue being most liked.

The thin shells are broken into little pieces and by aid of nippers are made as nearly round as possible. When each piece is drilled in the center, the old time fire kindling style of drill being used, the shells are then strung and rolled with the hand on a flat stone, which grinds them until they are smooth and even.

Comparatively few Indians among those who prize wampum beads most highly have the skill or patience to make them, even though they had the materials. The fact is there are but few wampum bead makers in the country, and it often happens that long pilgrimages must be made to secure the requisites for really fine beads, and, as with the white man's trinkets, that which is "far fetched and dear bought" is most sought after for ornamentation.

Around some of the ancient ruins in the southwest the little disks of wampum are often found in the sand, and it is probable that they were deposited in the graves in very early times and washed out or exposed by the wind's action. These ruins are in the best state of preservation of any in the country. Absolutely nothing is known of their builders, and the origin of these ruins was as much a mystery when Coronado first saw them in 1540, when he made his famous invasion, as it is to the people of the present day.—Indian's Friend.

Oxygen and Mushrooms.

A singular way of removing oxygen from the air by the aid of a plant is as follows: Inside a glass bell jar, suspended over water, is placed a mushroom, and sunlight is allowed to fall upon the plant. The mushroom absorbs the oxygen from the air in the jar, and the carbonic acid formed during the process is absorbed by the water, which gradually rises in the jar to one-fifth of its height. The mushroom now dries up, but its animation is only suspended, as may be proved by introducing beside it a green plant, when it will recommence to vegetate, being nourished by the oxygen exhaled from the fresh plant.

Hope.

"Mr. Merchant," said the new clerk, preparing to ask for more money, "I think I understand the business pretty well now, and"—

"Yes?" interrupted his employer. "Well, keep at it four or five years. Perhaps you'll understand it then as well as you think you do now."

Taking Papa Down.

First Daughter—Oh, papa, dear, two young men we've met down here have asked us to marry them. Father —They'd better see me first. Second Daughter—Oh, they've seen you, papa, and they love us notwithstanding.

A Fashion Note.

Doctor (to female patient)—You've got a slight touch of fever. Your tongue has a thick coat— Patient (excitedly)—Oh, doctor, do tell me how it fits!

Section Sixteen

By CARRIE NEWMAN

Copyright, 1906, by M. M. Cunningham

Clifton glanced down the car at the last section. Somehow it irritated him. Last night the chap who had that section had beaten him at penuchle. He might find diversion and revenge if the sleepyhead would only tumble out and recognize the fact that it was broad daylight.

The night before the car had been well filled. All through the night they had dropped off at the way stations, and Clifton thought viciously of the man in his section who had stepped on his face in climbing down from the upper berth about 3 o'clock. So far this morning he had the sleeper to himself, save for the occupant of section 16.

He finished the breakfast that had been served from the buffet and strolled down the car. Reaching through the curtains, he gave the shoulder a shake. "Wake up, old man," he shouted. "Your alarm clock's broken, I guess."

There was a muffled feminine shriek, and the porter came dashing around the corner from his tiny kitchen.

"Waffor you wake dat lady?" he demanded. "You all ain't got no right to wake a lady dataway."

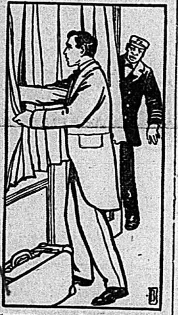
"There was a man went to bed in there," exclaimed Clifton. "How was I to know that he wasn't there yet?"

"Dat gemman yo' done play cards wif las' night?" demanded the porter. "He done get off at Falls Crossin' 'bout leben. Dis hyer lady done come on bode 'bout two hours ago. She shuah am sleepy."

"Tell her I'm sorry," commanded Clifton, backing away. "I was lonesome, and I thought I'd rout that chap out. I'm awfully sorry."

He went back to his own section, and the porter, mollified by the bill slipped into his hand, made full explanation to the unseen occupant.

Clifton settled himself savagely in his seat and fixed his eyes on the berth. He wondered what the woman might look like. Her voice suggested that she was young. More than that he could not guess, so he occupied himself in speculation as to her personality.



"WAKE UP, OLD MAN," HE SHOUTED. "YOUR ALARM CLOCK'S BROKEN, I GUESS."

It at least served to occupy his thoughts, and this was something. Since the cutoff had been built most long distance travelers took the short route. But the state authorities had demanded that one through car each way be run on the old main line, and because the other sleepers were crowded Val Clifton had taken a berth in the other car. Most of the traffic was short hauls in the day coaches, and he missed having company on the first day out.

It was nearly noon when at last a commotion behind the hanging curtains suggested that the unknown was getting up, and at last there was a flash of red wrapper, a glint of golden hair and just a suggestion of white as she vanished around the corner to the dressing room.

The porter came in and made up the berth and presently she returned to her section. Now she wore a trim gray dress. There were dimples in her cheeks, and Clifton rose and strolled forward.

"I want to apologize in person for my awkward blunder," he said as he leaned over the arm of her seat. "It was a silly mistake, but somehow the chap in this section last night gave me the impression that he was going through, and I was so horribly lonesome that I wanted him to play cards with me."

"A sleeper is a place of surprises," she laughed, "but I guess that you were more badly scared than I was, so we'll call it square. I know how lonesome it is traveling."

"May I venture to hope that you will share my solitude?" he pleaded. "You want some breakfast, and I want some lunch. May I call the porter?"

The girl nodded, and Clifton pressed the button. Presently they were chatting across the white tablecloth as merrily as though they had been old friends.

Then when the things had been cleared away he got out his cards, and they were soon deep in euchre. She chatted away on impersonal topics, and Clifton [illegible] with the loneliness of the morning in the deserted car with only the dreary landscape to watch, the girl seemed doubly attractive, and he was surprised when the porter came around to light the lights. A number of persons had boarded the car through the afternoon, but he had scarcely noticed them.

He was sorry now that he had arranged to stop over on some business. He was sorry that he was not going straight through, for she had told him that she was to be on the train until well into the next day.

He swore softly to himself when the porter came to brush him down.

"Be in your station in ten minutes," he said briskly as he picked up the suit case beside Clifton's seat and took it to the forward door. Clifton followed him more leisurely and stopped at the girl's seat.

"I am grateful to you for a most delightful afternoon," he said earnestly. "I am sorry that our ways part so quickly, but somehow I feel certain that I shall see you again."

"I'm sure of it," said the girl with laughing eyes. "But next time I hope that the introduction will not be so abrupt."

"I'll follow the adage and let sleeping dogs—and sleeping car passengers—sleep on," he laughed. "Goodby—and thanks."

Their hands met for a moment in a warm clasp, and then he made his way to the door.

The train pulled out before he turned away from the platform, and with the last flash of the car lights on the glinting gold of her hair a terrible sense of loneliness came over him. He had not asked for her address. It would have been worse than rude, and he wanted her to think well of him, but now he was sorry that he had not risked giving offense. It was too late now, though. She had probably passed out of his life forever, and he turned away toward the hotel stages with a heavy heart. Now that the train had gone on he knew that he had fallen in love, and with an unknown girl at that.

There were letters waiting for him at the hotel, including one from his sister urging him to close up his business and get home quickly, as she wanted him to reach there before her school chum went back home.

Clifton caught up a sheet of note paper and wrote a line to Nell. He solemnly warned her to cherish no hopes that he would fall in love. "I met a girl on the train," he wrote. "Unless I can find her you will never have a sister-in-law. I think I shall stay here until your visitor goes."

He sent the letter downstairs and turned into bed, but sleep was laggard. He could see in the darkness of the room that golden head, and he reproached himself for his foolishness in not finding out who she was.

He rose unrefreshed in the morning and went dully about his business. The girl of the train was before his eyes all the time. It was silly, he told himself, to feel so about a woman he would probably never see again, yet at the same time he realized that she had made an impression upon him that time could not efface.

He tried to read that evening, but he could not keep his mind on the magazine, and at last he threw it down and gave himself up to meditation. He knew that if he brooded on the subject he would be unfit for business or anything else. He must find the girl somehow. Perhaps he might trace her through the conductor of the train. She must have come on board about 7 o'clock. Perhaps he could run up the line and find out from the ticket agent. He had about decided upon that scheme when there came a knock at the door, and he went to open it. A bellboy thrust a telegram into his hand and stood waiting to see if there was an answer. Clifton broke the seal listlessly, then gave a shout. The message ran:

"Come home, you silly. Bess Winston was the girl in section 16. She saw your name on the suitcase. That's why she was so nice. Nell."

"Any answer?" asked the boy, fidgeting first on one foot and then on the other.

"I hope the answer will be 'yes,'" said Clifton absently. "I mean," he went on quickly, "yes, there's an answer." And he stretched out his hand for the blank.

Corot and the Prince de Joinville.

"I thank you, Corot," said the prince, holding out his hand, "for having allowed me to renew my youth in seeing your works. And, look, I see there an old acquaintance, your picture of Dante in hades. It was in the Salon of 1843, was it not?" "That is true, mon prince," said Corot. "How in the name of goodness can you remember the date—you who have seen so many things since that time?" "And the critic Delecluse," replied the prince, "worried you a great deal on this subject. But it touched you very little, and you were right. And this lovely, delicate study—you must have made it in the neighborhood of Genoa?" "Indeed, I did," bellowed Corot in his great voice. "You are gifted with second sight. For ten years now I have searched in my old noddle for the place where I did that, and it needed you, mon prince, to come and tell me." "That, M. Corot, is because I have sketched those beautiful mountains more than ten times, and I know them by heart. There is another study over there of a mill on the dunes. It is soft and gray and very true. I think it must have been done at Dunkerque. And next to it I recognize the tower of the port of La Rochelle." "I see, monseigneur—pardon, mon prince—that there is nothing to teach you. I see only one thing—that to your title and quality of prince and admiral must be added that of 'wizard.'"—G. Chardin

The multimillionaire was in great agony when he found he would probably be compelled to die rich.

"Money," he exclaimed piteously; "nothing but money! Is it not a punishment?"

"Yes," replied the beggar at the gate, "and I call it capital punishment. Suppose you give me your wealth and die a happy man?"

But the multimillionaire shook his head.

"No," he answered dolefully, "when a man is condemned to capital punishment he generally deserves it, so I shall take my medicine like a man."

And then he called out his $10,000 bulldogs and drove the beggar off the premises.—Chicago News.

Preserving His Taste.

In his early boarding house days in Kansas City Eugene Field was invited to dine at a hospitable house where the best of everything was to be found. Some delicious strawberries were passed. Field gazed at them longingly, but shook his head.

"Why, Field," said his host in surprise, "don't you like strawberries?"

"I dote on them."

"Then why don't you take some?"

"I'm afraid," said the poet sadly, "that if I did they'd spoil my appetite for prunes."—Ridgway's.

A Conversational Demand.

"Why don't you try to make yourself agreeable?" asked the reproving friend.

"My dear," answered Miss Cayenne, "the desire to be agreeable is what has spoiled my disposition. You can't make yourself agreeable to some people without saying things about others."—Washington Star.

Where Patience Ended.

"Haw, haw, haw! Good joke! Why will New York's fifty story building be fifty-one when it falls down?"

"I don't see."

"If it falls, that would be another story, wouldn't it? Haw, haw! Ouch!"—Philadelphia Ledger.

Her Last Alias

By HORACE HEMSTREET

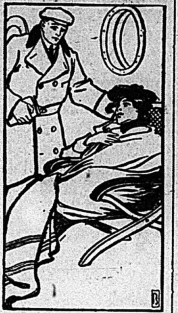
Copyright, 1906, by E. C. Parcells

Clayton looked up from his book. He had not realized that anything unusual was going on until a scream from the girl roused him. Two men were arguing with her. She, white faced, but determined, held her ground.

"There must be some mistake," she insisted. "I am Una Ormonde of Detroit. I am on my way to meet a party of friends, with whom I am going abroad. If I miss the boat, I shall not only lose the trip, but I shall find myself in New York alone and friendless. Can't you believe me?"

"We believe the going to Europe part all right," grinned one of the detectives. "That's the only part that sounds good to us. Come ahead! We can't keep the train waiting for you."

He laid his hand upon her shoulder, and the girl gave a little cry. Clayton threw down the book and crossed the aisle.



"I HAVE BEEN MOST MISERABLY SEA SICK. WHY DID YOU SEARCH FOR ME?"

"What is the matter?" he asked. "Why do you annoy this lady?"

"This ain't no lady. She is a confidence queen," said the detective roughly. "Don't you come butting in or we'll have to run you in too."

"There's some mistake here," Clayton said quietly. "I presume you are making the arrest on information?"

The detective drew a printed slip from his pocket and passed it to Clayton. It recited that Loa Cogswell, alias Pfeffer, alias Hay, alias Goodrich, was wanted in Chicago for swindling. She was supposed to be making her escape to London or Paris. The description in a general way fitted the girl, but Clayton saw that some mistake had been made. He had been looking at the girl all the afternoon, and he would have sworn that she was no criminal. That her distress was real was apparent.

"This is all wrong," he said decidedly. "That description would fit hundreds of women who have passed through this station today. If you arrest Miss Ormonde, you will be sued for false imprisonment. I know her to be the person she says she is."

"One of her pals, eh?" sneered the detective. "I guess we'd better take you too."

Clayton handed the man a card.

"If you want to mess things up still further," he said quietly, "go ahead."

The officer looked at the card. "Got any letters to back this up?" he demanded. Clayton produced several from his coat. The detective touched his hat.

"I guess we made a mistake," he said uncertainly. "Sorry we troubled the lady. I hope this will go no further, sir."

"It's all right, I suppose," was the careless answer. "If Miss Ormonde will excuse you, I have nothing more to say."

The girl bowed her willingness, and the two men filed sheepishly out of the car. Arresting a confidence queen was one thing. Mistaking a friend of the son of the governor of the state was quite another. They were glad they were let off so easily.

Una turned to Clayton.

"I am very much obliged to you," she said softly. "I don't know what I should have done had they taken me off the train. I am to sail in the morning with Uncle Jim and a party of friends. Father sent him a draft for my expenses, and I should have landed in New York without funds or friends had I been detained."

"I am glad to have been of service," Clayton said. "May I sit down here for a few minutes? You see, the other passengers are looking, and since I so boldly claimed acquaintance it would look odd if I returned to my own seat."

"It was a daring thing to do," she smiled. "How do you know that I am not this confidence queen?"

"That's easy," he declared. "You do not look the part. I think I am a better judge of human nature than the chaps with the badges."

She bowed her acknowledgment of the compliment.

"I should hate to feel that I looked like a swindler," she laughed.

"You look more like an angel," he said daringly and looking into the clear eyes. "It was that that first attracted my attention," she said demurely. "You certainly made an exhaustive study."

"I did not mean to be impertinent," he said. "I did not know that I was rude."

"You were not," she conceded. "It was more that I was—well, let's say observant."

Clayton flushed. Somehow the girl had made an impression on him when she first came into the car. It was pleasant to think that she, too, had been interested. The thought gave him courage, and almost before they realized it the porter began to brush the passengers down.

"Mercy!" she cried. "I did not know that time was passing so. We are almost in New York."

"I wish we were headed the other way," he said regretfully. "May I call before you go?"

"I sail in the morning," she said. "I am sorry that I cannot say yes. You see, I don't know what plans have been made for this evening, and it might not look well to have you calling when I cannot explain."

"May I write?" he asked eagerly. "I do not want to have you slip right out of my life."

"I think it would be better," she said slowly. "I wish you would even forget my name. I—I cannot explain."

"I'll think of you as Mlle. Alias," he said promptly. "Your double had so many names that I shall pretend that you are she."

They had risen and were standing on the platform of the Pullman. She put her hand in his.

"Perhaps I am," she said softly. "Thank you so much for your kindness, and goodby."

She had slipped down the steps and was lost in the crowd before Clayton had recovered from the audacity of that last speech. He knew that it could not be true, yet for a moment the suggestion shocked him. He hurried down the platform after her, but the boats were just leaving their slips as he passed through the gate, and she was lost.

For weeks Clayton puzzled over that speech. He knew very well that she was not the swindler, yet why did she choose to create that doubt? The more he reasoned the more puzzled he became. Only one fact stood unchanged. He loved her. That was certain.

Business called him to London, and there, away from his friends, he came to his decision. When his business affairs were straightened out he would go straight to Detroit and see if he could locate the Ormondes.

But he did not have to wait that long. He took the boat at Southampton, and at Cherbourg the passengers from Paris came on board. Clayton, leaning over the rail on the upper deck, saw a figure ascending the gangway that caused his heart to beat faster.

It could be none other than Mlle. Alias. He hurried down to the lower deck, but could not find her, and, though the passenger list gave her name, for two days he looked for her in vain.

Then, late in the evening, a wan little figure was helped out on deck and established in a steamer chair. Clayton hurried toward her.

"I have been looking for you for two days," he said when greetings had been exchanged. "Where have you concealed yourself?"

"In my berth," she explained. "I have been most miserably seasick. Why did you search for me?"

"I wanted to ask you to become my wife," he said directly.

"Not knowing whether I am a confidence worker or not?" she demanded.

"Knowing in my heart that you are not," he corrected, "why did you seek to raise such a doubt?"

"As a test," she said. "Had you not believed in me you would have lost interest, and I wanted to see"—

"Are you content?" he asked as his hand closed over hers. "I have never lost faith."

She spoke no word, yet Clayton knew that he had won, and he bent and kissed her. "We shall add Clayton to your aliases," he smiled. "That will be the last."

What Books Do.

Books are friends whose society is extremely agreeable to me. They are of all ages and of every country. They have distinguished themselves both in the cabinet and in the field and obtained high honors for their knowledge of the sciences. It is easy to gain access to them, for they are always at my service, and I admit them to my company and dismiss them from it whenever I please. They are never troublesome, but immediately answer every question I ask them. Some relate to me the events of past ages, while others reveal to me the secrets of nature. Some teach me how to live and others how to die. Some, by their vivacity, drive away my cares and exhilarate my spirits, while others give fortitude to my mind and teach me the important lesson how to restrain my desires and depend wholly on myself. They open to me, in short, the various avenues of all the arts and sciences, and upon their information I safely rely in all emergencies. In return for all these services they only ask me to accommodate them with a convenient chamber in some corner of my humble habitation, where they may repose in peace, for these friends are more delighted by the tranquillity of retirement than with the tumults of society.—Francesco Petrarca.

Hart Schaffner & Marx.

IT'S just about now that nearly every man has the Spring Suit question on his mind.

Many will come to us without any urging on our part.

Sometimes an old customer drops out; perhaps tries a high-priced tailor, but he comes back again and tells us frankly that he likes our clothing—likes the fit—the style—the fabric—the workmanship and our prices.

We have built up our reputation for selling the best of clothes by handling only the best productions of the World's Best Clothing Makers.

We are just entering on our tenth year's business in Belleville and can safely say that our showing for the coming season far excels our best previous effort.

Come see our handsome Spring Suits and learn how much suit goodness you can get here for

$7, $8, $10, $12, $15, or $20

HATS

No two men look alike. Is it then reasonable to suppose that the same style hat will be equally becoming to all men.

We are inclined to think not, We go upon the supposition that the of shapes, widths of brims, heights of crowns and colorings, the greater will be the satisfaction. Accordingly we present the greatest variety of Spring Hats to be seen in Belleville. It embraces all shapes, colorings and proportions—from the conservative shapes to the latest in young men's snappy styles.

AS AN EXAMPLE

Of what we have been saying about overlooking the strain on the ocular muscles, the following is to the point: Mr. H. A. K., 35, bookkeeper, gave history of pain in eye-balls, headaches, and pain between the shoulders which first appeared in childhood. In later years nausea, indigestion, and "sick headache" developed. He had his eyes examined by a specialist, when a high degree of oblique astigmatism was found, which he corrected with proper glasses, thinking this was all that was necessary; the glasses greatly improved vision, but the distressing symptoms mentioned still continued. At this stage a careful examination of the ocular muscles revealed 7 degrees of exophoria (a weakness of the internal recti, which receive their working powers from the nerve-centres at the base of brain) The proper glasses were given for the relief of the brain-strain induced in this way, as well as exercise to strengthen those weak muscles, when in a short time all the pain, headaches, and digestive troubles entirely disappeared.

New Close Seasons For Game Protection.

PROVISIONS IN DR. REAUME'S BILL — INSPECTORS TO SUPERVISE WARDENS.

Toronto, Feb. 28. — Hon. Dr. Reaume's bill, which was presented in the Legislature yesterday, will take the place of the Ontario Game Protection Act, the Ontario Fisheries Act, and all amending acts. As indicated in the estimates, the amalgamation of the fish and game departments is provided for as the game and fisheries branch, with a superintendent in charge. There will be inspectors appointed, not more than three in number, who will supervise the wardens and overseers. The board of game commissioners, existing since 1892, is abolished. No change is made in the present regulations on forest and other crown reserves.

New close seasons are adopted as follows:

Deer, moose, reindeer, cariboo, Nov. 21 to Oct. 19 (inclusive.)

Grouse, pheasant, prairie fowl, partridge, woodcock, black and grey squirrels, Dec. 15 till Sept. 15.

Capercailzie from Dec. 15 till Sept. 15, after 1909, until which time these birds have a close season all the year round.

Hares, from Dec. 31 till Oct. 1.

Beaver, otter and muskrat continue as at present.

Quail, wild turkey, from Dec. 1 till Nov. 1.

Swan or geese, from May 1 till Sept. 1.

Ducks of all kinds, or any other water fowl, from Dec. 31 till Sept. 1.

Snipe, rail, plover and other shore birds or waders, from Dec. 15 till Sept. 1.

Automatic guns are prohibited. Employes of railway construction and other public works may not possess or carry firearms unless specially licensed.

Any hotel, restaurant, or club unlawfully supplying any game or fish under any pretended name or as something which might lawfully be supplied, will be guilty of an offence under the new law.

Fines not exceeding $100 and not less than $20, are provided for violation of the law respecting deer, moose, elk, reindeer, cariboo, beaver or otter. This raises the limit $50 over the present penalty. Other violations are provided with fines of from $5 to $50, instead of the present scale of $5 to $25. In default of payment imprisonment up to three months is provided. Second offences within two years must be visited at least double the minimum penalties, and third offences with not less than the maxima.

The City Water.

The following statement has been handed to The Intelligencer by Ald. Vermilyea, chairman of the Waterworks committee:

"Owing to the extreme cold weather many water services have been frozen throughout the city. Many have been thawed out by the electric apparatus, and to avoid this occurring again many no doubt have been letting their taps run, consequently the capacity at the pumphouse has been heavily taxed.

"In order to assist in keeping up the heavy pressure in consequence, the D and D. Institute has kindly consented to start their pump, and are now pumping into the city mains. It would be advisable for consumers to be as economical as possible for a few days, and it would probably be as well to boil the water."

Godfrey Case Has Been Cleared Up.

CORONER HARPER SAYS THE LAD WAS ACCIDENTALLY SHOT BY HIS BROTHER.

Dr. Harper, coroner, of Madoc village, who was authorized to investigate the death of the boy Claude Godfrey, who, it was alleged, was shot and killed by his brother, George, whilst they were "playing bear," has made his report to the County Attorney. The coroner, after investigating the affair, did not consider it necessary to exhume the body or to hold an inquest. His report is that the lad was accidentally shot by his brother.

The Gas Question.

EX-MAYOR JOHNSON WRITES ON A MATTER VERY MUCH IN THE PUBLIC MIND AT PRESENT.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:

Sir,—It seems to be taken for granted that the waterworks plant is proving a successful undertaking for the city and that the Gas works plant is unprofitable, but the citizens should have, through the press, the financial statements proving the facts. It is now the first of March, and while we have learned of the result of running such works in half a dozen other cities, we have had no information respecting our own.

I have noticed that when information has been requested with respect to the financial operations of the Waterworks and Gas works the answer has been made that the auditors have not yet made their statements and report. There is a wrong notion of the duties of auditors implied in such an answer. It is not, ordinarily, the duty of auditors to make out financial statements; it is the duty of those in charge of the books to make them, promptly at the end of the business year; and it is the business of the auditors to do two things, (1st) to verify the statements by skilful and thorough checking of the books and documents, and (2) to certify that the statements are true abstracts from the books and correctly present the financial result for the past year and represent the financial condition of the concern at the date named.

In connection with the Waterworks and Gas works the necessary inventories of loose property and goods should be taken on the last day of December, and, at the latest, by the 15th of January, a statement showing the earnings and the expenses and the net gain or loss for the past year, and a balance sheet showing the assets and liabilities and the net worth or insolvency, should be taken from a well kept double entry ledger and be ready for examination by the Council and for submission to the people (who are the body of shareholders) through the press. These would be the requirements exacted from the office staff if the Gas works and Waterworks were owned by a company. They are the ordinary business methods and should, as a matter of course, be followed in connection with the two plants that the city owns. The presumption on the part of the public would be that the figures presented by the trusted and bonded officials in charge of the books and finances pertaining to the corporation's business are true and reliable; this opinion would be confirmed or weakened by the report of the auditors following, as early as possible, at the completion of their work.

At a public meeting held in the City Hall two years ago I moved a resolution, that was carried unanimously, recommending the Council to place the office work in connection with the Gas department in charge of the City Treasurer, giving him the necessary assistance. I take it that no one would desire to see a separate office set up for the Waterworks department. I believe the work of the City Treasurer is well done and collections of water rates are enforced. Let us have the same control, in the same office, over the finances and bookkeeping of the Gas department that is exercised over the municipal revenue and expenditure and the financial affairs of the Waterworks department. That is the arrangement that a business man or company would make under similar circumstances; witness the recent concentration of the Corby Company's business at one point in the interest of efficiency. It would be well for us to follow good business methods.

I don't agree with the proposal to bring a gas expert here to work at a big salary. He is not needed. The men at the works, as I know by long association with them when president of the Gas Company, are competent to make gas and distribute it. It is efficient office work and prompt collections of accounts that are required.

One good mechanic (a Belleville man) should, in my judgment, be made superintendent of the Gas works and Waterworks. The city, I think, ought to confine itself to making and selling gas and the by-products, and leave gas fitting and sale of fixtures and stoves to the merchants who make their living in that line of business.

It will be interesting to learn from the coming statements what the loss has been on the gas fitting and fixtures end of the business, with four men constantly under pay, but not constantly employed.

There are two good accountants in the City Council, Alderman Marsh and Alderman Ackerman; it would be wise to allow their opinions to influence the Gas Committee in its consideration of the changes that are apparently so necessary in the administration of the Gas department.

Resided In Thurlow For Over 60 Years.

MR. OWEN R. WEESE, A POPULAR YEOMAN, HAS PASSED AWAY.

In the death of Mr. Owen R. Weese, which occurred at an early hour this morning, a highly respected yeoman of Thurlow township has passed away. Some weeks ago Mr. Weese was the victim of a paralytic stroke, which affected his right side. On Friday last the left side was attacked and this latter stroke proved to be fatal.

In the year 1825 the deceased was born in the County of Prince Edward, where he lived until about 20 years of age, when he moved to the second concession of Thurlow township, where he resided for over 60 years. He was an active man and in early life took a deep interest in municipal matters. He was in the Township Council for some years as First Deputy Reeve, and also as a Councillor. He also occupied a seat in the County Council. For years he was president of the Thurlow cheese factory. Mr. Weese was a man who was esteemed by all who knew him, being possessed of a kind and generous heart. In religion he was a member of the Anglican church and in politics a staunch Conservative. Some 15 years ago Mrs. Weese preceded her husband to the tomb. The remaining members of the family are one son and three daughters. The son is Mr. Charles H. Weese, who resides on the homestead, and the daughters are Mrs. Robt. Gibson, of this city; Mrs. John McLaren, of Toronto, and Mrs. Chas. W. Taylor, of Buffalo. Mr. Robt. Weese, of this city, is a brother, and Mrs. Hy. Pretty a sister of the deceased. The sympathy of a large circle of friends will be extended to the bereaved family.

The Irish Evangelist

The Irish evangelist conducted a most profitable service last evening at Holloway St. Church, being at his best and a much larger attendance was very noticeable, lending help and encouragement. The service of song improves each night as the audience becomes acquainted with the book used called "Best Hymns." Mr. McCombe takes great pains with the children, who will not soon forget him, and whose singing is ever appreciated, perhaps because innocence and guilelessness is so apparently in harmony with Gospel song. Of old they sang "Hosanna! blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord," and the great teacher chiding the impatient ones read for them out of the scriptures, "Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings thou hast perfected praise." The evangelist took for his text Joshua 2: 21; "She bound the scarlet line in the window," and this most interesting historical account was graphically pictured in characteristic language, thought and illustration, giving abundant scope for a touching gospel application, which proved to be effectual, as many testimonies of gratitude all over the church were heard from old and young, and many showed that they had been profited during the past two weeks. All are looking for the Sabbath with hope and expectancy, and to the closing week for a richer harvest in answer to earnest and united prayer.

Died In Madoc.

Word was received in the city today announcing the death of Mrs. (Dr.) Lister, who died at Madoc village at an early hour this morning. Deceased, who was 84 years of age, was born here, being one of the oldest inhabitants. A year ago she removed to Madoc to live with her son-in-law, Mr. D. E. K. Stewart. Mrs. Lister was a kind-hearted lady, beloved by all who knew her. She was a devoted member of St. Thomas' Church Her husband preceded her to the tomb many years ago. One son, James, who lives in the States, and three daughters, Mrs. Stewart and Misses Alice and Charlotte, survive. The remains will be brought here for interment.

The funeral of the late Mr. E. S. Howard, English Master of the Owen Sound High school, will take place on Monday afternoon, 4th inst., at 2.30 o'clock, from the residence of Dr. Joseph Caldwell, Bridge St., to the Belleville cemetery. Funeral service at Dr. Caldwell's house at 2 o'clock.

Exciting Runaway.

A team of horses belonging to Mr. A. Hudgins, of Plainfield, ran away this morning on the upper portion of Front street. No person was hurt but both horses sustained injuries. At the upper bridge the animals become separated and one of them apparently made an attempt to jump over the railing into the river below, but without success. For a few minutes there was much excitement.

THAW STILL INSANE?

Alienist's Evidence on the Point Still Being Taken.

Dr. Evans Says There Are Many Kinds of Madness and It Is Hard to Identify Thaw's—Prisoner Has a Spell In Court—Commission In Lunacy Likely to Be Asked For—Jerome to Use Statements.

New York, March 2.—Now that Evelyn Nesbit Thaw no longer is on the stand, the prisoner is attracting more and more attention. He issued no additional statements yesterday, but, just before the close of the morning session, he caused almost as great a sensation as yesterday, when he attacked the "unprofessional" methods of the district attorney. Through his counsel, Thaw asked permission to leave the room. Dr. Evans at the time was examining an exhibit and the request was granted.

When he reached the prisoners' pen Thaw threw off his hat, brought his heels together and began violently to go through a five minute drill in setting up exercises. His guard looked on in amazement.

When he had finished swinging his arms Thaw announced he was ready to return to the court room. He declared he "felt" he had been compelled to take the exercise.

Mr. Jerome during the luncheon hour was minutely informed of the defendant's conduct and made notes upon it.

His Mail Growing Daily.

Thaw again brought to court several large packages of letters. His mail seems daily to be growing. He read the letters with activity and made pencil notes upon each. He apparently took no interest whatsoever in the fencing between the district attorney and the alienist.

The insanity of odolescence, paranoia and the characteristics of "brainstorms" occupied both session, and, when adjournment was taken until Monday morning Dr. Britton D. Evans one of the alienists for the defence, was still under cross-examination.

Jerome's motives in questioning the witness were somewhat baffling, but the net results of the day appears to be that he is still laying a foundation upon which he may ask for a commission in lunacy to judge of the present mental condition of the defendant.

Jerome to Use Statements.

What effect will the statement issued by Harry K. Thaw yesterday afternoon have on his trial?

This is the question which is calling forth much speculation. It is said that Thaw's lawyers did their best to convince him that it was bad policy to issue the statement and only consented when he insisted that he be allowed to do so.

It is reported Jerome will seek to put this statement in evidence to show Thaw is still insane.

Shot General Dead.

St. Petersburg, March 2.—The following details of the murder Wednesday, at Karenoyarsk, Siberia, of Gen. Koslovsky, the commandant of that town, have been received here:

The general was walking on the street at five o'clock in the afternoon, with some friends, and he referred jokingly to a threatening letter he had received that day, saying he would be killed at five o'clock that afternoon. Drawing his watch from his pocket the general remarked, laughingly, to his friends: "You see I am still alive."

About six o'clock, when Gen. Koslovsky was returning home alone, a man suddenly called upon him to halt and then fired three revolver shots at him. The general dropped dead.

SALT RHEUM CURED

BY DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS AFTER DOCTORS' TREATMENT HAD FAILED.

Skin trouble indicates that the blood is in a poisoned state. It is the poison in the blood that causes blotches, pimples, eczema, boils, salt-rheum or bad complexion. Dr. Williams Pink Pills make rich, red blood that banishes these troubles. Mrs. Osborne, wife of Andrew Osborne, clerk of the Township of Kennebec, Frontenac County, Ont., writes: "I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, for they did for me what doctors failed to do. Some years ago I was attacked by salt rheum in the hands, caused by a run down condition of my blood. I endured the tortures of this terrible disease for some time, and only those who have been similarly afflicted can realize my suffering. At times my hands were so bad that I could not comb my hair, I was helpless. I consulted a doctor but his treatment failed to benefit me—my case seemed incurable. While in this condition I read of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and decided to give them a trial. Soon I began to improve and by the time I had taken about a dozen boxes I was completely cured and I have not since had the slightest return of the trouble I can heartily recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to all similar sufferers."

You can't cure eczema, salt rheum and skin eruptions with salves and outward applications. These troubles are rooted in the blood and can only be cured through the rich, red blood Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually make. This simple medical fact should be known to everyone. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills not only cure skin diseases, but all other troubles caused by bad blood, such as anaemia, with its headaches, sideaches and backaches, heart palpitation, indigestion, rheumatism, neuralgia. St. Vitus' dance and the special ailments that afflict so many many women and growing girls. You can get these pills from your medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

AUSTRALIAN WINS RACE.

Canadian Misses World Championship by Very Narrow Margin.

Nepean, Australia, March 2.—(C. A. P.).—The boat race for the championship of the world on the river here between George Towns of Gladesville, Australia, and Eddie Durnan of Toronto, Canada, was decided over the three-mile course on the river here to-day and was won by Towns by one length.

The weather was dull before the race, a hot thunder storm threatening as the men pulled out from the landing stages of their boat houses for the start.

Both were trained to the minute and seemed equally confident.

By three o'clock the train loads and boat excursions had filled all the points of vantage along the river. When the men backed up to their buoys, the current was sluggish and the river low.

It was a desperate race over the entire straightaway three miles, daylight being barely preceptible between the boats at the finish, the Australian's margin being a scant boat length.

The victory of the citizen of the Commonwealth was a popular one and Towns was greeted with tumultuous applause as he rowed over to Durnan's water and shook hands with his vanquished and plucky opponent.

The Canadian, too, was liberally serenaded with cheers by the greatest concourse that ever witnessed a race since Ned Hanlan rowed in Australia.

Strathcona Presents Portrait.

London, March 2.—At the Westminster Palace Hotel yesterday, Lord Strathcona, the high commissioner for Canada, acting on behalf of a number of his friends, presented Sir Charles Tupper, the former Prime Minister of Canada, with a life size oil portrait of himself in appreciation of his services to Canada during the last sixty years.

In his address, Lord Strathcona recalled that in that very room Sir Charles had attended the conference forty years ago, which finally settled the provisions of the British North American Act, under which the Dominion of Canada was constituted.

In his reply, Sir Charles said the time would come when homes would be provided in Canada for as large a population as now inhabited the British Isles, and that the future depended largely upon the realization of Joseph Chamberlain's message to the Canadian people, in which he said:

"I am profoundly convinced that of all the bonds uniting this nation, the bond of commerce is the strongest."

Bandits Give Trouble.

St. Petersburg, March 2.—The fighting between Chinese bandits and Russian troops at a point 20 miles north of Harbin, which resulted in the sending of Russian reinforcements to the scene, has occasioned increasing apprehension here, as the Russian troops in that section have been reduced to numbers of bare necessity and would not be able to cope with a large outbreak.

The Foreign Office is not willing to give an opinion as to what steps will be necessary until it will be better informed as to the nature of the hostile forces arrayed against the Russians.

Tweedie For Lieutenant-Governor.

Ottawa, March 2.—Hon. L. J. Tweedie, Premier of New Brunswick, was appointed Lieutenant-Governor at the council meeting to-day. He will be succeeded as Premier by Clifford W. Robinson, Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, who will appeal to the country.

C.P.R. EXPRESS WRECK

Head-On Collision With Freight Train Near Kemptville.

Two Express Messengers Slowly Burned Alive—Some of the Passengers Slightly Injured—Wreckage Took Fire—Three Cars Were Burned—Mail From Toronto and the West Destroyed—Averts Disaster.

Smith's Falls, March 2.—A head-on collision occurred on the C. P. R. at Mountain Station at 6 o'clock yesterday morning. No. 6 express, eastbound, which left Smith's Falls at 5 o'clock yesterday morning, crashed into a freight, westbound, on the same track.

The express does not stop at Mountain Station, and it is said was running at fifty miles an hour when the collision occurred about a hundred rods east of that station.

The track is straight at this place, and the crews were able to see the impending danger, and all jumped to save their lives. In this they were fortunately successful.

Engineer Loses Fingers.

Engineer Daniel Hartney, of Smith's Falls, the driver of the express, sustained the most painful injuries, but escaped with the loss of three fingers. He was bruised and suffered slight injuries otherwise, as did all the crew, but the only serious thing is the loss of Mr. Hartney's fingers.

It is supposed he lost his fingers in trying to apply the brakes or reverse his engine before the awful impact came.

The Dead.

William Hutchins, Cobourg.

J. G. Nicholson, 47 Laurier street, Montreal.

The Injured.

A. Lesperance, brakeman, Montreal, face lacerated.

John Hartney, engineer, Montreal, three fingers cut off.

G. McQueen, passenger, Owen Sound, check laid open.

Engines Were Telescoped.

The two engines were telescoped in each other, and were practically ruined. The express car next the engine and the baggage car next to that received the full force of the collision. There was a stove in each, and either from these or from the lamps the wreck took fire. In a few minutes both these cars were enveloped in flames.

The baggageman, Lesperance, had just opened the door of his car for a minute when the crash came. He was thrown through the opening, and to this, no doubt, owes his life. He was scratched and scarred about the face from plowing through the snow, but he was not badly hurt.

Slowly Burned Alive.

The express messenger, Wm. Hutchins, and his assistant, Nichol, were less fortunate. They essayed to get out of the car, but the legs of one were caught by some of the wreckage, and he could not free himself. The other succeeded in getting his head and shoulders through the window of the car, but he was caught there and could get no further.

Immediately these two cars took fire. The two unhappy men, thus pinioned down, saw the flames surrounding them and rapidly coming nearer and nearer to them. They cried out in their extremity for assistance, and quickly the passengers and those of the crew who were able to do anything responded, but they were unable to succor them.

Unable to Rescue Them.

So great was the heat from the flames that it was impossible to do much, but all that could be done was done to rescue the doomed men. Passengers took turns in chopping at the car to free the messenger, who was partly out of the window.

An effort was made to pull him out, but he was fast imprisoned and could not be released. With piteous appeals for help, and in sight of the horror-stricken crowd, who were powerless to save, both men were burned to death. In the burning debris of this car there seems to be the head of a third man, and it is thought there were three lives lost, though who the third may be is not yet known.

The first-class passenger coach was only slightly injured, and no damage was done to the rest of the coaches. One freight car only was destroyed. Conductor Burt was in charge of the passenger train.

The wreck is the result of an unpardonable blunder by somebody, which the investigation that must be held, will no doubt disclose. The telegraph operator at Mountain, it is said, has been in a fainting condition since the collision.

Mail All Destroyed.

In the mail car was a particularly large mail from Toronto and Western points for the United Kingdom, and every bit of it was destroyed. The officials cannot explain how the fire could have started so quickly, and, while they state it must have been due to one of the engines exploding, they cannot understand how it could have gained such headway so quickly.

The crew of the freight train saved themselves by jumping.

Chicago Flyer Derailed.

Syracuse, N. Y., March 2.—The Chicago Special, westbound, on the New York Central, consisting of an engine ning at full speed, but no one was killed and no one was seriously injured.

Sante Fe Train Wrecked.

San Bernardino, Cal., March 2.—A Santa Fe passenger train struck an open switch near Colton yesterday, and collided with a San Pedro, Los Angeles and Salt Lake train. It is reported that many were hurt.

HAD NARROW ESCAPE.

Thomas Sinclair Ate Pie Intended For Rats.

Toronto, March 2.—Thomas Sinclair had a narrow escape from being poisoned Thursday from eating a piece of pie which had been loaded with "Rough on Rats." Before going to work Sinclair missed his customary pie from his lunch pail. He went to the pantry, where he noticed a nice piece of apple pie. He took it with him and after eating it at lunch time, became violently ill. Medical aid was summoned. Although his condition for a time was serious, Sinclair went back to work yesterday.

Carried on Cow-Catcher.

Guelph, March 2.—James Ellis while driving across the G. T. R. track, was struck by a train. His sleigh was smashed and Mr. Ellis was carried on the fender of the locomotive a considerable distance. He was only bruised.

Struck By Tornado.

Hope, Ark., March 2.—A destructive tornado struck the Town of Washington late last night and almost literally wiped it out of existence.

Two negroes are reported killed and several persons were injured.

Six Firemen Injured.

Pittsburg, March 2.—One fireman was seriously injured and five others slightly hurt early yesterday at a fire caused by crossed wires in Allegheny, which destroyed the ward five school building, a three-storey structure, valued at $150,000.

Pimples Off In 5 Days.

THE NEW CALCIUM SULPHIDE TREATMENT DOES WONDERS TO EVERY KIND OF SKIN ERUPTION.

Trial Package Sent Free to Prove It.

You don't want to wait forever and a day to get rid of your pimples or other skin eruptions. You want to get rid of them right now. Next week you may want to go somewhere where you wouldn't like to have to take the pimples along.

You can get rid of them just in time by taking Stuart's Calcium Wafers.

These wonderful little workers have cured bad boils in three days, and some of the worst cases of skin disease in a week.

They contain as their main ingredient, the most thorough, quick and effective blood cleanser known, calcium sulphide.

Remember this, too, that most pimple treatments reek with poison. And they are miserably slow besides.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers have not a particle of poison in them. They are free from mercury, biting drugs or venomous opiates. This is absolutely guaranteed. They cannot do any harm, but they always do good,—good that you can see in the mirror before your own eyes a few days after.

Don't be any longer humiliated by having a splotchy face. Don't have strangers stare at you, or allow your friends to be ashamed of you because of your face.

Your blood makes you what you are. The men and women who forge ahead are those with pure blood and pure faces.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers will make you happy, because your face will be a welcome sight not only to yourself when you look into the glass, but to everybody else who knows you and talks with you.

We want to prove to you that Stuart's Calcium Wafers are beyond doubt the best and quickest blood and skin purifier in the world—so we will send you a free sample as soon as we get your name and address. Send for it to-day, and then when you have tried the sample you will not rest contented until you have bought a 50c box at your druggists.

Send us your name and address today and we will at once send you by mail a sample package

Fruit Cures Constipation

"Fruit-a-tives" cure Constipation because they are Fruit Juices in Tablet form.

Constipation means a disordered liver. When the liver is weak, bile is lacking. And it is the bile—which the liver excretes—that flows into the intestines and moves the bowels.

Fruit is the great liver tonic. It invigorates the liver and causes more bile to flow into the bowels.

Purgatives, powders and purging mineral waters, never reach the liver. They irritate the bowels and FORCE them to move. They generally do harm. They NEVER do any PERMANENT good.

"Fruit-a-tives" are fruit juices—in which the medicinal action is many times intensified by the wonderful change which takes place when the juices of apples, oranges, figs and prunes are combined.

"Fruit-a-tives" have already proved a cure to many thousands of people in Canada.

"Fruit-a-tives" are free from calomel, cascara, senna and other bowel irritants. They are concentrated fruit juices with valuable tonics and internal antiseptics added.

"Fruit-a-tives" move the bowels regularly and easily every day — and thus cure Constipation.

50c. a box—6 boxes for $2.50. Sent on receipt of price if your druggist does not handle them.

S. S. Corona Was Wrecked

Thrilling Work of Saving Lives Of Passengers and Crew.

One Sailor Drowned—Vessel Had 100 Passengers On Board—Struck On Humboldt Bar During Heavy Gale—Heroic Attempts To Fasten Life Line—Boats Were Swamped and Capsized—Captain Last To Leave.

Eureka, Cal., March 4.—The steamer Corona (Captain Boyd), the best boat in the Pacific Coast Steamship Co.'s services between Eureka and San Francisco, lies straddling the north jetty on Humboldt Bay, a hopeless wreck.

With nearly 100 passengers aboard, the vessel struck on Saturday as Captain Boyd was attempting, in the teeth of a stinging wind and terrific bar flood, to drive her into port.

Women were hysterical and men were in panic, but reassuring words from the crew finally brought calm.

Assembled On Deck.

Then the passengers assembled on the hurricane deck, where they remained until the rescue work was undertaken a few hours later.

Soon after the ship struck a boat in charge of Quartermaster Gunn was lowered. It contained three of the crew and three steerage passengers. This boat capsized at once in the boiling surf, and Sailor Herrickson was drowned. Gunn and the others reached shore.

A second boat in charge of Second Officer N. V. Johann, was put off. Badly battered and leaking, this boat reached shore.

Tried to Carry a Line.

Then T. E. Sothern, night saloon watchman, formerly a marine in the United States navy, stripped to the waist and attempted to carry a line ashore. The line parted before he had gone far. Sothern was picked up by live savers.

Several attempts were made to shoot a line aboard, but each time the line fell short.

Finally Capt. Hennig of the life-savers reached the side of the Corona and picked up the line. Several unsuccessful attempts were made to work the life buoy, but it was not until near dark that Capt. Hennig and his men worked effectively. At that time the ship's boats had begun working, and at dusk Capt. Boyd, the last to leave the ship, stepped ashore.

The passengers were brought to Eureka. Nearly all had been drenched, and some were suffering greatly from the cold, exposure and nervous shock, but all will recover.

San Francisco, March 4.—The steamer Roanoke, the first boat to reach the steamer Corona when the latter was wrecked at the entrance to Eureka harbor, Saturday, arrived yesterday. Captain Dunham blames the United States lighthouse board for the wreck. There have been four steamers wrecked on the Humboldt Reef during the year—The Newsboy, Corinthian, Sequoia and Corona—and Captain Dunham declared that all might have been prevented if the lighthouse board had had the channel properly buoyed.

Dakota Ashore at Tokio.

Yokohama, March 4.—The Great Northern steamship Dakota went ashore in the Bay of Tokio last night. All the passengers are safe, and the agents are hopeful of saving her.

STEAMERS IN ICE.

P. E. I. Ferries Are Caught and Have Narrow Escape.

Charlottetown, P. E. I., March 4.—The winter steamer Stanley, bound to Prince Edward Island, stuck in the ice one mile from Pictou Island and had a narrow escape from destruction yesterday. The running ice almost laid her on her beam ends, breaking all the rails on the port side. So serious was the situation that the captain landed forty passengers, including the Abegweit hockey team and Jere McAuliffe Comedy Co., on Pictou Island. Early in the day fourteen passengers, mostly sturdy lumbermen, walked to the island shore, fifteen miles distant, over heavy ice, arriving almost exhausted. The Minto also stuck in the heavy ice near the Stanley. Both are out a week and are likely to remain for several days yet. In the meantime communication will be kept up by small boats hauled by hand between the capes.

ATTACKED BY WOLVES.

Two Men Have Narrow Escape From Pack of Hungry Animals.

Watson, Sask., March 4.—While engaged in erecting a dwelling north of Winner, two men, by name Bailey and Bannister, were attacked by three wolves. The leader sprang at Bailey's throat, but he encountered an upper cut that sent the animal back, while Bannister ran for his rifle. The latter would not work but was used effectively as a club. Bailey defending himself in like manner with a bit of wood. At last an opportunity was had to change cartridges and Bannister

SIX DAYS, SIXTEEN MILES.

Terrible Hardships Endured In Six-Hundred-Mile Western Trip.

Edmonton, Alta., March 4.—After a detour of nearly 600 miles over a trail blocked with snow, across rivers, and lakes, and through wooded sections through which they pushed their lonely way, Alexander Monkman, with his wife and family, reached Edmonton the other afternoon from the Grand Prairie County, west of the Peace River.

They left their ranch on New Year's day with two teams, and for the first five days were only able to make 16 miles. As they proceeded, the trail was much better. The snow was not so deep and the weather became milder. Game was plentiful on the journey, and food for the horses could be obtained at intervals. Despite the hard trip the entire party are in good health, and Mr. Monkman leaves in several days on the return journey. His wife and family will remain in the city for a few months.

GOT TWO REVOLVERS.

Wild West Scene Interrupted by Arrival of Mounted Police.

Saskatoon, Sask., March 4.—Imagining himself probably a small battery of artillery, or a South American army on parade, Wm. Rodgers attempted to create a bit of diversion in the Western Hotel yesterday.

He was in the bar-room when he drew out a revolver loaded to the limit, and commenced moving it about in an uncomfortably dangerous manner. He pointed the gun at his own head, and incidentally spoke of shooting up a few people, among others, himself.

The weapon was taken away from Rodgers by some men standing around. The reckless man went out, and after a while returned with a second revolver, and this he handled in about the same way. This time the Mounted Police were telephoned to, and Rodgers was arrested after a hard struggle, for he is a big man. He was soon in the cells.

SICK WOMAN'S SUICIDE.

While Wearied Watcher Sleeps, She Leaps From Upper Window.

New York, March 4.—Fearful that she might never regain her broken health, Miss Mary Maroney, who came here from Norwich, N. Y., to enter a hospital for treatment, threw herself from a third storey window in her brother's home here early yesterday and was instantly killed.

Miss Maroney's condition was such that a watcher sat by her bedside all last night, as she tossed restlessly about. Soon after daybreak she became more quiet, however, and sank into what appeared to be a deep sleep.

The tired watcher, believing the patient would sleep for some time, went into an adjoining room to rest. An instant later Miss Maroney crept from her bed and jumped from the window.

Her life was crushed out when her body struck the sidewalk. She was 35 years old.

NEW YORK FRIGHTENED.

Dynamite Explosion Awakes Thousands and Shakes Skyscrapers.

New York, March 4.—A dynamite magazine blew up at the Pennsylvania Railroad's North River tunnel at Homestead, N.J., yesterday, injuring a score of employes, and breaking nearly every window in Homestead and at Union Hill.

The shock was felt in this city, it shaking the skyscrapers perceptibly. Thousands of persons were awakened from sleep and badly frightened.

Homestead is four miles west of Hoboken.

Vatican's Veiled Threat.

Rome, March 4.—Authorities of the Vatican deny with emphasis the charges contained in a semi-official statement issued in Paris yesterday, that Mgr. Montagnini, the expelled secretary of the papal nunciature, was active in trying to prevent the visit of King Alfonso of Spain to Paris.

Commenting on the Status of the conflict with France, they explained that the Vatican could retaliate readily for the action of the French Government in making public part of the documents sequestered at the time of the expulsion of Mgr. Montagnini.

It would be easy for the Vatican to publish documents exchanged before the rupture of the concordant, showing the anti-Italian and anti-British attitude of the French Government,

Cash Business

It is scarcely necessary to call attention to the advantages both to buyer and seller of the CASH SYSTEM of doing business which is now so universally recognized in the business world. The merchant who sells his goods for CASH and has the CASH to buy is able to do much better for his customers than those doing a credit business with its necessary losses including office expenses, bad debts, interests, etc. Where an extended credit business is done, those who pay their bills promptly are made to pay for the losses incurred by those who buy goods and fail to pay for them.

It is our intention to adhere firmly to the CASH SYSTEM and we rely on our customers to assist us in carrying out this principle which is so advantageous to both.

Standing as we do directly between the world's largest producers and the consumers, it is our determination to make our service the most efficient to be found in CANADA. This can only be accomplished by buying and selling our goods for prompt CASH.

TIMELY TOPICS.

The first robin, it would appear, is not yet in our midst. About time, too.

Apropos of the fact that the apparatus at the D. and D. Institute is now pumping water into the city mains, a correspondent wants to know if the use of that water would be liable to interfere in any way with his wife's gift of speech. Well, what do you think of that? Some people are always borrowing trouble.

No trouble to tell where the good people live these days. They all have ashes and sand on the ice on the sidewalk in front of their houses.

Thinking people must have been greatly shocked lately by the appalling number of accidents recorded—if they can be called accidents, for it is an open question whether anything is an accident which might, by the exercise of caution and common sense, have been prevented. In this connection it is timely to note a sermon preached last night by Rev. Mr. Drumm, pastor of John St. Church. Mr. Drumm is a former newspaper man, and can therefore, safely be depended upon to keep in touch with what is going on during the passing hour.

The number of fatal accidents which have taken place lately furnished the reverend gentleman with a theme, and in the course of a thoughtful and highly interesting sermon he struck out cheerfully at many evils, and did not call a spade an agricultural implement. It was apparent at first that Rev. Mr. Drumm was going after something in deadly earnest, for he chose two texts. one, from Deuteronomy, showing how the Jews, in early times, were commanded to build battlements round the roofs of their houses, in order to safeguard human life, and the other, from Exodus, which commanded that the ox which killed a man should be stoned to death; if it were the ox's first offence, the owner should go free, but, if it were the ox's second offence, the owner should also be put to death.

Then, in keen and striking words, the preacher spoke of the horrors which confront one on the front page of nearly any newspaper these days, and said it pointed to only one conclusion—human life was held too cheap in Canada. Referring to the Hochelega school horror, he pointed to the fact that the school trustees had been advised to put fire escapes on the school, but had refused. And then the abstract school board came in for a rare trimming. In many instances composed of fossils, who were they ordered to equip a man for work in the harvest field, would bring him a sickle and a wooden rake. And on such men as these the safety and lives of tender little children depended! In some instances matters of public safety were left in the hands of City and Town Councils, and too many men sat in those bodies who were "playing to the gallery," who favored economy even at the risk of human life, because they feared they would not be re-elected if the tax rate were raised.

The Jews made and enforced a law which made the owner of a murderous ox responsible with his life for the second offence of the animal, and surely some law fixing the same amount of responsibility was needed in Canada to-day. The first thought of the average corporation was "dividends," and they seemed willing to sacrifice any number of other people's lives to obtain them. Apparently they cared naught for the widows and orphans they made, or the countless tears they caused to flow. And it was time a stop was put to that sort of thing. Human life was sacred, and no man or set of men should be allowed to endanger it for individual or corporate greed.

What a mistake to use coarse Salt for cooking! Fine, pungent WINDSOR SALT adds such a daintiness to the food! 138

It was time for the Government to take this matter up, and see that the responsibility was fixed for these accidents, and see that punishment was meted out, whether the guilty man was a section man or director. The richest asset of any nation was its men, and the Government must protect them by making rules for public safety, based on the judgment of experts. And it was the duty of all Christian men to support the Government in so doing, no matter what their politics were, for human life was more precious than party, though partyism, alas! was the curse of Canada. And with this rap at Grits and Tories alike the reverend gentleman concluded a sermon which gave those who heard it considerable to talk about on their way home.

The railroads still keep trying to solve the old problem; "How can two trains be made to pass each other on one track?" If we would not be looked on as a butter-in, we might suggest that it's about time to give the problem up. It would save funerals and a lot of expense.

The question has often been asked, how much are a man's lilacs worth? It appears to be answered in a despatch from Wellston, O. which states that Samuel Beatty, 75 years old, was awarded by the Circuit Court $101 damages against the Southern Ohio Gas Company for the loss of a luxuriant growth of whiskers, burned off in a gas explosion in that city two years ago.

The Montreal Gazette, published by one of the leading Anglican laymen in Montreal, has this to say:

"The British House of Commons by a vote of 198 to 90 has declared that the Church of England should be disestablished and disendowed. This was with less than half of the members present. In itself it does not mean much, but it indicates what may soon happen, and what some Church of England people do not seem to be afraid of. The Church of England supporters should be as able to maintain its work as are the so-called free churches alongside of it to maintain theirs. And disestablishment would relieve it of the liability to having its affairs interfered with by a Parliament hostile or indifferent to its welfare, as this latest vote shows one branch of the present Parliament to be."

The Toronto Globe has of late devoted no little of its editorial space to the denunciation of Messrs. Fowler, Pope et al., for having purchased tracts of land in the Northwest from the Canadian Pacific Railway Company at the market price at the time of application, viz., $3.50 per acre, but has found neither space nor time to devote to the speculations of friends of the Government and members of Parliament supporting the Government, for having been favored by the Interior Department with thousands of acres of land at $1 an acre. Why? Because it is not honest.

"Citoyenne" makes the following pertinent suggestion;

Dear Sir, — In view of the present scarcity of water in certain parts of the city might one offer a suggestion? As it seems impossible to keep the water mains from freezing could not the city watering carts every day, or even every other second day, visit the, at present, waterless streets and give the unfortunate householders a chance to fill from them their tubs and other vessels? I believe this was done in Toronto some years ago—could it not be done here, too?

"O, I tried one of those hair tonics some time ago and it never did me a bit of good."

That's what many people are saying to-day when they refuse Herpicide a trial.

It would be as sensible to say "I never travel on a railroad because I often see collisions mentioned in the papers."

Newbro's Herpicide is specially made to destroy the germ that is living on the roots of your hair.

That is why it is so exceedingly efficacious—it is there for the sole purpose of ridding the hair of this parasitic growth, after which the hair grows as nature intended.

Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. Two sizes, 50c and $1.00. J. S. McKeown, special agent.

His place in the money order department has been taken by Mr. La Roche. When the Board of Trade's deputation has interviewed the Postmaster-General and shown him the necessity for permanence in the staff through the encouragement that better and progressive salaries will give, we may hope to have an efficient post office service.

A Large Funeral.

The funeral of the late Mr. Wm. Hamilton was held on Saturday afternoon, and many citizens were present at the obsequies. Services were held at St. Thomas' Church, and were conducted by the rector, Rev. Rural Dean Beamish. The services were fully choral, and very impressive. Many handsome floral tributes were placed upon the casket by relatives and friends. The bearers were four sons and two sons-in-law of the deceased. The remains were interred in the Belleville cemetery.

The Ontario Budget.

That the affairs of this good province of Ontario are in capable hands and are being well administered was evidenced by the financial statement presented by Col. Matheson in the Legislature on Thursday. It was a cheerful presentation of an admirable situation in provincial affairs, and showed that under the present administration the finances of the province are being put on a safe basis. Although the Government have practiced all needful economy, yet they have made no attempt to hoard the income, but rather to expend it in such a way as must yield large returns to the people in progress and happiness.

A warning note is sounded to the municipalities. Col. Matheson sees in the five million dollar increase in municipal debts a cause for serious reflection, if not alarm. The cities and towns, he declares, are wasting their money, and he calls for a revival in the public interest in municipal government. He points out what is apparent to most people, that the best citizens must be induced actively to engage in the management of civic affairs.

Highly pleasing, indeed, is the announcement that the Temiskaming Railway has been made a paying investment. That this has been brought about largely through the efforts of the chairman of the Railway Board, Mr. Englehart, of Petrolea, is especially gratifying. Mr. Englehart has given largely of his services to the province, and it is well to know that those have been crowned with success.

Cut this out and take it to R. Templeton & Co.'s drug store and get a free sample of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. These tablets are far superior to pills, being easier to take and more pleasant in effect. They correct disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels.

Douglas vs. Bensley. — Judgment (H.) on appeal by defendant from report of Judge of County Court of Northumberland and Durham, to whom, as a special referee, this action was referred, and upon motion by plaintiff for judgment. The chief matter in dispute was as to the proper construction of a written agreement between the parties, dated Oct. 8th, 1901, in regard to the sale by defendant to plaintiff of defendant to plaintiff of defendant's property. Report varied by deducting $167.22 from the total amount found due to plaintiff, leaving the total amount due $637.17. Judgment for plaintiff for the amount found due by the report as varied with costs of the action and three-fourths of the costs of opposing the present appeal, such last-mentioned costs to include plaintiff's motion for judgment. Judgment for defendant on counterclaim to stand as in report, and report in all other respects to stand. E. G. Porter (Belleville), for defendant. E. C. S. Huycke, K. C., for plaintiff.

SPORTING NOTES.

Wanderers beat Ottawa 10-6 on Saturday night, thus proving, in the minds of many people that, with rough work cut out, the Senators are not so many, after all. The Wanderers now have only one more easy match to play before going west after the Stanley cup, and, judging by reports from the west, they are likely to get it, too.

Prospects look bright for one of the best hockey matches ever seen on local ice next Thursday night. The Guelph men are coming in full strength. The locals are practising consistently, and it will be a swift bunch that stacks up against the lads from the Royal City. There are few better players anywhere than the Cornwall men who will perform, and we can almost, at this distance, hear the cheer which will greet "Roddy" McMillan when he appears on the ice. The local lad, Pepper, who played such a fine game for the juniors this season, will, we are told, turn out for practice and try for a place on the team which plays next Thursday. He should make good, even in such fast company.

The reserved seat plan for the great hockey match next Thursday, Guelph vs. Belleville, is now open at Burrows' office. Get your seats early.

Winchester has settled any differences he had with the Pittsburg management, and will continue at his old job.

It is said that Ottawa ticket speculators reaped a harvest Saturday. Tickets sold from $5 upward, and in a few instances reached $15 for choice locations.

How Durnan Was Beaten.

Boat Race Office, Nepean, March 2.—Geo Towns, of Sydney, successfully defended his title of world's champion sculler to-day in his race with Edward Durnan, of Toronto, Canada, nephew of the former champion, Edward Hanlan. The race was for £500 a side and the championship. Durnan has been in the country for two months, and went to the post trained to the minute. Towns was never in better condition. He was a phenomenal favorite, although the Canadian did not lack for backers. An immense crowd turned out for the race, despite the dull, threatening weather. Towns won by three lengths

There was a delay of fifteen minutes at the start, owing to the rain. The start was made by mutual consent at the first attempt, Towns having the better of the start and the inside course. The wind was light against the rowers. After rowing a minute Durnan forged ahead, with a killing fast stroke, and led for the half mile by half a length; time, 3 minutes 9 seconds. Towns, rowing strongly, came level, and at the five furlongs led by a quarter of a length, with powerful strokes which Durnan opposed with short, snappy work. Towns, half a length ahead, at the three-quarters spurted and led by two lengths at the mile. Durnan kept wide, pulling gamely, but Towns held him easily. Then Durnan, by a great spurt, pulled up half a length, and Towns responded and widened the gap; then eased, rowing 24 strokes to the minute. This was followed by another spurt by Durnan, pulling 34 a minute while Towns kept at 24, with a longer stroke and easier slide work.

It was pretty work, and both men were cheered by the spectators. Towns hugged the shore, getting the most of the lee from the slight wind, Durnan plugging along in the centre, dipping neatly, but not getting pace sufficient to overhaul the leader. At the two miles Towns led by three lengths, and the race thereafter was a procession, Durnan occasionally gaining a yard.

The champion, watchful of every movement and expecting a fresh spurt, responded at the two and a half miles to a renewed effort on the part of Durnan. The last spurt of Durnan was at the quarter-mile from the winning post, but Towns, pulling magnificently, widened the gap and finished brilliantly, with 30 strokes a minute, three lengths ahead.

According to Fitzharding, the judge, the time was 21 minutes 27 seconds.

The weeds in the river occasionally troubled the rowers, but no mishaps or hitch of any kind occurred, and the most friendly spirit was exhibited by both men when they shook hands. Durnan seemed to be leaving the race to a finish spurt, hoping to outclass his opponent, and, although rowing grimly and pluckily at the finish, he found Towns of superior quality. The finish was well worth looking at, but the whole affair was

Durnan said he did the best he could, but the other man was better. Towns led him first; then he (Durnan) spurted and and led till the three-quarter mile. Towns then took the lead and kept it. "It was a very hard race for me," said Durnan. "I am not able to say what it was for Towns. I am likely to challenge again. I have my ticket booked for home for March 11."

Stanbury said Towns pulled across the river oftener than Durnan and gave Durnan his wash. Durnan only crossed twice. Durnan is quite satisfied that he was fairly beaten.

Practically there was no betting at two to one on Towns. The offering had no takers, and, as there were no takers, there was no betting on the race. Sultry weather prevailed till the finish. Towns said he held his opponent all the while and never felt pressed, but he took no chance. Whenever Durnan spurted he responded and shut him off. Neither man was greatly distressed. Both men at the finish were wildly cheered. Both were satisfied with the arrangements, and Durnan expressed satisfaction at the reception accorded him by the public.

J. S. McKEOWN, DRUGGIST, OFFERS THE PEOPLE OF BELLEVILLE VINOL, A BODY-BUILDING, STRENGTHENING AND HEALING MEDICINE.

We have a warranted cure for all thin, tired, debilitated, nervous people. It is Vinol, the most delicious and valuable preparation of cod liver oil ever discovered. Vinol tones up the digestive organs, cures all stomach troubles, makes rich, red blood, creates strength, and builds up firm, healthy flesh.

As we have so often stated in these columns, Vinol is the greatest strength creator known to medicine, and we do not believe there is a person in this vicinity but what Vinol will benefit at this season of the year; it never fails to make the weak strong and the sick well.

Vinol is just as valuable for all hacking coughs, chronic colds, throat and bronchial troubles, and we return money if it fails. J. S. McKeown, druggist.

March Weather As Foretold By Hicks.

In his weather forecasts for March, Rev. Irl Hicks says from the 2nd to the 7th will be marked by rising temperature, cloudiness, rain and electric storms. Then will come a change to colder, with March blizzards in the northwest. Vicious electrical storms are promised in the south. About the 17th there is to be rain, wind and thunder southward, and snow, blizzards and cold northward. As for the balance of the month, disentangled of astronomical technicalities, it seems to promise, in plain English, disagreeable weather generally.

NEW YORK BY NIGHT.

The Spectacle of Its Lights From Rivers and Harbor.

By whatever route you reach or leave Manhattan Island in the evening the river lights are beautiful. On the North river the spectacle varies according to the hour and season, for the downtown lights in Manhattan are more numerous when the days are short and the tenants of the great office buildings have to light up to finish their day's work. Across from the lower Jersey ferries late in the afternoon of a winter day glow and sparkle the great company of tall shafts grouped against the sky, each one pierced to the top with regular rows of shining windows. A memorable sight they make, those shafts and huge blocks of gleaming holes, reaching far above their neighbors that come between them and the river. There is much in that spectacle to recompense a tired man for being a commuter, and nowhere else on earth is there the like of it.

And, besides the tall shafts and the intervening lower lights and the glow of the streets that run to the river and border it, there are all the river lights—the ferryboats, with their long rows of bright windows, hurrying on their various courses; the sound steamers going out, other steamers coming in; all manner of lights more sober on all manner of shipping; the street glare and the ferry house and wharf lights ashore, and, higher up, here and there the obtrusive and commercial but none the less radiant advertising signs.

The downtown office building lights go out early, most of them, but up the river some of the tall uptown hotels continue, all the evening and in spite of curtained windows, to be lighthouses.

On the East river, besides the city lights and the river lights, are the high, curving bridges, very striking and beautiful, with their unobstructed outlines marked by the glow of the electric bulbs.

There is poetry in these river lights, bordered and framed by the dark shining water and reflected in it.—E. S. Martin in Harper's.

SALT RIVER.

It is a Real Stream, Although Not a Navigable One.

Salt river, sacred to defeated candidates, is a real stream. While not navigable, it is used every winter as an ice harbor by the towboats which go out of Pittsburg for the south.

Salt river empties into the Ohio above twenty-five miles south of Louisville. It is a small stream, which flows from the Kentucky hills to the great water, and is as tortuous, as crooked and as unpleasant to navigate as the mind can imagine. Yet it is navigated for a short distance from its mouth by steamers of light draft. Flatboats and rafts are floated down upon its bosom. Before the civil war it was an important stream in the matter of bringing Kentucky whisky down in the flatboats to a point where they could be unloaded to a river steamer. Refractory slaves were generally assigned to the task of bringing these boats down, as the work was arduous.

Salt river became a bugaboo among the negroes, and it was from the unpleasant character of the work on this river that "a trip up Salt river" came to be used in politics to express the destination of a defeated candidate.

There is not a river captain or pilot in Pittsburg who does not know Salt river, and there are few who have not sought shelter within its mouth when the ice was running out of the Ohio.

The salt name is supposed to have come from the salt springs which flow into it at its source. It is also said the name grew out of the fact that great quantities of salt produced in the Kentucky country are floated down this stream.—Fuel.

A Dramatic Death.

A sergeant major of an infantry regiment stationed in Bremen was sentenced to a slight disciplinary punishment for having mortally wounded a man with a revolver in the course of a fight. He appealed against this, but was informed that his appeal had been rejected. He then ordered his men to load their rifles with blank cartridges, but during their absence reloaded them with ball cartridges. He then drew up his men in firing line and carefully showed them how to aim their rifles straight at his heart. With the utmost calm he then ordered, "Fire!" and fell with four bullets through his heart.

To Be Refilled.

In one of the suburbs of a big city is the site of a well known school of theology, from which go out each week end many members of the senior class to try their voices as "supplies."

A passenger on a Monday morning train was surprised at the number of men who got off at that station.

"Who are all those chaps getting off here?" he asked the brakeman.

"Them?" asked the brakeman. "Oh, they're returned empties for the college!"

Easy.

Teacher—Now, boys, what is the virtue of magnanimity? Pupils — Aw? Teacher—What is it if a big boy wanted an apple very badly and were to meet a small boy with one in a place where nobody could take the small boy's part— Class (with eager illumination) — Dat's a cinch!

A Discarded Jack.

The one in gauze smiled.

"He doesn't do it at all well, does he, dear?" she said.

CZAR TO BE SILENT.

Second Russian Parliament Won't Hear a Speech From the Throne.

St. Petersburg, March 4.—The Russian Parliament, the second under the constitution decreed under Emperor Nicholas, Oct. 3, will assemble in the Tauride Palace to-morrow.

The Douma will be called to order by one of the senior dignitaries of the empire, but there will be no speech from the throne.

When the officers of the Lower House have been elected, the Ministerial program, with the financial budget, will be introduced, after which the House will have an opportunity of working out its own existence.

The chief interest is centred in the budget and the question of a responsible Ministry.

The composition of the present Parliament is closely patterned upon that of the first body, but it lacks a number of interesting personalities who have been eliminated on account of the signing of the Viborg manifesto of July 23.

Assassinated by Six Men.

Reval, Russia, March 4.—Baron Budberg, ex-chief of the Esthonian nobility and a member of the Council of the Empire, was set upon by six unknown men, while driving near his country seat, yesterday, and killed.

Of two servants accompanying the baron, one was killed and the other was wounded. The pockets of the dead men were rifled by their assailants, who escaped.

SWEPT BY REFORMERS.

In London County Council Elections Municipal Party Gain 43 Seats.

London, March 4.—The returns at a late hour of the county council elections, which exceeded in bitterness the parliamentary contest of 1905, indicate that the Municipal Reformers have gained 43 seats and the Progressives and the Labor party one each.

The Socialistic or Labor party played an unprecedented part, fighting both the Progressives and the Municipal Reformers.

The Municipal Reformers have claimed that the defeat of the Progressives would be a serious blow to the Liberal Government.

The outgoing council consisted of 83 Progressives, 34 Municipal Reformers and one independent.

WOMEN TO HAVE VOTES.

British Premier Will Support Measure Extending Franchise to Women.

London, March 4.—Premier Campbell-Bannerman, who up to the present time has refused to receive a deputation of the women suffragists, has now written a letter in which he promises support "with much pleasure" the bill presented by W. H. Dickinson, M. P., to give the suffrage to

TIMELY TOPICS.

HOW HAVE YOU DECIDED MY BOY?

(S. E. Kiser.)

Have you chosen the route you shall take through the year?
It is time you decided, my boy,
You may march with the proud or go skulking in fear,
You may find the world cold or be warmed by its cheer.
You may wisely create or destroy;
You may dawdle along through the glorious days,
You may stray with the lazy in profitless ways,
Or bravely set forth to be worthy of praise;
How have you decided, my boy?

Are you going to face without fear
what you must?
Have you hoisted your banner, my boy?
Have you made up your mind to be worthy of trust,
To stand for your rights and to dare to be just
In the stress and the strife and the joy?
You may hide in dismay at the end of the year,
You may feel that the earth is all barren and drear,
Or the world may be fair and the skies may clear!
How have you decided, my boy?

Mr. H. S. Clements, member for West Kent, ventured the opinion before the South Essex Conservative convention that the Government at Ottawa was "the most corrupt in the world." This is saying much. But is it an exaggeration?

A bill giving Rhode Island women the power to vote for Presidential electors was passed in the State Senate last week at Providence by a vote of 19 to 16.

The prevailing fad among American girls and women of going hatless in public, even in cities, does not prevail in Europe, says a U. S. paper There a hatless young woman is assumed to be a servant or a factory girl.

The Government will certainly have public support in the carrying out of the new prison programme as announced by Hon. Mr. Hanna. He intimated that an auxiliary prison is to be established at some point in northern Ontario, where the convicts will be employed in agricultural work and in the work of roadmaking. Such an arrangement, says the Hamilton Herald, "is far better for the prisoners as well as for the public, than the sale of their labor to contractors, to be utilized in indoor machine work."

A writer in Good Housekeeping says: After several women of our church had been ill with colds contracted through working on the concrete floor of the church basement, preparing suppers and dinners. I compiled the following statistics of a dinner which I helped to serve;—Eight women for four hours at 25 cents an hour, $8; groceries donated by the same women, $4; laundry, 50 cents; janitor service, heating and lighting, $5; a total expenditure of $17.50. This does not count breakage or provisions donated by other than the eight women who served the dinner. Forty dinners were served at twenty-five cents each, making a total of $10. Many of these were served to families of the ladies serving. If we had given cash equivalent of our services and donations we should have made almost twice as much.

The Lock Canal.

The time required for the construction of the lock canal at Panama is about eight years, or virtually one-half the time that the sea level would consume in its construction. The expense in round numbers, including the interest on the investment during the additional eight years that the sea level canal would take for building and the loss of profit during those eight years from the tolls which would be earned with a lock canal would make the difference in cost between $150,000,000 and $300,000,000. In other words, the time and cost of the sea level canal are just about double that of the lock canal.—From Secretary Taft's "The Panama Canal" in Century.

Mexican Economy.

There is probably no more economically governed country in the world than Mexico. New York city spends more than a hundred million dollars, gold, a year for municipal government, while Mexico, a vast nation with several times as many people, an army and foreign relations, is governed for less than that amount in silver.—Modern Mexico.

Emigrants to Canada Cannot Find Sufficient Number of Berths.

London, March 4.—(C. A. P.)—The number of emigrants going to Canada is so enormous they have difficulty in obtaining berths on ships. The central unemployed body send 3,500 in March and April.

Gilbert Parker will draw Lloyd George's attention to the fact that any arrangement of Canada and Germany whereby the surtax is removed will, in the absence of reciprocal arrangement between the Dominion and Britain, diminish the preference Britain enjoys, one half. As the matter is of importance, he will ask what action he proposes to take.

The King Weather Bound.

Dover, England, March 4.—King Edward will be compelled to postpone his departure for the continent today if there is no abatement in the great number of accidents in the English Channel.

There are so many calls for assistance that there are not enough tugs to go around. The last one at Dover was sent out last night to help the Red Star Liner Vanderland, which is ashore on Goodwin Sands.

The position of the steamship is not believed to be dangerous, but the fog is so dense that it is impossible to see a ship's length.

Taking Canada's Wheat.

Ottawa, March 4.—P. B. McNamara, Canadian commercial agent in Manchester, writes that imports of wheat from Canada into the United Kingdom for the year ending Dec. 31, 1906, increased 40 per cent., as compared with the preceding year, and that Canada has now moved up to fourth place in the great wheat exporting countries of the world. The exports from Russia for the last year fell off nearly 40 per cent. Mr. McNamara says also that Alaska salmon is being sold in England under the label of British Columbia salmon, to the discredit of the latter.

Montreal, March 4.—The Canadian Pacific Royal Mail steamship Empress of Ireland, which sailed from Halifax last Sunday morning at 1.15 arrived at the Bar Light at Liverpool yesterday at 7 a.m., three hours and

THE "LIVING IN" SYSTEM.

Hardships of Shop Assistants In English Business Houses.

"Shop assistants" and clerks in retail and wholesale houses and similar establishments in England often endure great hardship on account of the survival of the mediaeval "living in" rules by which they eat, sleep and work all under the same roof. A determined effort is now being made to do away with the evils of the system. J. Macpherson, general secretary of the Union of Shop Assistants, quotes Dr. Norman Kerr as follows: "It is impossible for me to find language strong enough to convey a hundredth part of the mischief which I have seen arise from the excessive hours of labor of shop assistants who have been under my professional care. The great length of the hours at work I have seen break down strong constitutions, seriously aggravated as the evil has been by the dyspeptic misery and disease induced by the necessary bolting of food through the far too short period allowed for meals."

Secretary Macpherson writes: "The following house rules indicate the 'homelike' nature of the accommodation provided, not only for young people, but equally for adult men and women: 'No pictures or photos are to disfigure the walls. Any one so doing will be charged with the repairs. All bedrooms must be cleared by 8 a. m. On Sundays bedrooms to be cleared by 10:30 a. m. and not entered again till 12:30 p. m. Assistants must not lean out of the window or loiter in the passages or doorsteps or pavements near the house and are on no account to bring strangers into the house. No flowers to be put in water glasses or bottles. House door is closed at 11 p. m. Gas turned off fifteen minutes later. Any one having a light after that time will be discharged.'

"That the employers will not relinquish such a profitable source of revenue without a struggle is obvious," the same official continues. "Take the following illustration: An employer boards and feeds a staff of 500 assistants. He decides to reduce the cost of breakfasts to the extent of 1 penny a head per diem. This economy in housekeeping gives him an additional profit of £760 ($3,800) a year on the cheeseparing of one meal alone. The unfortunate assistant, 'who can leave if he doesn't like the food provided,' must deplete his meager wage to buy extra food to satisfy hunger or to tempt the palate to swallow the unappetizing fare provided by the firm."

A Modern Samson.

Possessed of Samsonlike strength, Albert Fisher of Quebec saved his life by a remarkable exhibition of his power. Fisher was employed at a stone crusher, and his duties consisted in feeding rocks into the huge machine. To aid this he stood on a platform just above the crusher. He had just dropped a fifty pound bowlder into the machine when his foot slipped and he fell headlong between the steel jaws.

No person was near to stop the engine. Bracing his shoulders against the steel crushers, which were slowly closing, the sturdy workman exerted all his great strength in one powerful effort. For a moment the machine stopped; then the massive sides drew apart, and finally there was a rending of the steel joints, and the crusher fell to pieces.—Philadelphia North American.

Frugal King Leopold.

A few years ago King Leopold of the Belgians made a Norwegian tour and in due course drove overland in a chaise to Stavanger, where one of the large hotels was stirred by the news that it was about to be favored by royal patronage. The dinner hour of the other guests was postponed in order that the king might have the huge dining room for his sole use, and other preparations were made for the adequate entertainment of his majesty. The sumptuous repast was served in style, apparently to the king's complete satisfaction. At the end of the repast he beckoned to the maitre d'hotel and without a word handed him in settlement a tourist's coupon. Even when on pleasure bent King Leopold has a frugal mind.

Bad Men of the West.

Searchers for real western color with which to illuminate their tales of the frontier have for some time been complaining that all the snap and ginger of the old life in the west had departed. To a certain extent this is true. The genuine Indians have nearly all followed the buffalo over the divide into the happy hunting grounds of the Great Spirit. The modern cowboy is less careless with his shooting iron and his branding iron than he was in the old days, but it is an error to believe that all of the picturesque deviltry which gave color to early days in the west has been eliminated. The bad man with the gun out on the fringe of civilization is fully as bad as his predecessor of earlier years.—Portland Oregonian.

The "Bobs" of America.

A London writer calls General Miles the "Bobs" of America. In describing the famous soldier this writer says: "Despite his valorous record and his sixty-seven years he is a Beau Brummel. With his perfectly fitting frock coat, gray tie, gray suede gloves, tan spats, tan waistcoat and gleaming patent leathers, this grizzled campaigner could give points to any Burlington Bertie. He is remarkably handsome too. With his Roman nose and pointed chin, his upturned eyebrows and mustache and his piercing eyes, he reminds one of an eagle scenting its prey from afar. It is a soldier's face,

Give Fair Play to

A really reliable remedy for headache—Zutoo.

If you have got it into your head that Zutoo Tablets will hurt you, you are mistaken.

It isn't fair to us for you to judge Zutoo by the drug cures.

It isn't fair to yourself to suffer from headache, when this really harmless vegetable headache cure is within your reach.

The fair thing for both of us is—to judge Zutoo on its merits—to test it.

If you find it does not cure your headache, sick, nervous or otherwise, in twenty minutes, and leave you feeling good every time—no bad after effects, then discard it.

But do not condemn it unfairly without a trial, and keep on suffering from headaches. You really do not have to, and one trial of Zutoo will prove it.

All we ask for Zutoo is fair play—that you give it a trial before concluding as to its merits or demerits.

Wont you do this? You'll be glad ever after if you do.

We'll send trial tablets for nothing, or you can buy them at dealers in 10c. and 25c. packages.

FLATS IN ANCIENT ROME.

Big Apartment Houses and Concrete Foundations Are Old.

"How an old Roman would laugh if he should suddenly pop in here and hear us talk about the apartment house as a product of modern civilization!" the Washington Post quotes a scholarly looking gentleman as saying.

"'Get up to date,' he would probably say. 'Why, we had apartment houses as early as 455 B. C., and big ones, too, some of them sixty and seventy feet high. Why don't you think of something new?'

"Those apartment houses were called insulae (islands), and a very appropriate name it was, considering that they housed a floating population. And the tenants had their troubles, too, just as they have today.

"There was the same hue and cry then about the height of the buildings, and in the time of Augustus there was a law restricting the height of dwelling houses to seventy feet, but this law was evaded with all the impertinence of the twentieth century. And the offenders were unpunished, for there were in Rome at the time of Augustus over 1,500,000—which was crowding the city some—and, of course, the natural tendency was to build up rather than out.

"As for skyscrapers—well, those old Romans knew something about them. The pediment of the Temple of the Sun rose about 260 feet above the Campus Martius, in which it was situated. The palace of Septimus Severus rose

Drusilla's Choosing

By Constance D'Arcy Mackay

Copyright, 1906, by M. M. Cunningham

Gordon Keith and Tod Rogers were eating supper in what they called the "living room" of the shack when the stage, dust covered and lumbering, drew up in front of the door. There was a girl on the seat by the driver. She leaned forward impetuously.

"This is El Paso, Mr. Keith's ranch, isn't it?" she demanded by way of introduction. "I'm Drusilla Cameron, and I've come to surprise my brother Ned."

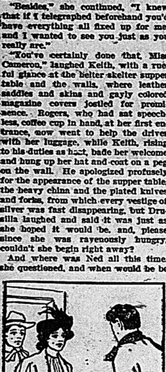
And before the astonished Keith could reply she had scrambled down over the wheel, while the stage driver grinned widely in delight at the situation and in admiration of the girl.

She was all in brown, from her pongee dust coat to her low shoes. Her hair was chestnut color, and so were the eyes that looked out frankly from under the rim of her smart traveling hat.

"Besides," she continued, "I knew that if I telegraphed beforehand you'd have everything all fixed up for me, and I wanted to see you just as you really are."

"You've certainly done that, Miss Cameron," laughed Keith, with a rueful glance at the helter skelter supper table and the walls, where leather saddles and skins and gayly colored magazine covers jostled for prominence. Rogers, who had sat speechless, coffee cup in hand, at her first entrance, now went to help the driver with her luggage, while Keith, rising to his duties as host, bade her welcome and hung up her hat and coat on a peg on the wall. He apologized profusely for the appearance of the supper table, the heavy china and the plated knives and forks, from which every vestige of silver was fast disappearing, but Drusilla laughed and said it was just as she hoped it would be, and, please since she was ravenously hungry, couldn't she begin right away?

And where was Ned all this time, she questioned, and when would he be in? She was dying to see him! He had told her how well and tanned he was and how good Keith and Rogers had been to him during his four months' stay. She could never thank them enough for what they had done for the boy, and—oh, there he was now!



"I WANTED TO SEE YOU JUST AS YOU REALLY ARE."

And she rushed out the doorway as a fair headed young fellow of eighteen came galloping up on his broncho.

"We'll clear out and let them have supper together," said Keith to Rogers, "and while that's going on I'll fix up my room for her, and you can ride over to Jessop's and get Mrs. Malone. I guess she'll be willing to cook for us for a couple of weeks. She isn't equal to the Waldorf-Astoria, but she can get a good plain meal."

"This sure is the most excitement we've had since Big Pete shot up Las Gorro," drawled Rogers. "I'm off!"

Later in the evening Drusilla, disclaiming all fatigue, sat outside with Keith's banjo on her knee and sang them all the latest songs till, as Ned declared, "you could just see the lights of Broadway and hear the clack-clack of the hansoms rolling by. Seems strange to think of it out here," he added half beneath his breath.

From where they were sitting they could see the Texas plains rolling away to the sky line, shadowy, immutable, full of the mystery of the night. The wind blew past them sweet with the breath of great spaces. The stars shone very large and bright and clear.

Drusilla's lips parted.

"No, this isn't very much like it," she echoed.

"Are you glad?" Keith challenged.

"I don't know—yet," she answered slowly. "It's the first time I've ever been on the plain. In fact, it's the first time that I've ever been away from the metropolis, for summer resorts full of city people don't count, do they?"

"They do not!" said Keith decidedly. For an instant their eyes met, and Drusilla was conscious of the strength of a man who seemed as immutable as the plains themselves. He was above rect, searching gaze of those accustomed to looking at great distances. In the days that followed it was Gordon Keith who monopolized the greater share of her time and thoughts, it was with him she talked and tramped and rode. Oh, those rides—with the horse's feet thudding under her, her face glowing with the exhilaration and her hair loosening and streaming out like a bright pennant!

"It's wonderful, isn't it?" she said breathlessly, reining in, that she might fasten her rebellious hairpins. "Nothing between you and the sky, br," with a wave of the whip, "nothing between you and the edge of the world."

Keith turned to her.

"Then you are beginning to feel the call of it," he said quietly, "as I hoped you would. And now I can say what I've been wanting to say ever since I first met you: Will you marry me, Drusilla?"

She shook her head.

"I'm sorry," she said softly, "oh, so sorry! It would be venal to tell you how much your friendship has meant to me—you must have guessed that already. But what you ask is impossible."

"Then you do not—care?"

"Care!" Her voice wavered on the word. "Ah, you don't know how near I've come to loving you and how I've fought it down, for I knew I couldn't give up what's calling to me from the city I've left—all the cotillons and dinners and teas of the life I love. And you once belonged to it too. You've confessed as much. Why," she made a little beseeching gesture, "why did you ever give it up?"

"Because I was sick of being a puppet in evening clothes, because I was tired to death of the shams and the tinsel and the falseness, and I wanted to get out where I could breathe deep and look up to the stars and feel that I was a man. Drusilla"—

"No, no," she begged. "Don't ask me, for I couldn't, I couldn't!"

In silence they rode toward the shack. The long light of the sunset glow was across the plains. Bright clouds were piled in the west. Against the molten sky of red and gold a cowboy rider loped in picturesque silhouette.

"It's big and free and beautiful," Drusilla murmured to herself, "but it's not for me!"

A week later she went east, and her going left a great gap in the lives of the three men at El Paso. Ned perhaps missed her least of all, for he was to go home in November. Rogers openly mourned her departure.

"Don't seem natural," he complained, "not to hear her step about the house or her songs in the evening."

But Keith, who felt her going most, kept silent, carrying with him a longing that would not be satisfied.

Drusilla had given her promise to write, yet she was slow in fulfilling it. Even Ned grumbled as day after day went by and no word came from her save a telegram saying she had arrived safely and a few picture postal cards covered with hasty scribbling. Rogers made excuses for going to the mail oftener than was really necessary, and his persistency was at length rewarded, for one day he returned with three letters in Drusilla's handwriting. His was full of amusing incidents, Ned's of gossip and sisterly affection, but to Keith she wrote:

"You are right after all. I am smothered with conventionality and weary of riding my prescribed length in the park. It's all such a social circus. And it isn't the call of the plains that's drawing me. It's the call of the heart. Do you hate the metropolis too much to come here to marry me?"

* * * * * * * *

"Well," observed Rogers, standing in the doorway a few minutes later and watching Keith galloping into the distance. "For sheer hustling that beats all I've ever seen. He sure deserves to catch that train."

Beards and Shaving.

Peter the Great once forbade beards throughout his dominions, but, finding how dearly the Russian loved his beard, Peter allowed him to keep it if he was a noble on payment of a tax of 100 rubles (about $51), and if he was a peasant or a priest, by paying a kopeck (half a cent) every time he passed the gate of a city. A large revenue was produced by the tax, in return for which the collectors gave a small copper coin called the "borodovaia," or "the bearded;" and every man who chose to wear a beard was obliged to produce this when he entered a town. In default he was thrown into prison. Dr. John Bulwer in his "Anthropometamorphosis, or Man Transformed," (1650), writes angrily: "Shaving the chin is justly to be accounted a note of effeminacy. What greater evidence can be given of effeminacy than to be transformed into the appearance of a woman? A shameful metamorphosis!" He declares it to be done "against the edicts of God, the oracles of the prophets, the placits of the councils and the judgment of learned men." But, in spite of these fulminations, the custom soon became universal, among soldiers as well as civilians.

Similarity.

"How do you like married life, Harker?"

"Well, I wish I had remained a bachelor. There is so much expense and so many breakdowns."

"Expense and breakdowns? Gracious, old chap, perhaps you bought an automobile license instead of a marriage license?"—Brooklyn Eagle.

Point Blank.

A traveler was startled by hearing on a lonely road one night this piteous appeal: "Will the kind gentleman please help a poor, unfortunate man?"

THE MAN'S IDEAL HOUSE

IN IT BEAUTY AND UTILITY AND HONESTY SHOULD BE ONE.

How Perfect Utility Becomes Good to Look Upon Through the Quality of Being Able to Do the Work Designed By the Maker of Any Thing —How Dishonest Construction and Fraudulent Gawds Act On a Man.

My first idea about a house is that it should be built to live in. Throughout the house, in all the building of it, this should be the paramount idea. It must be granted that this idea is lost sight of by countless persons who build houses for every purpose under the sun except living in them.

Perhaps it is because of the practical life I have lived that I worship utility and have come to believe that utility and beauty should be one, and that there is no utility that need not be beautiful. What finer beauty than strength—whether it be airy steel or massive masonry or a delicate woman's hand? A plain black leather strap is beautiful. It is all strength and all utility, and it is beautiful. It efficiently performs work in the world, and it is good to look upon. Perhaps it is because it is useful that it is beautiful. I do not know. I sometimes wonder.

A boat on the sea is beautiful. Yet it is not built for beauty. Every graceful line of it is a utility, is designed to perform work. It is created for the express purpose of dividing the water in front of it, of gliding over the water beneath it, of leaving the water behind it—and all with the least possible wastage of stress and friction. It is not created for the purpose of filling the eye with beauty. It is created for the purpose of moving through the sea and over the sea with the smallest resistance and the greatest stability; yet, somehow, it does fill the eye with its beauty. And in so far as a boat fails in its purpose, by that much does it diminish in beauty.

I am still a long way from the house I have in my mind some day to build, yet I have arrived somewhere. I have discovered to my own satisfaction at any rate, that beauty and utility should be one. In applying this general idea to the building of a house, it may be stated in another and better way, namely, construction and decoration must be one. This idea is more important than the building of the house, for without the idea the house so built is certain to be an insult to intelligence and beauty love.

I bought a house in a hurry in the city of Oakland some time ago. I do not live in it. I sleep in it half a dozen times a year. I do not love the house. I am hurt every time I look at it. No drunken rowdy nor political enemy can insult me so deeply as that house does. Let me tell you why. It is an ordinary two-storey frame house. After it was built, the criminal that constructed it nailed on at the corners, perpendicularly, some 2-inch fluted planks. These planks rise the height of the house, and to a drunken man have the appearance of fluted columns. To complete the illusion in the eyes of the drunken man, the planks are topped with wooden Ionic capitals nailed on, and in, I may say, bas relief.

When I analyse the irritation these fluted planks cause in me I find the reason in the fact that the first idea for building a house has been violated. These decorative planks are no part of the construction. They have no use, no work to perform. They are plastered gawds that tell lies that nobody believes. A column is made for the purpose of supporting weight; this is its use. A column when it is a utility is beautiful. The fluted wooden columns nailed on outside my house are not utilities. They are not beautiful. They are nightmares. They not only support no weight, but they themselves are a weight that drags upon the supports of the house. Some day when I get time one of two things will surely happen. Either I shall go forth and murder the man who perpetrated the atrocity or else I shall take an axe and chop off the lying fluted planks.

A thing must be true or it is not beautiful, any more than a painted wanton is beautiful, any more than a sky-scraper is beautiful that is intrinsically and structurally light and that has a false massiveness of pillars plastered on outside. The true sky-scraper is beautiful—and this is the reluctant admission of a man who dislikes humanity festering cities. The true sky-scraper is beautiful, and it is beautiful in so far as it is true. In its construction it is light and airy; therefore in its appearance it must be light and airy. It dare not, if it wishes to be beautiful, lay claim to what it is not. And it should not bulk on the city-scape like Leviathan; it should rise and soar, light and airy and fairy-like.

Man is an ethical animal—or, at least he is more ethical than any other animal. Wherefore he has certain yearnings for honesty. And in no way can these yearnings be more thoroughly satisfied than by the honesty of the house in which he lives and passes the greater part of his life.

They that dwelt in San Francisco were dishonest. They lied and cheated in their business life (like the dwellers in all cities), and because they lied and cheated in their business life they lied and cheated in the buildings they erected. Upon the tops of the simple, severe walls of their buildings they plastered huge projecting cornices. These cornices were not part of the construction. They made believe to be part of the construction, and they were lies. The earth wrinkled its back for twenty-eight seconds, and the lying cornices crashed down, as all lies are doomed to crash down. In this particular instance the lies crashed down upon the heads of the people fleeing from their reeling habitations, and many were killed. They paid the penalty of dishonesty.

the material must be honest. They that lived in San Francisco were dishonest in the material they used. They sold one quality of material and delivered another quality of material. They always delivered an inferior quality. There is not one case recorded in the business history of San Francisco where a contractor or builder delivered a quality superior to the one sold. A seven-million-dollar City Hall became thirty cents in 28 seconds. Because the mortar was not honest a thousand walls crashed down and scores of lives were snuffed out. There is something, after all, in the contention of a few religionists that the San Francisco earthquake was a punishment for sin. It was a punishment for sin; but it was not sin against God. The people of San Francisco sinned against themselves.

An honest house tells the truth about itself. There is a house here in Glen Ellen. It stands on a corner. It is built of beautiful red stone. Yet it is not beautiful. On three sides the stone is joined and pointed. The fourth side is the rear. It faces the backyard. The stone is not pointed; it is all a smudge of dirty mortar, with here and there bricks worked in when the stone gave out. The house is not what it seems. It is a lie. All three of the walls spend their time lying about the fourth wall. They keep shouting out that the fourth wall is as beautiful as they. If I lived long in that house I should not be responsible for my morals. The house is like a man in purple and fine linen, who has not had a bath in a month. If I lived long in that house I should become a dandy and cut out bathing—for the same reason, I suppose, that an African is black and that an Eskimo eats whale-blubber. I shall not build a house like that house.

Last year I started to build a barn. A man who was a liar undertook to do the stone work and concrete work for me. He could not tell the truth to my face; he could not tell the truth in his work. I was building for posterity. The concrete foundations were 4 feet wide and sunk 3 1-2 feet into the earth. The stone walls were 2 feet thick and 9 feet high. Upon them were to rest the great beams that were to carry all the weight of hay, and the forty tons of tile roof. The man who was a liar made beautiful stone walls. I used to stand alongside of them and love them. I caressed their massive strength with my hands. I thought about them in bed before I went to sleep. And they were lies.

Came the earthquake. Fortunately, the rest of the building of the barn had been postponed. The beautiful stone walls cracked in all directions. I started to repair, and discovered the whole enormous lie. The walls were shells. On each face were beautiful, massive stones—on edge. The inside was hollow. This hollow in some places was filled with clay and loose gravel. In other places it was filled with air and emptiness, with here and there a piece of kindling wood or dry goods box to aid in the making of the shell. The walls were lies. They were beautiful, but they were not useful. Construction and decoration had been divorced. The walls were all decoration. They had not any construction in them. "As God lets Satan live." I let that lying man live, but . . . I have built new walls from the foundation up.

And now to my own house, beautiful, which I shall build some seven or ten years from now. I have a few general ideas about it. It must be honest in construction, material, and appearance. If any feature of it, despite my efforts, shall tell lies, I shall remove that feature. Utility and beauty must be indissolubly wedded. Construction and decoration must be one. If the particular details keep true to these general ideas, all will be well.—Jack London, in The Queen.

Biggest Parcel Postoffice.

The biggest parcel postoffice in the world is at Mount Pleasant, London, and at Christmas time 3,000 vanloads of parcels per day are driven in and out of its yard. The extent of this Christmas rush is best realized when it is remembered that the number of vans entering and leaving the yard daily at ordinary times is only 600.

The parcel post handles about 75,000,000 parcels, throughout the Kingdom, in a year, and of these about 33,000,000 pass through the office at Mount Pleasant, and in them are packed 100,000 parcels per day.

Under the main hall of the building is a basement measuring 300 feet, by 200 feet, and 16 feet in height. This vast room is packed from floor to ceiling with reserve baskets—25,000 of them! And these reserves are mobolized at Yule tide and see life in a whirl of excitement which makes up for their 360 days of banishment.

To fill these baskets once requires about 500,000 parcels, weighing some 1,500 tons, and every one is filled ten times over—this in addition to the baskets in regular use—during the Christmas rush.

History as She Is Wrote.

Agnes Deans Cameron thinks with an old master of Harrow that the schoolmaster should not allow his boys to wear him out before his time, but should find in their quaint turns of thought and unconscious humor that which should keep him always young. She quotes some extracts from history examination papers which ought not to cause a teacher to turn gray. Here are some of them:

"Henry VIII. was a frequent widower, conceited, cunning, cruel and corpulent. He burned the Pope's bull in effigy, beheaded his best friend, made himself Defender of the Faith by a Latin law, and had inordinate ambition and an ulcer in his leg. Henry sternly denied the validity of the proud Pope of Roam, and at last worn out by an internal discord died more in sorrow than in anger."

"The conquest of Ireland was begun in 1170, and is still going on." "The United Empire Loyalists were fought with future." "Isaac Walton was such a good fisherman that he was called 'the judicious Hooker.'"

Most Decidedly.

RIGHT USE OF BOOKS.

Lord Rosebery's Excellent Advice—Guides in Libraries Necessary to Extract Best Literary Food.

Lord Rosebery, as Chancellor of the London University, in accepting a gift to the University Library by the Goldsmith's Co., offered some excellent advice as to the proper use of books. His lordship said in part:

There was a misconception in some minds as to the function of a library, which they must not indulge in that afternoon. A library was an adjunct to a university, but it was not the staff on which a university leaned. There was a famous heresy that the true university of our day was a collection of books. That was one of those fallacies which passed current because it appeared under an illustrious name, but there was no greater misconception of a library than that it could take the place of a university. They might just as well say that the true regiment was a butcher's shop, for the reason that soldiers who were well-fed fought better than ill-fed soldiers. Food was necessary for a regiment, but it was not a regiment, any more than a library was a university.

No doubt a student must be fed by books, and it was impossible for him to proceed far without books, but the mere habit of reading, even reading copiously, without any exercises or output for his knowledge, was injurious rather than beneficial to the mind. It was apt to produce a condition of mental debility, if not of mental paralysis. If the mind was in the condition of receiving nothing but imports, and was not able to produce any exports, it was in a condition fatal to intellectual progress. If a university were only a collection of books, a student might enter a library and say, "A fig for your degrees; Mr. Carlyle has told me that this is the true place of my education, and Mr. Carlyle is good enough for me." His lordship said he wished to protest strongly against such an argument, and he hoped no student would ever believe that the library of this university was intended as anything more than a staff and an assistance.

What could be more fatal than a library without a guide? A young and ardent mind, let loose in the collection of the University of London would, as President Lincoln said, "Browse about indefinitely" without finding any fixed point on which it could concentrate its reading. Rather than browse about like a wild buffalo one had better be as a Dutch cow, that was tethered to a peg and could only eat within a limited circle. A student might enter a library, take down the first few books that came to his hand, and devour them without knowing till long afterwards that the books were quite obsolete and had been superseded by a hundred better ones on the same subject. A student entering a library must go there with an object, and must have guidance. He was quite aware that many eminent men dated their success from their haphazard reading in libraries at home. He would remind those who relied on that argument that those men confined that desultory reading to a very early period of life; if they had carried it on into middle age they would never have been eminent men.

His lordship went on to say that there were many Royal Commissions nowadays—it was almost the primary function of Government now to appoint Royal Commissions, but he was inclined to think the Royal Commission most required for intellectual purposes had not yet been appointed. It would be a Royal Commission of experts in the various departments of knowledge, who would tell us which were the books that were obsolete on any given subject—the books that had been superseded, and that, for all practical purposes, might be said to have no further existence. There was no student who had not felt that deficiency a great one in his own line of study. In the domain of history there should be no difficulty about an authorized inquisition condemning books to literary death, and thus enabling the student confronted with a list of books on any subject to discard a great number of them as practically dead.

New Theory of Birth Rate.

That a high birth rate does not necessarily involve a larger, effective addition to the population than does an average or even low birth rate, is the assertion of Sir William Dunbar, the Registrar-General, in a report on British vital statistics for 1906. This reads like a new theory on the steady fall in the birth rate, which is generally held to be a sign of a nation's decay.

In too many cases, claims Sir William, high birth rates are associated with excessive sickness and mortality during the first few years of life, the result being that fewer than the normal proportion of children survive for five years, while those who do survive fall below the normal standard of physical fitness.

There is some ground for the opinion that moderate birth rates, associated with low mortality, may be more effective towards keeping up the population than high rates associated with high mortality.

Among other facts, the death rate in England and Wales in 1905 was the lowest on record, while only four European countries had lower birth rates. Fifty-eight centenarians, of whom 47 were women, died that year.

Mrs. Langtry Is Lady De Bathe.

The death occurred at Wood End, near Chichester, on Jan. 5 of Sir Henry Percival de Bathe, Bart, in his 84th year. Sir Henry, who was the fourth baronet, had a distinguished career in the army, which he entered before he was 16 years old. He went through the Crimea with the Scots Guards, being second in command of his battalion at the taking of Sevastopol. Later he was colonel of the Scots Guards, and was made general in 1879, retiring from active service four years later. He is succeeded by his son, Hugo Gerald de Bathe, who was born in 1871 and

WOMEN SUFFER

Many women suffer in silence and drift along from bad to worse, knowing well that they ought to have immediate assistance.

How many women do you know who are perfectly well and strong?

The cause may be easily traced to some feminine derangement which manifests itself in depression of spirits, reluctance to go anywhere or do anything, backache, dragging sensations, flatulency, nervousness, and sleeplessness.

These symptoms are but warnings that there is danger ahead, and unless heeded, a life of suffering or a serious operation is the inevitable result. The best remedy for all these symptoms is made from native roots and herbs. No other medicine in the country has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement. No other medicine has such a record of cures of female ills.

Miss J. F. Walsh, of 328 W. 36th St., New York City, writes:—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been of inestimable value in restoring my health. I suffered from female illness which caused dreadful headaches, dizziness, and dull pains in my back, but your medicine soon brought about a change in my general condition, built me up and made me perfectly well."

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cures Female Complaints, such as Backache, Falling and Displacements, Inflammation and Ulceration, and organic diseases. It is invaluable in preparing for child-birth and during the Change of Life. It cures Nervous Prostration, Headache, General Debility, and invigorates the whole system.

WOMAN'S WORLD

MRS. CAROLINE F. CORBIN.

She Labors to Keep Her Sex From the Ballot Box.

Mrs. Caroline F. Corbin of Chicago, who for many years has been president of the Illinois Association Opposed to the Extension of Suffrage to Women, is a bitter opponent of any, and all movements tending to bring her sex into contact with the ballot box. Mrs. Corbin aims to elevate and advance women in the social plane, but she does not believe in the ballot box as a means to her end. Her motto is, "The home for women and women for the home," and it is along these lines that her life work has been mapped.

Mrs. Corbin has published many books, most of them upon social questions, and is a contributor to the magazines. She was born in Connecticut in 1835 and was married to Calvin R. Corbin in 1861. Her first important work as a leader of her sex was in the foundation of the Association For the Advancement of Women. The most recent book which she has brought out is "A Woman's Philosophy of Love," published in 1892. Mrs. Corbin opposes woman's suffrage on the ground that it threatens home life and is an adjunct to Socialism.

The Bath Rug.

The bath rug should be made of washable material, should be daily shaken and the floor, if of tile, wiped with a damp cloth. Wooden bathroom floors should be dusted with a long handled lamb's wool brush, and especial pains should be taken to clean under and behind the fixtures, so as to remove every accumulation.

That everything thus collected should be burned seems obvious, but long and rigorous training sometimes is required to persuade the ignorant not to drop them down the flushes. Nothing is more provocative of plumbers' bills than this. Even bits of soap, although they seem harmless, have a tendency to collect all other solid particles and cause an accumulation which it will cost to remove. The interior of the catch basin must be daily cleansed with a long handled stiff brush, slightly curved at the end. This brush should be excellent of its kind, else the bristles will fall.

For cleaning the marble basin and the bathtub and faucets strong soapsuds with ammonia or soda should be used now and then, but for the daily cleansing one of the quickest and best agents is gasoline.

Moisten a small cloth with this, and a quick rubbing will cause the streaks of greasy dirt to disappear as if by magic. All nickel is brightened at once by gasoline. There are objections to the odor, but fresh air from the windows, opened at the top and bottom, will remove this.

For safety never do the cleansing when there is artificial light of any kind in the room. Use only a small bottle for holding it and hang this Kitchen Suggestions.

Here are some good suggestions for your kitchen: Have your shades and sash curtains of white muslin that can be laundered. When using your gas stove in the summer cover the top of your coal stove with newspapers, which will make a handy table. Have your rack near the range, so that your towels will get well dried after each dish-washing. A small shelf should be put up near the stove to hold your salt and pepper box. The icebox should be removed from the stove as far as possible if you must have it in the kitchen. Cover the wall back of your sink with oilcloth, preferably white, and here may be hung your sink broom, shovel, dish mop and soap shaker. The ironing tables that now come may be converted into a settee when not in use. In the box or drawer may be kept the necessary articles for ironing. The top may be covered with oilcloth and will give an extra table. A chest of drawers under the closets is necessary for keeping the kitchen towels and aprons besides many other useful articles. It is well to keep in the kitchen a bottle of linseed oil and lime water, together with a roll of old linen pieces, for bandages for use in case of burns.

Round Shoulders In Children.

Do you keep sharp watch on the children's spinal columns and shoulders? When there is any inclination to stooping shoulder look into the matter at once to find the cause. It may be the clothing in some way. The hose supporters will be put on the easiest way, and that is front and fastened to the underwaist. This makes a pull on the chest and drags it over. It takes only just a little more pull than on the back, and down drops the chest. Are the bands around the waist weighing on the muscles that are made to hold up the body so they are not strong enough to work when so much is put on them? The boy gives way under the drag of an ill fitting coat collar which is too thick. See that there is no pull or weight on the back of the neck. When nothing pulls the young spine over or presses it down and the proper muscles are allowed to hold it up, the back will usually be straight and flat. Want of pure air to fill the lungs and the drag of poorly arranged clothing have given many a child an incurable hump or a sunken chest for life.

Why She Had Headaches.

"It is so strange, doctor," complained a woman patient recently, "that when I have had a perfectly good night's sleep I should so often wake up with a headache."

"How many pillows do you have under your head?" asked the physician.

"One thin pillow," was the answer.

"Try two fairly thick ones," the doctor advised, adding that many congestive headaches were caused by people sleeping with their heads too low. The blood settles in the head, and the sufferer wakes with a dull feeling or throbbing pain. Persons subject to catarrhal headache should be careful to have their heads high enough at night.—Harper's Bazar.

Ribbons.

Ribbons will become creased in spite of the best care, and a hot flatiron removes but few of these marks of use. A better plan is: Take a smooth quart bottle and fill with boiling hot water. Then wrap a single paper smoothly around the bottle, wrap the ribbon around the paper perfectly smooth and tight and then wrap another paper around this and pin in place. Set it aside a day and night, and the ribbon will be beautifully smooth and new to appearance. Soiled ribbons may be soaked and squeezed in a weak suds and when rinsed and dried ironed in this way. It is a very satisfactory method.

Grease Spots.

Here is a new way to remove a grease spot, which answers excellently: First place a double thickness of blotting paper on an ironing board. Lay the material on this and sponge well with benzine. Now put two more thicknesses of blotting paper on top and iron with a moderately hot iron. Re-

SUN LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY OF CANADA

Evidence Before the Royal Commission Has Proved Best Advertisement Company Ever Had.

COMMENT BY THE MANAGEMENT.

The four months which have elapsed since the close of the sessions of the Royal Commission have shown that the enquiry has been of untold value to the Sun Life of Canada. The evidence brought out as never before its great strength, the high quality and absolute safety of its investments, their profitable character, the large profits paid to its policy-holders, and the good faith of its directors and officers. Now that the full report has been issued, the management note with satisfaction that the criticisms of the company are few. It is true that the Commissioners felt compelled to find some fault, but most of the points mentioned are of very minor import.

The Commissioners "do not find any necessity for the increase of capital stock in 1897" from $500,000 subscribed, $75,000 paid up, to $700,000 subscribed, $165,000 paid up, as at present.

Several of the states which we desired to enter required a minimum paid-up capital of $100,000. Even apart from this, however, and even if it were granted that the increase was not absolutely necessary, that it was highly desirable can hardly be doubted. In 1897 the company had policy liabilities of about $7,000,000, and to-day those liabilities are about $23,000,000. The disparity between liabilities of $23,000,000 and a capital of $75,000 need not be dwelt on. Few will, we think, agree with the Commissioners in considering the increase to $105,000 unwise. The management does not favor excessive capitalization, but it is of opinion that if the capital of the company be open to criticism, it is because it is too small rather than too large.

Reference is made to the fact that the company pays dividends to its shareholders of fifteen per cent. True. But that this may be seen in its real proportion it is only necessary to state that these yearly dividends since 1897 have been but $15,750, and as the capital itself earned at least five per cent., only $10,500 per annum came from the profits of the company. The actual profit earned last year was $921,721.34. Was $10,500 an excessive sum to pay from this to the shareholders, who stand as guarantors to the policyholders, not merely for $105,000, but for $700,000 of subscribed capital?

But if fault be found with the increase of capital, the terms upon which the extra stock was issued should, in fairness, be stated. For each share on which but $15 was paid up ($100 subscribed), the company received in hard cash $45, or three hundred per cent. Dividends have been paid only on the $15, not on the $45. At five per cent. interest, the $45 earned the entire dividend, so that the additional stock has not cost the policyholders one dollar since it was issued in 1897, and so long as five per cent. interest can be earned, it will not cost them one dollar for all time to come, unless the rate of dividend be increased. By the issue of this stock, $90,000 of additional cash was paid in for the security of the policyholders, of which $60,000 (the premium) went into the general surplus, and the shareholders also became liable for another $170,000 of subscribed but uncalled stock, and all this has cost the policyholders for the ten years—ABSOLUTELY NOTHING!

Another point that might in fairness have been mentioned is that although the charter leaves the decision of what amounts shall be paid to shareholders absolutely to the discretion of the directors, that proportion has been voluntarily reduced to five per cent., the policyholders receiving 95 per cent., although the usual proportions are 10 and 90. The interests of the policyholders have always been first with the Sun Life of Canada.

A few other unimportant matters are also referred to. The so-called "concealed" expenses consist principally of small expenses connected with certain securities which were, as we consider correctly, deducted from the profit made from the sale of those securities. This is certainly the course which nine out of ten bookkeepers would consider right. However, these matters were all explained in detail, and we think, satisfactorily, at the sittings of the Commission, and were fully reported in the press. The public are the real judges in this matter, and that the public were eminently satisfied with the company's evidence, has been shown by showers of congratulations. The investigation has, in fact, proved a huge advertisement for the company—the best in its entire history—because the facts brought out met with the approval of the public. Under the circumstances we are well satisfied even though the Commissioners have not seen eye to eye with us on some minor points.

THE INTELLIGENCER BINDERY

CULTIVATE THE BEST

IN SPIRITUAL, MENTAL AND PHYSICAL EQUIPMENT.

THIS HONORS THE CREATOR

We Should Study Our Personal Appearance—Avoid Slovenly Habits—Develop the Mind, and Use the Intellect in the Master's Work—Make the Home Attractive For the Good of Our Children.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1907, by Frederick Diver, Toronto, at the Dept. of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 3.—In his sermon the preacher gives a special message of timely and practical value on the best equipment of men and women for service, spiritual, mental and physical. The text is I Kings vi, 35, "And he carved thereon cherubims and palm trees and open flowers and covered them with gold fitted upon the carved work."

Most people have but little architectural imagination. When a great architect comes to them and says, "I am going to build a temple of fame or a schoolhouse or a state capitol or a cathedral or a palace, and it is to be so many feet high and so many feet wide, and it is to have a large porch and a hallway flanked by so many rooms," he might as well be talking in Sanskrit as far as most people are concerned. Drawings and lines and dimensions mean no more to the average mind than a wife's description of a walking suit which she is planning for the coming season means to an average husband.

Now, I am frank to say that I for one could never get an adequate conception of what the old Solomonic temple looked like from the plans which have been drawn for us in the Bible. I have not an architectural imagination keen enough to construct this temple from those figures. Some Bible students have, but I have not. As soon as I begin to study those plans I get the porches and the outer walls all mixed up. But when the inspired author of the Bible comes to me and shows me one of the doors of the inner sanctuary and says, "This door is not only made out of fir wood, but it has beautiful carvings thereon of cherubim and palm trees and flowers in blossom, and all these exquisite carvings are overlaid with gold," then I say: "If one little part of that temple was as beautiful as that, the whole temple must surely have been an iridescent dream of architectural beauty. All the gorgeous colorings of the rainbow must there have been frozen in stone. All the opalescent splendors of the ever changing surface of the seas must there have submerged its columns and dome and walls and mosaic floors like a tidal wave. All the divine chemistries which produced the marvelous blendings of an orchid patch must there have been exhausted in order to produce this ancient temple, which architecturally has been the marvel of the ages. From the perfection of the little we can in imagination conceive of the perfection of the whole. From the beautiful carvings of two doors of the inner sanctuary we can catch a glimpse of what must have been the beautiful entirety of the whole structure. 'And he carved cherubims and palm trees and open flowers and covered them with gold fitted upon the carved work.'"

If you ride through some of the vineyards now growing upon the hillsides where once stood the ancient capitol of Samaria and find there the stone walls made out of most beautifully carved stones and wonderfully designed pillars which once adorned the ancient temples, you at once say, "The architect who designed those temples must have been a great lover of the beautiful." Thus when we read that the fir tree doors of the inner sanctuary were carved by a master hand into figures of cherubim and palm trees and flowers in blossom and all covered with gold we have a right to say that the God who designed that ancient temple was a God who loved the beautiful. We have only to look around us at the mountains, the valleys, the trees and the flowers and the glorious sunsets to be confirmed in that belief. I want this morning to take a step further. The God who loves beauty in nature and beauty in architecture loves also beauty in character. As he directed Solomon to adorn the temple with carvings, so he ordains that our characters shall be adorned. God wishes us to consecrate to his service a beautiful body, a beautiful mind, a beautiful church service, a beautiful home and a beautiful store and as far as possible make everything beautiful for his dear name. "And he carved thereon cherubims and palm trees and open flowers and covered them with gold fitted upon carved work."

The physical body has been aptly called "the temple of the Holy Ghost." Therefore, in the first place it is incumbent upon us to study how we can make our personal presence just as attractive and winsome as possible. For his dear name's sake we should strive to possess as beautiful a physical body as we can. We should cover that body with just as neat clothes as we can afford. We should make our physical frames an agency for spiritual prayer. I do not forget that the word "flesh" in the Pauline epistles is used again and again as the symbol of sin, but that is no reason why a man should clothe his body with filthy linen and ungainly fitting garments. No; not that. No man can worship God as acceptably with unclean hands and with unkempt hair as he can with a neat and cleanly personality. We should make our hands, our feet, our lips, our eyes, our foreheads, our garments, as beautiful, if possible, as were the inner doors of the sanctuary of the Solomonic temple, which had carved upon them "cherubims and palm trees and open flowers" or flowers in blossom. You should make you physical fo has its value. The man and woman of attractive face and manner win attention and exert an influence which is denied at the outset to ugliness and deformity. It is said that George Villiers, the most powerful personality in all James I.'s kingdom, got his start in life on account of the beauty of his physical personality. And there are many men and women who have had their first opening to Christian usefulness because they were attractive in personal presence. On the other hand, there are many men who have been fearfully handicapped in Christian work because they did not use their razors enough and kept their shoes unblackened and did not have their linen clean and because they were not careful to keep their skin well washed and their hair properly combed.

And yet how many men there are who are neglectful of their personal appearance. How many wives and mothers there are who, though they are very particular about the neatness of their homes, seem to lose all desire for neatness and attractiveness in their personal apparel. They were very careful how they dressed before they were married. When they were engaged to be married they always had their hair prettily arranged and donned their most attractive garments when their future husbands called in the evenings. But now that they are married they do not seem to care how they look in the kitchen or at the breakfast table or in the sitting room. And the sad fact is their slovenly habits of life, like all other evil habits which we allow to fasten themselves upon us, grow worse as they grow older. Oh, my friends, never allow yourselves to lose your physical charms! If God commanded King Solomon to adorn the doors of the inner sanctuary with cherubim and palm trees and flower blossoms he wants us to make our temples of the Holy Spirit just as winsome and attractive as possible.

It is also important to adorn for Christ our mental equipment. We should sing our thoughts with the most melodious sounds. We should paint them in the most beautiful blending of colors. We should symbolize them in the most poetic similes. We should chisel them in the most exquisite statues. We should preach them in the most tender pleadings. In other words, as the lapidary takes his precious stones just quarried from the mines and cuts them and polishes them and harmoniously arranges them in the most beautiful settings, we should cut and polish and blend our thoughts as precious jewels for the service of Jesus Christ. We should develop our thoughts aesthetically in order that they may better spiritually serve our Divine Master and King. We should engrave our mental doors with cherubim and palm trees and flower blossoms.

Do you suppose that Robert Burns would have his influence upon Scottish life unless he had been able to sing his songs of love and patriotism with a sweeter or a more clarion note than ever bard had sung before or since his time? Do you believe Cardinal Newman's "Kindly Light" would to-day be leading the Christian world through encircling gloom unless the words of that hymn were as soft and limpid as any ever written by a master of English? Do you believe the gospel messages of a Munkacsy, a Millet, a Raphael or a Da Vinci would be teaching the love of Jesus Christ as they are doing unless each one of their messages had been painted by the hand of a master? Do you believe that Bunyan's allegory would be read by the hundreds of thousands and the millions unless, like Christ's parables, it was the wonder of all literary critics? These men were not crude men. They took the precious jewels of their minds and cut them and polished them and gave them in service to Jesus Christ. The more those mental jewels sparkled the more service they were able to perform for their Divine Master. The very best possibilities you have in your mind you should reach for and grasp and then harness for your larger developed intellect in the Master's work.

"But," you say, "what does that mean? Are you asserting that only intellectual geniuses are fitted for gospel work? Do you affirm that the illiterate and uneducated can do but little or no good for the Master?" No, no. I am not asserting that. But I am asserting that there is at least one door of your intellect like the fir tree doors of the inner sanctuary of the Solomonic temple which is capable of the most wonderful carvings. That one door leads into a music room, or into a teacher's room, or into an art gallery, or into a writer's study. I do not know what that one talent of your mind is, but I know that you have one great talent. Develop it for Jesus Christ. Develop it to the very best of your ability. Make its sounds the sweetest. Make its colors the brightest. Make its parables the most convincing. Make its orations the most powerful. Say, "By the help of God I will take this talent of mine and develop it intellectually that I may truly serve my Master in an aesthetic as well as in a spiritual way."

If it is important for us as individuals to develop our intellects along the lines of the beautiful, how much more important is it for us to have homes every door of which is engraved with cherubim and palm trees and blossoming flowers? If it is important to adorn our own individual lives, how much more important is it by the direct or indirect examples in the home to adorn those lives which are living close to us.

It is a staggering thought to me that I individually can do just about what I like with each one of my children for nearly twenty years, or for nearly one-half or one-third of their lives. I can tell them what time they are to go to bed and what time they are to get up. I can tell them what kind of food they are to eat and what they are not to eat. I can pick out all their clothes and limit them in the books they are to study and to read. I can tell them what pictures they are to look at and what they are to do in my house. In other words, for fifteen or sixteen years of my childrens' lives I can absolutely do

I can do as I please if their mother agrees. On the other hand, I sometimes think the wife can do as she pleases with the children, whether the husband agrees or no. Now, my friends, if we as parents have such a marvelous influence upon the lives of our children do you not feel that we should do everything in our power to develop their minds in an intellectual way for Jesus Christ?

To speak literally, do you not believe we should have flowers in the home? It does not take much work to plant a few flowers in your back yard or even to plant a few geraniums or petunias in a box of soil and have them catch the sunlight as it comes streaming through your windows of a winter's day. Can you not place in the middle of your dining table a fernery? No child ever yearned to love flowers, but through flowers it was easier for him to love Christ. Can you not hang copies of the old religious masters upon your walls? It does not cost much to get a copy of Rubens' "Descent From the Cross" or "Christ at the Last Supper" or an "Easter Resurrection" or a Millet's "Angelus" or a "Ruth Gleaning After the Reapers." You had better teach your children to love good pitures, for, mark me, if you do not teach them to love good pictures when they are young they may learn to love bad pictures when they are beyond your control.

It is important to have a beautiful home in which our children shall live. Is it not also important to have a beautiful temple and a beautiful church service with which we shall worship God aright on the Sabbath day? Shall not the door of our earthly sanctuaries be engraved with cherubim and palm trees and blossoming flowers? Shall not the songs we sing from the choir lofts be sung by the most beautiful voices? Shall not the sermon which is preached be something more than an old-fashioned camp meeting exhortation? Shall not our organs be deep throated organs and our church windows whenever possible have in stained glass pictures of Jesus as a good shepherd caring for a little lamb, or Jesus as a tired, wornout traveler talking by the well of Samaria with a social outcast, or Jesus as an ascending Lord disappearing among the clouds while his disciples are prostrate at his feet? Cannot all these beautiful sounds and beautiful symmetries in glass and stone and the beautiful services be a means of spiritual blessing?

You ask, "Does that mean that we can only have a rich man's church?" Not at all. I am in nowise casting a slur upon the little meeting houses all over the land. God blesses a Wesley preaching in the fields just as much as he blesses any priest officiating in his ecclesiastical robes. Indeed, when a church puts its emphasis upon form and not upon the consecration of the human heart that church is bound to be spiritually dead. Pastor Spurgeon used to say: "As Oliver Cromwell was about to turn the members of Parliament out of their chambers he pointed to the mace and said, 'Take away that bauble.' When Christ shall come, who will effectually purge the church, he will say much the same of many ecclesiastical ornaments now held in high repute. Gowns and altars and banners and painted windows will all go at one sweep. Nor will the rhetorical embellishments and philosophies of modern pulpits be any more tenderly dealt with. 'Take away that bauble!' will be the signal for turning many a folly into perpetual contempt."

But before I close I want to emphasize one other fact. Every one of these figures which were carved upon the fir tree doors of that inner sanctuary was a symbol of everlasting life. Like the evergreen tree, its branches are covered with green all the year round. The cherubim are the symbol of the great company of the redeemed of heaven. Of course we know that the word cherubim literally interpreted means an order of celestial beings. But this word taken as a symbol means the whole company of the redeemed of heaven. The palm tree is and always has been the symbol of victory by grace, while the blossoming flowers are the symbol of profession or the public yielding of our will to God's will, and the gold is the symbol of the divine being. Thus this gold covers all. Yes, every figure engraved upon that door is a symbol of spiritual triumph. Thus, my friends, cannot we find all our struggling after the beautiful the symbol of our consecrating all the beautiful parts of our lives to the service of the Divine Master, whose name is not only "Wonderful," but who is the acme of all that is beautiful?

Oh, that step by step in these beautiful symbols we can find our consecration to Jesus! May these symbols be to us what the "Lectures on Experimental Philosophy and Astronomy and Chemistry," by G. Gregory, were to Joseph Henry. After Mr. Henry's death this little book of Mr. Gregory's was found in Mr. Henry's library with the following inscription written by the great Smithsonian upon the fly leaf: "This book, although by no means a profound work, has, under Providence, exerted a remarkable influence upon my life. It accidentally fell into my hands when I was about sixteen years old and was the first work I ever read with attention. It opened to me a new world of thought and enjoyment, invested things before almost unnoticed with the highest interest, fixed my mind on the study of nature and caused me to resolve at the time of reading that I would immediately devote my life to the acquisition of knowledge." So may it be with us to-day. May this text have the same influence upon our lives as the lectures of a Gregory had upon a Joseph Henry. May we reach out and continue to reach out in mental and physical development.

But as we reach out may these symbols of Solomon's temple teach us that we are to reach out only for the purpose of consecrating our cherubim and palm trees and blossoming flowers to God's great work and for the salvation of man as well as for our eternal life. "And he carved thereon cherubims and palm trees and open flowers and coyered them with gold fitted upon the carved work." May God bless

A SONG, NOT A SERMON.

But It Points a Moral From a Very Ordinary Incident.

It was a merry occasion. The fun was fast and furious. It was in a barroom; the place, Washington.

> Inspiring bold John Barleycorn,
> What dangers thou canst make us scorn!
> Wi' tippenny we fear nae evil;
> Wi' usquabae we'll face the devil!

And so one of this party invited seven companions to join him in a drink of "red licker," and they sat—

> Bousing at the nappy
> An' gettin' fou an' unco happy.

The man planked down a dollar, crisp and fresh from the treasury. The account was squared; the score was paid. He was a family man and walked across the street to a meat stand and ordered two pounds of round steak. The grocer supplied him and asked 30 cents as the price. "What!" the man roared. "What! Fifteen cents a pound for round steak! It is a highway robbery!"

And so we go through life prodigal in buying luxury and miserly in buying necessity. That man had no conception of his illogical action—spending a dollar for liquor that he and his comrades would have been the better without and kicking a hole in the ceiling on account of a purchase of beef to the charge of 30 cents that he could ill do without. Man can live without booze, but the man has yet to be invented who can get along without food.

This is no sermon. This newspaper never preaches. What we intended to say and all we intended to say was to call attention to the truth.

> All the world's a stage
> And all the men and women merely players.

The very best of us have need of the charity of our brothers and sisters.

GOOD COLLATERAL.

The Way Tom Fitch of Nevada Used to "Raise the Wind."

Tom Fitch of Nevada was a bright fellow and one of the best writers and stump speakers of the west, but he was thriftless and when he got hard up would resort to almost any means to get a stake.

One day he wrote a scathing speech denouncing Sharon, then president of the Bank of California and afterward United States senator from Nevada. In it he charged Sharon with almost every crime known to the Decalogue or the statutes. He put the manuscript in a large envelope and walked into the Bank of California.

"Here," he said to the cashier, handing the package through the window—"here are some securities which I offer as collateral on a loan. Please hand them to Mr. Sharon in person, and I will wait for his answer."

Mr. Sharon was in his private office. Breaking the seal of the envelope, he found the speech and read it through, together with a note from Fitch, informing him that unless he was paid $5,000 he would deliver that speech in every town in the state. In a few minutes the cashier, on Mr. Sharon's order, reported that the collateral was all right and paid the happy Fitch the desired amount.

Three months afterward, having gone through the money in speculation and dissipation, Mr. Fitch made his appearance with another speech, this time of a very complimentary character, which he promised to deliver at every convenient opportunity for the same amount. This, too, proved good collateral, and the story would never have come to light if Fitch had not, in a moment of drunken frankness, told it himself.

He Was Willing.

A good, kind man unfortunately married a shrewish wife, and the woman changed his nature. One morning after his wife had called him a good for nothing loafer and snatched his breakfast away he started off, hungry and sore, for work. A sour looking woman entered the car he was on. She got into a violent dispute with the conductor over her change. Finally, red with rage, she looked about her and said, "Is there a gentleman in this car who will stand by and see a lady insulted?" The hungry man whose nature had been spoiled rose eagerly. "Yes, madam," he said; "I will."

The Nature of Love.

Love is the river of life in this world. Think not that ye know it who stand at the little tinkling rill—the first small fountain. Not until you have gone through the rocky gorges and not lost the stream; not until you have gone through the meadow, and the stream has widened and deepened until fleets could ride upon its bosom; not until beyond the meadow you have come to the unfathomable ocean and poured your treasures into its depths—not until then can you know what love is.—Henry Ward Beecher.

Takes No Chances.

"Remember," said the kind elderly gentleman, "that you may be president of the United States." "Yes," answered the boy whose father is connected with the race track, "but look at the population of this country. I've only got one chance in millions. I ain't playing any long shots like that."

It Depends.

Follette (recently married)—A man is called a "Benedict" when he is married. What is a girl called under the same circumstances? Anna (also recently married)—Well, it depends altogether on what she marries!

AS AN EXAMPLE

Of what we have been saying about overlooking the strain on the ocular muscles, the following is to the point: Mr. H. A. K., 35, bookkeeper, gave history of pain in eye-balls, headaches and pain between the shoulders which first appeared in childhood. In later years nausea, indigestion, and "sick headache" developed. He had his eyes examined by a specialist, when a high degree of oblique astigmatism was found, which he corrected with proper glasses, thinking this was all that was necessary: the glasses greatly improved vision, but the distressing symptoms mentioned still continued. At this stage a careful examination of the ocular muscles revealed 7 degrees of exophoria (a weakness of the internal recti, which receive their working powers from the nerve-centres at the base of brain). The proper glasses were given for the relief of the brain-strain induced in this way, as well as exercise to strengthen those weak muscles, when in a short time all the pain, headaches, and digestive troubles entirely disappeared.

CHINA; THE LAND OF OPPORTUNITY.

VISITING DIVINE GAVE ELOQUENT ADDRESS ON THE ABOVE TOPIC YESTERDAY.

Rev. W. J. Southam, a minister lately returned from China, now working under the auspices of the Y.M.C.A., gave two addresses in this city yesterday in the interests of the work he has at heart, namely, the evangelization of the Flowery Kingdom. In the morning, at Christ Church, Rev. Mr. Southam preached a sermon which might easily have convinced his hearers of the fact that the Y.M.C.A. might travel far afield, in many countries, before it found a man better fitted to awaken religious zeal in the minds of young men—or old men, either, for that matter. Earnest and impressive, thoroughly in touch with and in love with his subject; the returned missionary drew a vivid picture of an awakened China, turning its back on error, and affording unlimited opportunity for those who were ready to obey the Master's command; "Go ye into the world and teach." Before commencing his sermon proper, Rev. Mr. Southam told how, eight years ago, the missionaries in Hong-Kong felt that there was a certain class in China they were unable to reach, namely, the students. How to reach them was the problem. Finally the aid of the Y.M.C.A. was invoked, and the call was not made in vain. At that time Rev. Mr. Southam was released by his church and went to China, and was one of the band of workers sent by the Y.M.C.A. The work was successful to a high degree, and it was a fact that to the Y.M.C.A., more than to any other body, was due the strong foothold Christianity had since then got in China. The leading men of that great empire had seen the work done by the Association, and had given it their support and influence. Christian people should be proud that a branch of the great Association was in Belleville, and should give it their hearty and cheerful support. There could be a strong branch here, and a new building, if the right spirit were abroad. Surely an association which had such a record deserved their support. The Rev. gentleman then announced his text; Isa. 49; 16;

> "Behold, I have graven thee upon the palms of my hands: thy walls are continually before me."

He was convinced in his heart, the preacher said, that those words of the prophet, written 800 years before Christ, referred to China. Since the Saviour came He had been looking continually for men to do His work in the evangelization of the world. Generation after generation had been appealed to, and generation after generation had "turned him down." And now, at last, the preacher said, he believed the time and opportunity had come for the evangelization of China. But the Saviour wanted men to do His work, not women and children. It was an unfortunate fact that women and children did most of the work and kept most of the churches going, and if men would only take their proper place in church work how different it might be! "Men and brethren," said the preacher, "think of it! Think of the opportunity to do the Master's work and to help light up a land which has been in darkness for four thousand years, whose population numbers one-third of that of the world!" Some business firms in China, Rev. Mr. Southam said, he knew were earning dividends of 15 per cent., but what would be the dividend declared on the last day to those who, unable to go there themselves, had invested their money to enable others to go to China and take Christianity to the heathen! Speaking of the difference between Chinese and Japanese, the speaker said there was more in a Chinese than in a Japanese, and the day was fast coming when the world would know it. The greatest sorrow he had was that he could not go back to the work in China, but the doctors had forbidden his wife to go, otherwise she would be willing to start to-morrow. The preacher then gave many interesting facts showing the marvellous advance of China in the last few years. In one province alone there were now 6000 schools, and in each of those schools the New Testament was one of the text-books. The possibilities for China's evangelization were wonderful. The Saviour wanted men. In fact, three things were needed; Men, money and the prayers of everybody. In conclusion he urged all to think and act imperially for the kingdom of Jesus Christ.

Bethel Hall.

Last night R. Irving conducted the service in Bethel Hall. The Gospel address was based on the following scriptures; "What shall the end be of them that obey not the gospel?" "Lord make me to know mine end," and "Let me die the death of the righteous; let my last end be like His." The speaker said, that oft the question was asked, "What would be the end of the heathen, who never heard the gospel? To which question we can say with Abraham, "Shall not the Judge of all the Earth do right." To whom much is given, from them shall much be required. Such as have many privileges, have corresponding responsibilities. The question, however, is not what will become of the heathen, but "what shall be the end of them who obey not the gospel? Happily we are not left to guess, as scripture itself furnishes an answer. It says "the Lord Jesus shall be regeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of His power. I. Thess. 1, 7: 9. To obey the gospel secures salvation, for "the gospel is the power of God unto salvation unto every one that believeth." At the close of the address two believers were baptized by immersion.

Tabernacle.

Rev. J. P. Wilson preached to a large congregation in the morning, taking his text from the Book of Job, 22nd chapter and 21st verse:

> "Acquaint now thyself with Him and be at peace; thereby good shall come unto thee."

The choir gave an anthem, "Jesus My Saviour, look on Me," Mrs. Nicholson taking the solo. Mr. James Dyer sang, in good voice, "Face to Face."

Holloway St.

The interest being taken in the evangelistic services now being held in this church is increasing daily, and, as a result, much good is being accomplished. Yesterday large congregations were present at both services, in fact the church was filled to the doors at the latter service, when Mr. McCombe's subject was the "Unpardonable Sin," and his text St. Matthew, 12th chapter and 32nd verse. The preacher said there were many living to-day who believed the unpardonable sin was only committed before and during Christ's time. There were, however, many, even in this 20th century, committing this sin. His definition of the sin was a continued and persistent rejection of the gospel of light. Many to-day resist the striving of the spirit until their consciences and hearts become seared and hard. The speaker, during his remarks, gave illustrations showing how the unpardonable sin is committed. In concluding his address Mr. McCombe made a fervent and touching appeal to all to forsake their sins and lead a godly life. At the after meeting a number signified their intention of leading a consecrated life.

Worthy Lady Honored.

On Friday afternoon last a meeting of the various branches of the Women's Missionary societies of the Methodist churches in the city was held at Bridge St. church, and during the proceedings a pleasant affair occurred. Mrs. J. C. Lake was called to the platform and after an address had been read to her by Mrs. Wartman, Mrs. J. H. P. Young presented her with a certificate of life membership in the parent society. The recipient has for 25 years been a member of the society, being one of the charter members. Mrs. Lake although taken by surprise was able to make an appropriate reply.

The Last Rites.

The remains of the late Mr. E. S. Howard, head master of the Owen Sound Collegiate Institute, who died on Friday last, arrived here on Saturday night and were interred this afternoon. Services were held at the residence of Dr. Caldwell, Bridge St. and were conducted by the Rev. J. P. Wilson, pastor of Bridge St. church. The floral tributes were numerous and beautiful. The bearers were relatives of the deceased.

Had A Stroke.

The many friends of Mr. Thos. Wills will regret to learn that on Sunday morning he was the victim of a paralytic stroke, and his condition at present is critical. The stroke had the effect of paralyzing his left side and rendering the victim speechless. Owing to his advanced age, 81 it is feared that the stroke will prove fatal.

Crushed To Death.

Fred Gibson, a young man whose home was near Foxboro, was killed at the Craigmont gold mine. North Hastings, on Monday last. A large stone rolled out of a bank, and crushed him so badly that he died almost instantly. He was 22 years old.

Dr. Oronhyatekha Joins The Majority.

FAMOUS INDIAN MEDICO AND FINANCIER PASSED AWAY IN GEORGIA ON SATURDAY AFTERNOON — SKETCH OF HIS LIFE.

Savannah, Ga., March 4.—Hon. Dr. Oronhyatekha of Toronto died at the Desoto Hotel, in this city, at 5.20 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

His death was due to heart failure, from which, it was stated, he had been a sufferer for about ten years.

His body will be sent immediately to Toronto for burial, leaving here early to-day.

At the bedside of Dr. Oronhyatekha at the time of his death were his private secretary, W. W. Dunlop of Toronto, and A. E. Stevenson of Port Huron, Mich., assistant general manager of the Independent Order of Foresters, of which Dr. Oronhyatekha was supreme chief ranger.

DR. ORONHYATEKHA.

Dr. Oronhyatekha's son, Dr. Ackland Oronhyatekha of Toronto, who had been notified of his father's critical condition, has started south from Toronto. He will probably meet the remains en route.

Dr. Oronhyatekha arrived in Savannah in the latter part of January, coming in the hope that his health would be benefited. He seemed to rally at times, and recently gave out an interview, in which he expressed the belief that the climate would prove beneficial.

Dr. Oronhyatekha is survived by his son and daughter, Mrs. Percy Johnson of Deseronto, and it is probable that his remains will be interred in that place by the side of those of his wife, who died several years ago.

While in Savannah, Dr. Oronhyatekha received the very best medical attention. It was not until Thursday that his condition became serious. He was reported to be dying Friday, so that the end Saturday afternoon was not unexpected.

Though it is now many years since the famous Indian was a resident of this district, there are still many who remember him.

SKETCH OF HIS LIFE.

He first saw the light on Aug. 10, 1841, at the Six Nations Indian Reservation, near Brantford, Ont. His English education was begun in the Industrial School, near Brantford, established for the training of young Indians, and supported and maintained by the New England Company, whose headquarters are in London, Eng., wherein he acquired the rudiments of an English education.

When the Prince of Wales visited Canada in 1860, Oronhyatekha, then in his twentieth year, was selected by the chiefs of the Six Nations to present an address to the son of their "great mother." The impression made upon the young Prince and his party was so favorable that Oronhyatekha was invited to continue his studies in Oxford, which he did, under the care of the Prince's physician, Sir Henry Acland, the regius professor of medicine at that ancient seat of learning.

As a physician, Dr. Oronhyatekha had before him a career that gave every promise of distinction and emolument. He commenced practice at Frankford, near Belleville, Ont., and was elected first secretary of the Hastings County Medical Association. On leaving Frankford for Stratford his friends evidenced their esteem by presenting him with an address and a gold watch.

He removed to London in 1875, where he built up an extensive medical practice. It was while living at the last mentioned place that he was initiated into the Independent Order of Foresters. He rose rapidly to the position of chief executive of the order, and at the time of the separation in 1881, he was elected to the office of Supreme Chief Ranger, which he had held ever since.

Oronhyatekha was above all things a family man. To his home near Deseronto, where he had an extensive stock farm, he repaired as often as his responsible duties would permit. His wife was Miss Ellen Hill, of the Mohawk tribe, a great-granddaughter of the celebrated Mohawk chief, Capt. Joseph Brant. A son and daughter survive. The son is named Acland, after his father's old friend and teacher, Sir Henry Acland, of Oxford, and is a graduate in medicine of Trinity University, Toronto.

He was proud of his race and language, and in his home at Deseronto the Mohawk language was always used.

Dr. Oronhyatekha had some military experience, and during the Fenian raid of 1866 did some active duty as a member of the University Rifles, the old Company 9 of the Queen's Own. Some fine prizes he won as a member of the first Wimbledon team, attest the accuracy of his aim as a marksman.

NUPTIALS OF MR. H. R. BEATTIE AND MISS ETHEL TOMLINSON ON SATURDAY.

Mr. H. R. Beattie and Miss Ethel Tomlinson, both of this city, were, at 3 o'clock on Saturday afternoon, quietly married at Kingston. The ceremony was performed at St. George's Cathedral by the Rev. Canon Starr. The happy couple were unattended, only two witnesses being present, one of whom was Capt. Conger, formerly of Belleville. Mr. and Mrs. Beattie returned to the city yesterday. Their many friends here will unite with The Intelligencer in extending congratulations.

MARRIAGE CUSTOMS.

The Change From the Era When Wives Were Taken by Force.

Marriage customs have changed everywhere with the advance of civilization. Anglo-Saxons in ancient times, it is said, used to capture their wives by force from their fathers or their husbands, it did not matter which.

This was before Augustine came to preach Christianity. Then purchase was more common than capture, although the latter seems to have been frequent enough to the reign of Ethelbert to need regulation by law. By this law a man might run away with a woman, provided he afterward paid her previous owner, be he father or husband, 50 shillings. If it was husband who had thus been deprived of his wife, the woman's captor had not only to pay him the fine, but also to buy him another wife. In any case the stolen woman belonged to her captor.

If a man had purchased his bride in the days of Ethelbert and afterward concluded he had paid too much for her, it was lawful for him to return her to her former owner and claim again the purchase price, provided that he had not previously expressed satisfaction by making the bride a present on the morning after the wedding.

The next step was the "foster lien," when the bride price was paid on the day of espousal and was supposed to compensate the parent for the cost of bringing up his daughter. It seems, however, that this soon fell into disrepute, as there was no law against the father engaging his daughter to numerous suitors, taking from each the "foster lian" and, of course, cheating all but one on the wedding day, which at that time was only the day of betrothal, when the suitor gave a "wed" or pledge for the future performance of his contract. If the suitor did not claim his bride within two years after the wedding day, he forfeited all right to her and to whatever money or goods he had paid for her. If the woman and her father broke their promises, the father had to give the suitor four times as much as the suitor had already paid him.

As civilization advanced the bride price was given to the woman herself and became her dowry, while nowadays the tables are frequently turned, and the bride settles the money on her husband.

LADYLIKE GEOMETRY.

Figures of the same shape don't always have the same style.

Figures of the same size never consider themselves equivalent.

A straight line is the shortest distance between two millinery openings.

A plain figure is one all points of which have been neglected by the dressmaker.

A mixed line is a line composing the reception committee of a club's presidential candidate.

A broken line is a series of successive straight lines described by a woman alighting from a street car.

A straight line determined by two bargain tables is considered as prolonged both ways until the store closes.

Women equal to the same thing are not always equal to each other.—Nellie Parker Jones in Chicago Record-Herald.

A Pointed Prayer.

Aunt Dinah had come to see her old mistress, who had just recovered from an illness.

"Yes, Miss Lila, I sho'ly done prayed fer yer to git well all de time, and now yer see how it done turned out."

"Then you believe that your prayers are always answered, Dinah?"

"Sho'ly, sho'ly!" Then, with a sly glance: "Yer see, I neber tempts de Lord, 'case I don't pray fer nothin' dat I don't know I'll git. Dr. John, he done tol' me he tort yer was on de recovery road." After a pause she went on:

"No."

"Why, I just p'intedly begged de Lord ter put it into yer heart ter give me dat brown silk dress yer done outgrowed."

In the Matter of Tips.

The man who tips the highest gets the best service and the most ostentatious deference. "Give this to the cook," said a St. Louis parvenu, handing a dollar to the waiter with his order, "and tell him to cook it my way." "Give this to the cook," said a scribe at the next table, handing a two dollar bill to the waiter with his order, "and tell him to cook it his own way, for he is a better cook than I am." We will not be outdone. We will not shrink in any man's shadow. At the same time the pace is too hot and fast for most of us.

A FAMOUS GAMESTER.

Amazing Skill of Captain John Scott at Whist.

HIS RAPID ROAD TO WEALTH.

The Winnings of the "Gentleman Gambler" at White's, in London, in the Eighteenth Century Exceeded $5,000,000—Fox's Reckless Play.

Of all the gentlemen gamblers at the close of the eighteenth century in England a single one is noted for the immensity and the regularity of his winnings. This was John Scott, who, beginning as a penniless captain, wound up his career as a millionaire general. On the subject of the campaigns he conducted history is silent, but contemporary London was full of talk of his marvelous luck with dice and cards, and the marital misfortunes of his later life gave more material for the gossips.

Writing to Richard Bentley from Arlington street on Feb. 25, 1755, Horace Walpole says:

"The great event is the catastrophe of Sir John Bland, who has flirted away his whole fortune at hazard. He t'other night lost in reckless play an immense sum to a Captain Scott, who at present has nothing but a few debts and his commission."

Sir John Bland, to conclude here the history of that luckless dicer, shot himself dead, after losing the last of his fortune, in Kippax park.

Captain John Scott was of that branch of the numerous Scott family of which Sir Walter was a member, and his ancestor in the thirteenth century was that famous chemist, Michael Scott, who won the name of wizard. A later Scott distinguished himself in the time of Charles II. by marrying, when be was himself only fourteen years old, a lady who was three years his junior. The bride was Mary, countess of Buccleuch, in her own right the richest heiress in Scotland. The marriage was a secret one, and none of the friends and few of her family were informed of it until the day after. The youthful bridegroom did not profit greatly by this match, for his bride died at thirteen. Her sister Anne, who succeeded to her titles and estates, made a marriage with the pet son of Charles II., Monmouth, and had a numerous family.

It was sixty years later, or about 1750, that young Scott, son of the laird of Scott's Tarvet, entered King George's army. Two years later he was in London and in the midst of the most reckless set of spendthrifts, rakes and gamesters that English society has ever known. Sir John Bland was only one of a thousand rich young Englishmen who threw away fortunes over the gaming table at White's. The one historic loser of that era was Charles James Fox, Pitt's rival. Fox gambled away, all told, no less than $5,000,000. Scott was the very antipodes of Fox. When he died, at a ripe old age, he left a fortune as great as that with which Fox had begun, and every penny of it had been won at the gaming table. Fox was a ripe scholar. Scott was almost illiterate. Fox said that losing was the next greatest pleasure to winning. Scott never lost or so rarely that it did not affect the serenity of his career as a winner. Fox would go home in the morning after a night in which he had gambled away £10,000 or £20,000 and immediately lose himself in a study of Sophocles or Æschylus. Scott, like the sensible fellow he was, would button his coat over the portemonnale in which he carried away winnings of an equal or even greater amount and immediately go to bed so as to be fresh for play in the evening.

When Scott found himself in London and amid the wild young men of his era, he determined that gaming was his only chance of getting money. When he engaged himself to throw a series of mains with Sir John Bland, he had, as Horace Walpole puts it, nothing "but a few debts and his commission." His shrewdness taught him that there was nothing in dicing, at which a stupid man has as good a chance as a bright one, and so he speedily gave up hazard and applied himself to whist, at which game fortune fights on the side of the skillful player. Never in the history of play did men gamble for such high stakes as Scott and his victims did at White's between 1753 and 1780. Scott's system was an exceedingly simple one. He gave himself the best of it in every possible way. He never went to the gaming table unless his head and his stomach were in the very best order. He never lost his composure or his good nature for an instant. He played a perfectly fair and honorable game, and at first he made it a rule never to play for more than a fixed sum, which he could afford to lose. He won so steadily that it wasn't long before he was prepared to risk any sum which even the wealthiest or the most reckless of his adversaries would venture to propose.

A story which illustrates capitally Scott's patience in the face of hard luck has been preserved. One night while he was at the card table news was brought to him that his wife, the first Mrs. Scott, had given birth to a girl.

"Ah," he said, "I shall have to double my stakes to make a fortune for this young lady."

But in a few hours he was £8,000 to the bad. Retaining his invariable serenity, he said he was sure of his luck returning, and at 7 a. m. he went home the winner of £15,000. That's the sort of play that went on at White's night after night during the years that John Scott was winning the largest fortune ever accumulated by a gentleman gam-

TWO TRAINS IN CRASH

Engines Rolled Down Embankment Into a Ditch.

Four Men Killed Outright—Two Others Not Likely to Recover—Twenty Soldiers Also Injured—Special Train Ran Into Regular—Governor Woodruff of Connecticut Has Narrow Escape.

Waterbury, Conn., March 4.—With an impact of sufficient force to crush the ponderous locomotives together like paper, twist and bend them and topple them from the track down an embankment and into a ditch beside the track, two passenger trains, a regular and a special, met in a head-on collision early on Saturday on the Nagatuck division of the New York Newhaven and Hartford Railroad at Platt's Mills, about a mile and a half below this city, resulting in the death of four men and serious, if not fatal, injury to two more. A score of others are more or less seriously hurt. The dead were the crews of the engines.

Govener Was On Board.

The regular was the midnight train, which is due here at 12.39, but which was behind time. The special was made up of an engine and one coach in which was a party of about 65, members of Company X, Second Regiment, C. N. G., known as the Grays, and Governor Woodruff and members of his staff.

When the engines crashed together and in their embrace rolled down the embankment they carried down to death with them their crews. Three of the dead, the two engineers, and one fireman, were taken from the wreckage, their bodies torn, bruised, and blackened by the fire from the wreck, while the body of the other fireman was, at last reports, still under the mass of twisted iron.

Tenders Hurled Backwards.

The tenders of the locomotives did not leave the rails but were hurled backwards and into the coaches behind them. In the case of the special the coach was badly wrecked and the occupants almost all of them received some hurt. The baggage car of the regular was telescoped.

The dead are: Wm. Fisher of New Haven, Wm. Norton of Waterbury, Charles Carpenter, and G. Erickson of New Haven.

ENGINEER RAN AWAY.

Blamed by Coroner's Jury and Warrant For His Arrest Issued.

New Haven, Conn., March 4.—A coroner's jury returned a preliminary finding Saturday to the effect that William E. Fisher, engineer of the special train that was wrecked at Waterbury, disobeyed orders, thereby causing the death of three persons, the probable fatal injury of two National Guardsmen, and the injury of twenty other persons.

No trace of Fisher's body was found in the wreckage, and the supposition is that he jumped and fled. A warrant has been issued for his arrest.

RAIL WAS LONG CRACKED.

Scrutiny of Broken Rail Shows Rust In the Break.

Guelph, March 4.—A thorough investigation into the cause of the wreck on the G. T. R. near here will be made by the Government. Mr. Ed. C. Lalonde of Ottawa, accompanied by Mr. A. Bougault, has arrived to get all the information that is to be had from every source available. Mr. Lalonde made an inspection of the broken rail at the Police Court, in company with Chief Randall and Coroner Dr. Robinson. The small piece of the rail was weighed at the market scales, and the condition of the broken steel and the pounded ends was carefully inspected. The condition of the raw steel where the break occurred, shows that the break did not go clear through at the one time, for in places the steel is covered with rust, while in others it is bright. But, although a portion of the break looks fresh, the pounded condition of the broken ends seems to indicate that the rail was broken clear through some time before the train was derailed.

BODY PUT ON TRACK.

Ernest Ironside Met Death Mysteriously Near Port Arthur.

Port Arthur, March 4.—Peculiar wounds on the body of Ernest Ironside, who was supposed to have been killed by a snow-plough near Mackenzie on the C. P. R., and the finding of a blood-stained knife and signs of a struggle, have led Coroner Laurie to hold an inquest, which will be continued to-day.

The theory is that Ironside was beaten and stabbed, and that his body then was placed on the tracks to make death appear accidental. His clothes were torn and cuts on his arms indicate that he tried to ward off blows.

Officers Elected.

St. Catharines, March 4.—The annual meeting of the Conservative Association of Lincoln and Niagara was held here on Saturday, when the following officers were elected: President, David Allen, Grimsby; vice-president James A. Keyes, St. Catharines; secretary, H. O'Loughlin, St. Catharines; treasurer, M. Y. Kating, St. Catharines.

Poison In the Salts.

Kingston, March 4.—Recently a farmer of this district purchased some supposed epsom salts from a local drug firm. After taking a dose he became violently ill. Analysis revealed particles of white vitrol or zinc sulphate. The farmer threatens legal action against the druggist.

Transvaal Cabinet.

Pretoria, Transvaal, March 4.—Edward Solomon, president of the Nationalists, has joined the Cabinet as Minister of Public Works. Gen. Smuts becomes Colonial Secretary and Minister of Mines, and DeVilliers takes SAVE THAW FROM ASYLUM.

Counsel Decided to Combat to Last Ditch Jerome's Probable Course.

New York, March 4.—Every day of the Thaw trial apparently takes District Attorney Jerome so much nearer to the foundation he is trying to lay for a request for a commission in lunacy as the first step in an attempt to send the slayer of Stanford White to Mattewan.

Mr. Jerome is firmly convinced that Thaw's mental condition is the result of paranoia, and not of melancholia, as the defence has tried to show. In other words, he believes that Thaw's mental malady is of a character which precludes the possibility that he could have been insane on the night that he shot Stanford White and sane to-day.

It was determined Saturday night at a conference of defendant's counsel, held at the home of Delphin M. Delmas, to endeavor by all legal means to combat the supposed attempt of the district attorney to apply for a lunacy commission.

The lawyers were unanimous in the opinion that Harry K. Thaw's fate should be decided by the jury, and when their conclusion was reported to the wife and mother of the defendant they acquiesced in the decision to fight the case to the end.

To Decorate Prince.

London, March 4.—King Edward has bestowed on Prince Henry of the Netherlands, the Prince Consort, the Grand Cross of the Bath, in recognition of his gallantry at the time of the wreck of the British steamship Berlin on the Hook of Holland, where the Prince directed the work of rescue on Feb. 23.

Diphtheria In White House.

Washington, March 4.—President Roosevelt's young son, Archie, has diphtheria, but it is said he is not seriously ill.

The patient has been isolated in the southeast room of the White House, and a strict quarantine is being maintained.

Rode In Pullman Cars.

Toronto, March 4—When the Church Army immigrants boarded the G. T. R. train to Aylmer yesterday, there was not room for the 50 men in the day coaches; so a number of them shouldered their big tin boxes and stumped into the Pullman.

Piling their bundles and luggage into the corner seats, they chose the most comfortable sections, and refused to be put out. They claimed that when a man has a ticket he has a right to a seat, no matter what car it is in. They rode to Hamilton in the Pullman.

Vagrant Dies In Street.

Kingston, March 4.—W. Fannon, a vagrant, was found dead in the street yesterday morning. He was aged 60 years.

Rancher Arrested as Rustler.

Medicine Hat, March 4.—A wealthy rancher named Patterson has been arrested, charged with horse stealing and with being a member of a notorious band or border rustlers.

Food Poisons.

90 PER CENT. OF ALL DISEASES THE RESULT OF UNDIGESTED PUTREFYING FOODS.

Men of affairs, women of society and children with active brains are too often sedentary in their habits, giving little time to exercise. To this evil is added that of high and irregular living—as a result, the stomach cannot stand the demands made upon it. The abused and overtaxed stomach does not properly do the work of digestion, food taken in ferments and the poison permeates the whole system. The body loses in weight and becomes a prey for the attack of whatever disease it may encounter.

Did it ever occur to you how busy that stomach of yours is? It only holds three pints, but in one year you force it to take in 2,400 pounds of material, digest it and prepare it for assimilation into the blood. No wonder it rebels when overworked. We crowd it with steaks and pastry, irritate its juices with spices and acids, and expect the stomach to do its work. It can't do it.

All over the inner layer of the stomach are glands which secrete the juices necessary to digestion. The entrance of food into the stomach is the signal for these glands to do their work. The more the food, and the more indigestible, the greater the demand upon them and upon the muscles of the wall adjoining.

Think of the tons of high-seasoned game, sweetmeats and appetizers crammed into this little four-ounce mill, and then wonder, if you will, why you are dizzy or nauseated or constipated. Don't blame your stomach or curse your fate that you should be born so unfortunate. Blame yourself and apply the remedy.

First, get a small package of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, taking one after each meal and at bed time. They are not a medicine, but a digestive. Your stomach is worn out and needs help, not medicine. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will do the work that the stomach fails to do. There's enough power in one grain of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets to digest 3,000 grains of ordinary food, so you needn't fear that anything you eat will remain in your stomach undigested.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will rout the poison because they remove the cause—food fermentation. They are nature's own cure for dyspepsia. The host of troubles dyspepsia is father of cannot be numbered, for a healthy stomach is the source of all health.

Seize your opportunity before worse conditions confront you. Send to-day for a free trial package of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. They will bring your stomach relief. F. A. Stuart Co., 83 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

GAS EXPLOSION IN MINE

Two Miners Killed and Thirty-One Others Seriously Injured.

Another Party of Thirty Thought to Have Been Entombed, Had Narrow Escape—Gas Was Ignited by Naked Lamp—Most of Injured Men Are Foreigners—Searching Parties Tour the Workings.

Scranton, Pa., March 4.—Fourteen men are near death in the Taylor Hospital and 12 others are suffering from slight burns through a terrific explosion of gas that swept through a portion of the Holden Mine of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Co., at North Taylor, Saturday.

Whether or not thirty other miners escaped was in doubt up to 10 o'clock Saturday night when Mine Inspector Williams felt safe in saying they were all out of the mine and alive.

Searching parties, who toured the affected part of the mine, returned with the report that they could find no men in the workings.

Caused by Naked Lamp.

The force of the explosion was supposedly caused by gas that had been accumulating all day, unnoticed, and which was ignited by a naked lamp.

Two Miners Killed.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., March 4.—Two men were killed and five badly burned by an explosion of gas in the Woodward Mine of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Co. at Kingston Saturday evening.

The injured are foreigners. They were seriously burned, but it is believed they will recover.

The mine is very gaseous, and the men worked with safety lamps.

It was at first reported that a large number of men were entombed in the mine, but this arose from the accident at the Holden Mine near Scranton.

Oil Explosion Burns Twelve.

New York, March 4.—Mrs. Benjamin P. O'Connell, 42 years of age, was probably fatally injured, her husband, aged 43, seriously injured, and several of their ten small children painfully injured, by an explosion of a can of kerosene oil at their home in Brooklyn last night. The explosion of the can caused a lamp to explode also. The mother, father and children received burns as they ran through the flames to the street.

Struck By Semaphore.

Toronto, March 4.—George Allan of Paris, Ont., is in Grace Hospital suffering from a fracture of the skull and severe scalp wounds and it not expected to recover, although he is still conscious.

Allan was found on Saturday afternoon in a car in the G.T.R. yards. He was in charge of a car of sheep being sent by Telfer Bros. of Paris to the Ottawa Live Stock Show.

The injured man was looking out of the door of the car and was struck by a semaphore arm or some other object. He is not able to tell just what struck him.

Slip Brings Death.

Hamilton, March 4.—A fatal accident occurred on Saturday at Park and York streets, the victim being Steve Lambert, an employe of the Hamilton Brewing Association.

Lambert was carrying a keg of beer into a store, when he slipped. The keg crushed in his chest. He was taken to the City Hospital, where he died about an hour later.

Brakeman Falls to Death.

London, March 4.—H. P. Williams, 23 years of age, employed on the G. T. R. as a brakeman, was killed yesterday by falling from his train near Hyde Park.

SEVEN BUILDINGS BURN.

Damage to Extent of $25,000 Done Woodstock, N.B.

Woodstock, N.B., March 4.—A fire, which broke out about midnight, which broke out about midnight on Friday, threatened the entire business section of Woodstock, but was put out after destroying seven buildings, as follows: Sullivan Bros., pool and bowling alley, occupied upstairs by Misses Fisher's dwelling; Stevens and Hayden's grocery, occupied upstairs by Mrs. Baker's millinery store; the G. W. Gibson, Co., building, occupied on the ground floor by the G. W. Gibson Co., tailoring and gent's furnishings store, and G. H. Harrison's insurance office, and upstairs by Mrs. Hayden's dressmaking and millinery establishment and the N. B. Telephone Exchange; the Dent building, occupied by Mrs. Camben and the Dent bakery downstairs, and the Dent dwelling upstairs.

The buildings are a total loss, but much of the stock was saved. The loss is estimated at $25,000, of which $15,000 is covered by insurance.

The town is now without telephones.

Gilbert to Hang.

Regina, Sask., March. 4.—Gilbert, the aged murderer of Barrett Henderson, will hang on Friday next, 8th inst. Attorney-General Lamont having been notified by the Ottawa authorities that the appeal for a new trial had been dismissed.

Mail Bags Stolen In Street.

Chicago, March 4.—Three mail pouches, one filled with registered mail, said to contain $5,000, was stolen from a wagon in front of the Stock Exchange building while the driver was making a collection in the building, last night.

Murder and Suicide.

Newcastle, Pa., March 4.—Geo. Cachrick shot Nicholas Majon through the heart here yesterday and then fired a bullet through his own body. Cachrick probbaly will die. The shooting occurred in a boarding-house.

Railways In Pyrenees.

Madrid, March 4.—The French and Spanish Governments have signed a convention providing for the construction of three new railroads across the Pyrenees, the work to be completed within ten years.

Harry Thaw's Case Doubtful

Dr. Evans' Cross-Examination By Jerome Completed.

Five Days' Questioning by District Attorney Fails to Ensnare Alienist Into Admission That Prisoner Is Still Mad--Expert Admits Thaw Knew What He Was Doing at the Time of the Murder.

New York, March 5.—After five days of tiresome cross-examination, in which he keenly protected the interests of the defence, Dr. Evans left the witness stand in the Thaw trial yesterday, subject to recall for redirect and re-cross-examination.

The insanity expert appears to have been quite a match for the attorney-general, who displayed so much intimate medical knowledge during his famous grilling of Dr. Wiley, the Pittsburg alienist.

But Jerome's ways are so devious and he has built up such an atmosphere of mystery as to the probable development of his side of the case, that the outlook for Thaw is regarded by a number of those who have followed the trial closely, as being doubtful.

Dr. Evans was succeeded on the stand by Dr. Charles G. Wagner of Binghamton, N. Y., who accompanied him on most of his visits to Thaw in the Tombs.

Dr. Evans admitted yesterday that Thaw had an insane knowledge of what was doing on Madison Square roof garden the night he killed Stanford White.

The New York statutes prescribe that, to be exempt from punishment for crime, an insane person must have been so demented as not to know the nature or quality of his act.

In explaining Thaw's actions subsequent to the shooting—his quiet demeanor, his directions as to what should be done with his wife, and who should be sent for—Dr. Evans declared that, as soon as the defendant shot Stanford White, the "brain storm" subsided and his senses began to re-organize themselves so that he knew quite well what he was about.

Knew What He Was Doing.

He also knew he was attacking Stanford White when he fired, Dr. Evans admitted, but the knowledge was that of an insane man and the act was the result of insane reasoning.

Dr. Wagner also declared Thaw had irrational knowledge of what was happening on the roof garden. He believed the prisoner's insanity dated from the time Evelyn Nesbit told him her story in Paris, in 1903.

He said Thaw's condition of mind at the time of the shooting was the result of one of the insanities of adolescence. He would not further classify the next form.

MAY ASK CHANGE OF VENUE.

Cayuga Poisoning Case May Be Tried In Toronto.

Cayuga, March 5.—Everything is in readiness for the preliminary hearing on Wednesday of Mrs. Mattie Perkins, the Cayuga woman under arrest on a charge of poisoning her husband Henry. Three Hamilton witnesses have been summoned, Drs. Edgar and Bauer, and C. D. Blachford. Other witnesses from Canfield, Welland, Cayuga and the surrounding country will testify, and the hearing will likely take some days.

E. F. B. Johnston, K.C., of Toronto, will defend the woman, and application will probably be made for a change of venue to either Toronto or Hamilton, the claim being that the feeling against the woma nin Cayuga is too strong to result in a fair and impartial trial.

TWEEDIE TAKES IT.

Pugsley Succeeds Him As Premier of New Brunswick.

Ottawa, March 5.—The Government has lost no time in filling the vacant position of Lieutenant-Governor of New Brunswick. The successor of the late Governor Snowball is Hon. L. J. Tweedie, Premier of the Province, who was appointed to the vacancy at Saturday's meeting of the Cabinet.

Mr. Tweedie will be succeeded in the Premiership by Hon. Wm. Pugsley, the present Attorney-General. The vacancy in the Cabinet of New Brunswick caused by Mr. Tweedie's translation will go to Hon. C. W. Robinson, the present Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, who will take the portfolio of Provincial Secretary. Mr. C. J. Osmand, one of the members for Albert County, will be Speaker.

Car Runs Into House.

Fergus, March 5.—While a train of empty flat cars was backing down the G.T.R. spur which runs through the middle of the town yesterday one of the cars left the rails on account of the ice, and ran into a stone house alongside the track, knocking in the wall. The brakeman jumped, thus saving themselves, but one of the women inmates of the house, a Mrs. Fischer, was not so fortunate. She escaped with a broken ankle. The car was thrown directly across the track, and required the Palmerston auxiliary to get it in position and repair the car breakage.

Strike In Auto Factory.

Toledo, O., March 5.—Fully 300 men employed by the Pope-Toledo Motor Works here struck yesterday. Last week the machinists' strike was declared settled, and the striking men reinstated. The latter say the company has violated the agreement.

Prison Inspector Slain.

Ula, March 5.—Prison Inspector Kalbo was shot and killed yesterday by three revolutionists in front of his residence. One of the assassins, who was captured, said that the inspector had been sentenced because of his cruelty to political prisoners.

POSTAL CONFAB THURSDAY.

Canadian and U. S. Officials Will Confer Over Treaty.

Ottawa, March 5.—Postal officials of Canada and the United States will discuss on Thursday the proposed abrogation of the postal convention between the two countries on May 7.

The Canadian Government objects to carrying tons of what is taken as second-class matter in the United States and not so classed here.

If these periodicals were published in Canada they would pay substantial postage.

Canada intends to exclude from the mails anything the Postoffice Department sees fit, whatever chorus of disapproval is raised.

Rodolphe Lemieux, Dr. Coulter and Secretary Smith will represent Canada.

MINER'S NARROW ESCAPE.

Dynamite Explodes As He Is Being Hauled Up Shaft.

Cobalt, March 5.—While blasting on the Cobalt Clear Lake Mining Co. property, a miner named J. A. Couvrette had a miraculous escape.

He had just placed two shots, 1 1-2 stick of dynamite, in each hole, and given the signal to hoist. There were also three sticks of dynamite upon which he sat in the bucket.

There was delay in hoisting and he was not five feet from the bottom of the 65 foot shaft when the dynamite went off. Couvrette was blown ten feet up the shaft, but was still in the bucket when hauled up.

His leg was broken in two places, an ankle sprained, and bad cuts sustained on the back of the head.

Holds Railroad Board.

New York, March 5.—The coroner's jury in the inquest into the N. Y. Central wreck in the Bronx on Feb. 16, when 23 persons were killed, brought in a verdict last night, holding the operating and construction departments of the railroad responsible.

The coroner tried to get a recommendation as to the individuals, but did not succeed.

He then declared he would hold the entire board of directors and the president of the Central and patrol them until 10 o'clock this morning.

Born In the Train.

Cincinati, Ohio, March 5.—On a Pullman car attached to a Big Four train, steaming out of Delaware, Ohio, near here Sunday afternoon, Mrs. A. D. Swisher, of Toronto, Ont., became the mother of a lusty baby boy.

She boarded the train east of Cleveland, and had hoped to reach Newport, Ky., so her son might in later years boast that he was born on Kentucky soil.

The passengers collected $35 to buy the newcomer a present as a souvenir of the occasion.

Refuse Married Men.

London, March 5.—(C. A. P.)—The Glasgow Advertiser re emigration for railway construction in Canada, points out that the men's bare statement alone, taken as to whether they are married or not, will result shortly in a number of wives and children becoming chargeable on the parish councils, and says the Canadian Government ought to be asked to place restrictions on the wholesale emigration from other countries of married men.

Falls Down Steps to Death.

Quebec, March 5.—Austin J. Griffiths, son of the caretaker of the customs house, tripped and fell down stairs on Saturday night, striking his head with such force that he died yes-

TIMELY TOPICS.

Good evening. Have you seen any harbingers of spring yet?

Talking of good hard material for road-building, isn't there some Flint in this vicinity, not doing much at present?

• • •

A large taxpayer of this city does not agree with Mr. J. W. Johnson in the opinion that the Gas Committee does not need an expert gas maker to take charge of the Gas works. The men employed at the works, our subscriber says, are no doubt good mechanics, but every mechanic is not an expert gas maker. If there is any truth in the report, current on the street, that Belleville has been getting 1500 feet less gas from a ton of coal than other places, then it is time somebody who understands the business thoroughly was placed in charge. And the mere production of gas is not the only question. There are the by-products to be looked after. In a case of this kind it would appear that the best man available would be the cheapest.

THE ABUSED REPORTER.

(New York Post.)

The exact truth is that the reporter more often heightens the repute of an after-dinner speaker, or a political debater, or a great man submitting to an interview, than lowers it. Few speakers know how badly they speak—how horribly a stenographic reproduction of their remarks would read. The ungrammatical expressions, the broken-backed sentences, the forgotten promises the omitted conclusions, the awkwardnesses—all these it is the province of the reporter to reduce to something like order and lucidity.

People may well ask what's coming over The Globe these days, when it republishes an item like the following from the Grit Kincardine Review. The fact that it is true does not, as a matter of course, "cut much ice" with The Globe:

"The Government will probably get no credit for it, but anyone who knows how bye-elections have been fought is well aware that the Government could have carried West Middlesex if they wanted to. The late Government carried ridings under more adverse conditions, but we learned afterwards the methods by which these triumphs were accomplished. To refrain from using such tactics to bring about a victory is a surer mark of courage and virtue than to yield to the temptation to win at any hazard, lest the critics say, as they say to-day, that the Government is becoming weaker, and prove their contention with the argument that they could not win a riding like West Middlesex in a bye-election. It seems paradoxical to say so, but the very fact that the Government did not win the bye-election is one very good reason why they should have won."

The following from the Peterboro Review is interesting as showing what fools some people—and papers—can make of themselves:

"On Saturday evening a meeting called on a few hours' notice filled the large rooms of the Young Conservative Club. It consisted of Englishmen and their friends of all nationalities who had gathered to protest against the action of the Examiner in allowing a letter to be published in its columns alleging that Englishmen were less worthy of being allowed to enter Canada than Chinamen, who were of some use, being at least able to wash shirts. The meeting was called to order shortly after eight o'clock by the chairman, who stated briefly the object of it. He said that it was deplored by all true Canadians that such a slur should have been permitted circulation. Not only was it an insult to people who were invited to come here by the Government and the people at large, but it was a direct blow to that British connection which we all cherish. At the present time many journals in England are alleging the very thing that the Examiner allowed space to namely, alleged hatred and contempt of Canadians for the English These statements are forwarded to England and cause no end of ill-feeling and heartburnings. Not only that, but it is a poor return for the boundless hospitality always shown to Canadians in England. Apart from its far-reaching effect upon our relations with the Mother Country it helps to prejudice the chances of newly arrived immigrants in this country and is in every way to be deplored."

Many speeches were made by prominent men, and finally a resolution was passed calling on the Examiner (which, by the way, is Hon. Mr. Stratton's paper) to make what amends it could for the slander published.

It is rather amusing to note the indignation of certain U. S. papers because their Sunday publications have been stopped from sale in this country on the Lord's day. They are going to see about it mind you, and somebody will certainly sit up before the matter ends. It will strike not a few Canadians that those fresh individuals might as well awaken to the fact that Canada controls her own Sunday, and will probably continue to do so. At all events, it would be a sad day for this country if her people obeyed the 4th commandment of the Decalogue like the inhabitants of Uncle Sam's domains do. And a very good way to bring that most undesirable state of affairs about would be to allow their Sunday literature to come in and be sold without let or hindrance. And it might be remarked, too, that when the Canadian people are really anxious for Sunday papers they will probably be able to print the same themselves.

To Break Up A Cold

An eminent authority on lung trouble, who effected many remarkable cures in his camp for consumptives in the pine woods of Maine, advises the use of the following formula: Virgin Oil of Pine (Pure), one-half ounce; Glycerine, two ounces; good Whisky, one-half pint. Shake well and take in teaspoonful doses every four hours. It will break up a cold in twenty-four hours and cure any cough that is curable. The ingredients are not expensive and can be secured from any good prescription druggist, but great care should be exercised to have them pure, as there are many adulterated imitations of this pine product which create nausea and never effect the desired results.

Virgin Oil of Pine (Pure) is put up in half-ounce vials for druggists to dispense in filling prescriptions. Each vial is securely sealed in a round wooden case with engraved wrapper, with the name—Virgin Oil of Pine (Pure), prepared only by Leach Chemical Co., Windsor, Ontario—plainly printed thereon. To avoid substitution, it is best that the ingredients be purchased separately and the mixture prepared at home.

Wedding Bells.

A Springbrook correspondent writes: On Wednesday, the 27th day of Feb., at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Rupert, of this village, there took place the most pleasing event of the season, in the marriage of their youngest daughter, Florence E., to Mr. Wm. A. Bateman, of Springbrook. The wedding was celebrated at noon, the bride being led to the altar on the arm of her father to the inspiring strains of Mendelssohn's Wedding March, which was played by Miss Lillian MacConnell. The bride was assisted by Miss Mollie Bateman, sister of the groom, while Mr. H. Bruce MacConnell acted as best man. Both bride and bridesmaid were beautifully dressed in white silk, the bride's dress being covered with point d'esprit. Her travelling dress was of navy blue broadcloth. Rev. A. L. Brown, of Marmora, tied the nuptial knot. After the ceremony a most savory wedding dinner was enjoyed by all present. The couple took a short honeymoon trip to Toronto, stopping during their stay at the King Edward. The groom presented the bride with a beautiful gold locket and chain, and the bridesmaid with a gold bracelet, while to the groomsman he presented a pair of gold cuff links. Mr. and Mrs. Bateman will reside on his farm, just outside the village, and it is the wish of all their friends that they shall enjoy a happy and prosperous future.

AN OLD SAYING.

Showing How Cause and Effect Are Never Far Removed.

It is an old saying "Where there's honey there's bees"—not less true is one which science has coined more recently, "Where there's Dandruff there's germs" — and — to push the inference still further we may truly say "Where there's Dandruff cured Newbro's Herpicide has been at work.'

The reason of Herpicide's isolation as a genuine cure for Dandruff lies in the fact that it attacks and destroys the root of the whole trouble—a parasitic germ which feeds upon the material which nourishes the hair follicle.

Other so-called remedies are not directed at this true cause of the disease.

Accept no substitute, there is none. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. Two sizes, 50c and $1.00. J. S. McKeown, special agent.

More Land Grafting.

Just read the particulars of the following transaction, and ask yourself if it can be called anything but scandalous. According to the facts as stated in the House by Mr. Herron, M.P., for Alberta, the details are as follows:

On the 27th of May, 1902, an application was made to the Department of the Interior on behalf of H. P. Brown, of Montana, for a closed lease of 60,000 acres, west of Bow River. The concession was granted March, 1903, the applicant to pay in advance six months' rental or $603.81. Mr. Brown did not sign the lease or pay the rent. He was not visible. But in December, 1903, his lease was included with those of McGregor and Hitchcock (of whom much has been heard already) in the irrevocable leases, good for twenty-one years. In January, 1904, the Department wrote to Mr. Brown's address asking him to sign the lease and pay the rent. Mr. Brown was never heard from, though frequent letters were sent him during two years, until he owed $2,400 rent. Meanwhile ranchers wanted this land, but were told it was taken. It is clear that if Mr. Brown was missing somebody with a political pull was holding down his lease.

Mr. Sifton went out and Mr. Oliver became Minister. He decided that Mr. Brown must lose his concession if he did not appear and pay his back rent. At this critical moment A. J. Adamson, M.P., one of the parties to the Saskatchewan land deal, visited the Department and produced an assignment from Mr. Brown to the Galway Horse and Cattle Company, of which Adamson was president. This assignment was dated September 17th, 1903, so that Mr. Adamson had been carrying it about during the two years that the Department was ostensibly looking for Brown, and keeping genuine cattle men out of the limits. But Adamson was not satisfied with what he had. He wanted all the arrears of rent cancelled and a new lease started at that date. Mr. Oliver explained that the department was not giving any more twenty-one year leases. He offered a new revocable lease dating from 1905, or Brown's twenty-one year lease if he would pay the rent that Brown owed on it. Adamson chose the revocable lease and the Minister made the rent payable from that date.

The country has heard a good deal, in connection with these land deals of Mr. Adamson's brother-in-law, Mr. Turriff, M.P. After Mr. Adamson had made his choice and got his revocable lease, Mr. Turriff appealed to the Minister. As a result Mr. Adamson's revocable lease was changed to a twenty-one year irrevocable concession. This change was made in March, 1906, and Mr. Adamson was not asked to pay Mr. Brown's back rent. As soon as this lease was made satisfactory to Mr. Adamson and Mr. Turriff, the Galway Company sold it to Mr. John Cowdry, of McLeod. It was reported that Mr. Cowdry, who is a large cattle owner, paid $22,500 for the concession. Mr. Cowdry had tried to get a grazing lease in his own name, but found there was none for him. His only chance was to wait until the favorites had obtained the lease and then pay them their rake off. The Galway Horse Company came into existence in 1904 and disappeared in 1906. It never had any horses or cattle. Its headquarters was hundreds of miles from the grazing country. It was apparently organized for the purpose of getting this lease and selling it. The only three names subscribed to its memorandum are those of A. J. Adamson, M.P., of J. M. Adamson, his wife, who is a sister of Mr. Turriff, M.P., and A. J. Bell, who is a cousin of J. M. Adamson, and Mr. Turriff.

Mr. Adamson seems to have peddled this lease about trying to sell it for $30,000. Finding it could not be sold well as a revocable concession, he got it changed to its present form. Mr. Brown has never yet been found. Though he claimed to be in Montana, his first letters reached Ottawa the day after they were dated. This is explained by the fact that the legend "per J.D.M." appears under Brown's signature. J. D.M. represents J. D. McGregor, the hero of the Grand Forks Cattle Company concession, the chief character in the Robins Irrigation Deal, former campaigner in Brandon, sometime license inspector in the Yukon. Mr. Adamson and his associates seem to have invested $650 plus the cost of two or three letters and of the Adamson and Turriff interviews with the Minister. The whole 60,000 acres has been shut out from use for four years while this deal was maturing. Adamson denies that he got $22,000, but refuses to say what the amount was.

The whole scandalous transaction has been endorsed by a party vote in the House. The Laurier Government has deliberately justified and assumed responsibility for the deals and steals that have been exposed. The inevitable end of its hardihood cannot be long delayed.

Alligators will soon be extinct, 30,000 alligator hides are yearly worked up in leather.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

HOCKEY.

Peterboro Takes the Jump.

Peterboro Review: The Peterboro O.H.A. hockey team has disbanded and a professional team is being organized in the city. Two games have been arranged for this week. Arnprior on Wednesday night, and the Guelph Nationals on Friday night. It is not likely that the Peterboro management will have to import any players to make up their pro. team. It is said that practically all the players who constituted the O.H.A. senior team will turn out with the pros. In case some of the younger players should not care to join the ranks, there are other good men in the city to take their places. It is likely that before the season is over, in addition to Arnprior and Guelph, the teams of Belleville, Berlin and Toronto will appear here.

The organization of a professional team here comes as no surprise. Unless this was done it meant that there would be no more hockey in Peterboro this season. There should be ice at Brock street rink for another two weeks, and no doubt some splendid games will be seen.

In all probability a professional league will be formed next winter in which Peterboro will be represented, along with Belleville, Toronto, Berlin, Guelph Stratford, Galt, and probably several other of the larger hockey centres in Ontario.

CURLING.

Veterans Beat Cubs.

A couple of curling matches took place at the rink last evening and both were interesting. The veterans played a match with a rink representing the younger players, and the result was a victory by 3 shots for the vets. The players and scores were as follows:

Veterans.	Cubs.
J. W. Jenkins	S. Robertson
J. D. Clarke	F. Quick
F. Dolan	M. Wright
T. Thomson,	J. A. McFee
Skip—17.	Skip—14.

The second match was between two colt teams representing nationalities, namely Irish and Scotch. The Irish were winners by 4 shots, as the following score shows:

Irish.	Scotch.
W. Dolan	B. Carr
W. Belair	M. Sprague
W. Burke	W. Cook
W. Connolly.	H. A. Fish,
Skip—22.	Skip—18.

SPORTING NOTES.

The Peterboro Hockey club will turn professional, that is to say, they will play professional games openly in future. One by one the clubs are drifting away from that waterlogged old derelict, the O.H.A., and coming out in a manly way for open and honest professionalism. Things are shaping now, for a bunch of good clubs in this district next season.

In the meantime, don't forget the match next Thursday night, when there will be a chance to watch the best hockey seen in this city for many a year.

The reserved seats for the big hockey match are going like hot cakes. It will be noted that the Guelph team play in Peterboro the night after they play here.

The fact that Belleville will have its first taste of professional hockey is interesting, and it is to be hoped the match will be well patronized, for on this match will hinge the question of whether or not Belleville will have a senior team next season or not. People who like to see the game played in a scientific way, without muffing and missed passes, will be right in their element next Thursday night. The home team will spare no pains or expense to get together the best team possible, and if they don't beat Guelph they'll surely make 'em go some. Be on hand to cheer the lads along, and to give senior hockey a good send-off.

Toronto Star; With Berlin, Guelph and Peterboro out, and Stratford and Galt wavering, the senior series of the O.H.A. is in a bad way and no mistake.

Stratford seniors trimmed Kingston 7-3 in the former place last night, and it looks now as though the Soldiers will have their work cut out to win at home.

How the junior O. H. A. championship will be decided is still unsettled, Stratford have asked for a further postponement; and this time Lindsay are not at all anxious to agree to their request. According to the most recent arrangement the first game is to take place in Lindsay to-morrow, with the return contest in Stratford on Friday, but it now looks as if a sudden death game in Toronto towards the end of the week will prove to be the solution of the deadlock.

Mail and Empire: It's Peterboro now, and it won't be long before the rest of the "hired men" come out in their true colors, and run up the Jolly Roger. It has been hard for the O.H.A. to realize that professionalism is running riot in its ranks, but any doubts it may have had as to the existence of "pay rolls," in connection with clubs under its jurisdiction, will have been pretty well dissipated ere this. However, the O. H.A. as a straightforward sporting organization has no superior in this country or in any other, and it deserves every credit for pluckily facthe recognition of professional or semi-professional hockey, it is extremely doubtful if the evil day could be long deferred.

Lindsay Post: The news that "Bill" Crowley of the Peterboro seniors intends playing professional hockey comes as no surprise to Lindsay sports. On the contrary, it has been long expected from this quarter that some of those Peterboro "lily-white amateurs" would show their true colors.

She called me "Jack," but instantly
She blushed as red as red could be
And bit her lip as if to show
She meant not to have spoken so—
All which I was not slow to see.

What were my feelings? Well, I'm free
To say I felt no great degree
Of heart expanding bliss, although
She called me "Jack!"

It seemed to be a mystery
Until I thought of John Sunnice.
Was he her "Jack." I'd like to know?
You see, my given name is Joe.
That's why she blushed when thoughtlessly

Shingling a House.

And I looked and beheld seven carpenters shingling a house. They were hauling up bundles of shingles that had been lying in the rain for two days and nailing them on one by one. In a few days the shingling will be done. Then the painter will come along with his ladders and brushes and stains, and $300 will be spent by the owner of the cottage to have it thoroughly dabbed. And in a little while the sun will shine, and all the shingles will buckle, some up, some down, until the cottage will resemble a frizzled chicken. And there will be leaks and cursings and lamentations. Now, brethren, why not be sensible in these small matters? Painters are not needed at all in a case of this kind. Keep your shingles dry; buy a few barrels of stain; soak the shingles in the stain and throw them on the grass to dry; then nail them to the clapboards. They will never buckle, they will never leak, and you have saved $300.

Forest Air.

There is a general impression that the humidity of the air is greater in the woods than in the open fields. This is contradicted, however, by the result of observations made in Germany. It was found there that the humidity, both relative and absolute, was slightly greater in the open than in the woods, and this was true equally in the morning and in the afternoon. As to the temperature of the air among the trees, it was a trifle higher than in the open in the morning and in a more marked degree in the afternoon.

A Comparison.

Thomas Sheridan, the father of Lady Dufferin, once displeased his father, who, remonstrating with him, exclaimed, "Why, Tom, my father would never have permitted me to do such a thing!" "Sir," said his son in a tone of the greatest indignation, "do you presume to compare your father to my father?"

Dickens' Interest In Inns.

STORIES OF THE CAT.

Legends and Facts About the Still but Half Tamed Animal.

"There are few tales of cat fidelity and many of dog, yet one thinks no worse of the cat for this," says an observer. "His very independence compels respect. He walks 'by his wild lone, waving his wild tail, through the wild woods,' as an inspired modern writer has set forth. All the generations have not served to tame him, and the most domestic of the race will revert sooner to a wild life at 'the call of the blood' than any other friend of man. It is thus scarcely surprising to find that the most famous cat lovers have been drawn from the ranks of politicians and poets, those whom reasons of state or a sensitive temperament have rendered averse from trusting their fellow creatures and who consequently bestow all their affections upon the 'fireside sphinx.' We are invited to believe that the most famous of all cats, he who brought fame and fortune to his master, Dick Whittington, was no four legged animal at all, but merely the French word 'achat'—to buy and sell at profit—and that the great merchant made a pet only of his merchandise from the very beginning. Thus in later years do the idols of our youth topple about our heads.

"But other legends—nay, facts—are left us. Cardinal Wolsey, for instance, when acting in his official capacity as lord chancellor is said to have had his favorite cat always seated beside him, and another prince of the church, Richelieu, found his only relaxation in keeping a number of kittens in his private cabinet and watching their gambols during his spare moments. We cannot really reckon Richelieu as a true lover of the race, however, for directly the kittens grew to three months he had them sent away and replaced by others. Lord Chesterfield left in his will life pensions to his favorite cats and their kittens. Victor Hugo's great cat Chanoine always sat on a large red ottoman in the center of his salon and received his guests in state, showing marked displeasure if any one failed to caress or praise her.

"Tasso wrote a sonnet to his favorite cat, and Petrarch had one he loved as dearly, we are told, as Laura. No doubt she was the confidant of many of his trials and consoled him for much of the fair lady's disdain, and when pussy died the poet had her embalmed in the Egyptian fashion and carried her mummy about with him everywhere. Baudelaire, the French poet, a very shy man, was always ill at ease in any new house he entered until the family cat was brought up and introduced to him, after which, with the cat on his knee, he was perfectly happy in his silent poet fashion.

"Traditions respecting cats are, of course, legion. From time immemorial they have been regarded as somewhat uncanny, omens of weal or woe, beings to be either conciliated or crushed. The cat worship of ancient Egypt and, later, the Roman creed that the cat was sacred to Diana speak of the one; the wild charges of witchcraft—or concern in it—rife during the dark ages of Europe will attest the latter. But there is another popular belief deserving also of mention, that which sets forth the old maid as the cat's only friend, a legend arising in the mediaeval nunneries overrun with mice, where one or more cats were always kept and were no doubt much petted by the good nuns."

A Hard Burial.

Some few winters ago a gang of carriage washers was engaged washing carriages on one of our northern railways when one of them remarked to his mate, an old soldier who was famous as a long bowist, "It's awful cold this morning, David."

"Cold! This is nothing," said David. "I remember when I was in Canada in 186— one of our mates died, poor chap. And you will have some idea what sort of frost it was when I tell you it froze the body so stiff and the ground so hard that we had to get hammer and chisel, make a nick in the ground and then drive him in with a pile driver. That was the only way we could give the poor chap decent burial."—London Answers.

Using the Eyes.

A scientific writer quotes Helmholtz as saying that, in his work he could only liken himself to the mountaineer, painfully and slowly climbing, often obliged to turn backward, lighting later on new traces leading forward, and finally reaching the goal, only to find to his confusion that a plain road led thither, if he had only had the eyes to see. Darwin said he thought he was superior to the common run of men in noticing things which easily escape attention and in observing them carefully.

Cheap Generosity.

A great smoker handed his cigar case to his right hand neighbor. "Thank you, but I don't smoke," said the man.

He therefore handed it to the man on the left, who made the same reply, whereupon his wife nudged him and said, "Why don't you hand it to the captain?"

"No, thank you; he smokes."—Nos Loisirs.

The Mean Thing!

"Who was that fool you bowed to?"

"My husband."

"Oh, I—er—I—humbly apologize. I"—

"Never mind, I'm not angry. But what a keen observer you are!"

A Meal in a Moment

Bovril will do it for you

A meal prepared with the help of a chafing dish has a great fascination for many.

But the woman who uses a chafing dish and hasn't tried what the addition of a few drops of Bovril will do, has yet to find out how delightfully piquant and appetising, a chafing dish preparation can be made.

Not only does "Bovril" add to the richness and taste, but also very materially to the nourishing qualities, and that's best of all.

It is much easier and more pleasant to look through the advertisements in the paper than it is to bore the clerks and waste her own time. The advertisements in a paper stating articles for sale, with prices, will keep much of the money that goes to the large cities at home."

He was a staid old clergyman, not so well versed in the slang of the day as even some good preachers are, and he was a trifle amazed at the frivolous behavior of some of the younger members of the flock at one of his week-evening meetings. An elder had just concluded a rather long-winded prayer, and the pastor, taking up a Torrey-Alexander hymn book, requested congregation to arise and sing, announcing, as usual the number and title of his selection. Yes, No—What?

In the gallery of the house of representatives one afternoon last winter two visitors from a western state fell to talking of their newly elected representative.

"I ain't been here but a day," said one of the visitors, "so I ain't had a chance to hear the old man make a speech. Great Scott, how he used to go after them trusts when he was making his run for the house! Been giving it to 'em pretty lively, I reckon, since he come to the house."

"Well," was the doubtful reply of the other Missourian, "I don't know so much about that. It appears to me that he's kinder short like in his speeches. I've been hangin' round for five or six days, an' I ain't heard him say much."

"If he did speak you may be sure it was to the point," confidently added the first visitor.

"I reckon you're right there," said the other. "His speeches is brief, all right. I've heard him five times. Three times he says 'aye' and twice he says 'no.'"—Ridgway's.

THE BOMBMAKER.

He Makes an Apparently Harmless Letter a Deadly Machine.

So expert are bombmakers nowadays that an apparently harmless letter may kill any person who tries to open it. A piece of cardboard is cut to a size which, when folded over, will fit into an ordinary envelope. The four corners of this are slit into narrow strips. Fulminate of mercury is spread over three of the slits, and the sheet is folded and fastened together. Projecting from each side of the folded sheet is a little metal strip, or detonator, glued to the cardboard in such a manner that the envelope cannot be opened without striking one of them. Upon meeting this slight resistance the hand moving the paper cutter instinctively pushes harder, and the result is an explosion that either kills or maims.

The easiest bomb to construct is set in operation by simply turning it upside down. It is usually a good sized cracker box, lined with paper and half filled with a mixture of chlorate of potassium and ordinary sugar. Into this a bottle of a powerful acid is introduced. The remainder of the space in the box is filled with scraps of metal. Then the lid is soldered on.

All that is then necessary is to place the box upside down at the spot in which it is to explode. The acid eats quickly through the cork of the bottle and comes in contact with the chlorate of potassium. As a result of the chemical combination which takes place there is a terrific explosion.

THE ESPOUSAL.

Ancient Ceremony of the Mutual Promise of Marriage.

The first part of the matrimonial office was anciently termed the espousal, which took place some time prior to the actual celebration of marriage. These espousals consisted in a mutual promise of marriage, which was made by the man and woman before the bishop or presbyter and several witnesses.

After them the articles of agreement of marriage, called tabulae matrimoniales, which are mentioned by Augustine, were signed by both persons. After this the man delivered to the woman the ring and other gifts, an action which was termed subarrhation. In the latter ages the espousals have always been performed at the same time as the office of matrimony in all the churches abroad, and it has long been customary for the ring to be delivered to the woman after the contract has been made, which has always been in the actual office of matrimony.

The ring is a special token of spousage. In some of the old manuals for the use of foreign cathedrals before the minister proceeds to the marriage he is directed to ask the woman's dowry—viz, the tokens of spousage—and by these tokens of spousage are to be understood rings or money or some other things to be given to the woman by the man, which giving is called wedding or covenanting, especially when it is done by the giving of a ring.

Knew Him at Once.

There are other sure ways of bringing a man to mind besides mentioning his name. Among the candidates who were sent from Princeton to a Philadelphia church was one young man whose language was of the sort which dazzles and delights the younger members of a congregation and sometimes pleases the elders as well. In this case the committee were besieged to ask for the young man again, and they consented, but unfortunately the man to whose lot it fell to write the letter had forgotten the candidate's name. Nothing daunted, he wrote to one of the seminary professors:

"Please send us that floweret, streamlet, rivulet, cloudlet, starlight and moonbeam young man again. We've forgotten his name, but we've no doubt you'll recognize him."

"We do," wrote the professor. And the desired candidate was sent and subsequently was called to the parish.

To Extract Essence From Flowers.

Procure a quantity of the petals of any flowers that smell sweet and fragrant. Take thin pieces of muslin or fine linen and after having dipped them in good Lucca oil or Florence oil place them as layers between the petals. Sprinkle a small quantity of fine salt on the flowers and put a layer of linen and a layer of flowers alternately until an earthen vessel or wide mouthed glass bottle is full. Tie the top over with oil silk or parchment, then lay the vessel in a south aspect in the heat of the sun, and in fifteen days, when uncovered, a fragrant oil may be squeezed away from the whole mass.

Stage Dressmaking.

Our plays are for the most part overdressed, with extravagance, vulgarity and inappropriateness obtaining in place of artistic fitness. The new costumes have to some extent frequently undone the results of undress rehearsals, the actresses no longer representing the drama as they did before the dressmaker sent home their gowns, while the variety of their impersonations is swamped by the uniformity of their fashions.—A. W. Pinero in Costume.

Inconsistency.

"What is inconsistency?" asked the curious one.

"Well," responded the wise one, "it is that spirit which moves a woman whose sleeves stop at the elbow to scold her husband because he hasn't any cuffs on."

The Property of the Cobalt Silver Mountain Mining Company, Limited, is located in the heart of the richest silver belt in the world, and consists of twenty acres.

It is surrounded by five of the best and richest shipping Mines in the Cobalt Camp, viz., The University, Bailey, Pig Pete (or Cobalt-Central), McKinley-Darragh-Savage and Silver Bar Mines, and it is also adjacent to the famous Gillies Timber Limit and only a few hundred feet from the Nipissing and Foster Mines, as shown on the map.

The Silver Mountain Co. has the best located and most promising undeveloped property in the Cobalt camp to-day and the men most largely interested in the company comprising some of Cobalt's largest mine owners and some of the best-known and most influential men throughout Canada, including over a dozen members of parliament, confidently expect that

THE SILVER MOUNTAIN CO.

Will Be Just as Large a Shipper as the Mines Adjacent to it in a Few Months

Mr. C E. Kingswell, one of the best engineers in the Cobalt camp has made an extensive report on the property, and the company will gladly send a copy of same to anyone interested, upon request. He says in his report among other things:

ENGINEER'S REPORT

"Your lot is within one lot of and surrounded by the Foster, Big Pete and the McKinley-Darragh-Savage Mines and within two lots of the Nipissing, all of which are among the most famous mines in the camp. The property lies wholly in Diabase, and has thirty-eight veins so far discovered, and these veins form a perfect network all over the property. I carefully assayed this property some time ago, and never failed to get silver in any assay I took. The famous timber limit lies immediately southeast of this property, and borders it, and upon this limit the government are now working a very good mine, and this mine lies only a short distance from your property. Near your property and the timber limit a good smaltite ledge was discovered last June by the foreman of the Silver Bar Company, and this lead runs directly into your property. I know veins on your property that carry very much better ore than ever the Big Pete did at the start and no attempt has been made to follow these leads down. One ledge on your property has been explored for four hundred feet, and this ledge in places is quite four inches wide and it carries nine ounces of silver to the ton. Every ledge upon your property has good true walls, and they are all free from the walls and have every sign of permanency and value; and my humble opinion is, that if a shaft was put down to a reasonable depth good paying ore would be found, and you could cross-cut to strike other ledges. I have explored and reported upon most of the good mines here and also upon a large number of prospects, and have never yet inspected one with as many leads as yours has and I consider that it would be a freak of nature if your claim does not prove a good payable one. The fact that the Bailey Mine, which adjoins your property, and the Big Pete Mine, which is within one lot, are both located on this same Diabase hill on which your property is, and the fact that they are two of the best mines in the camp, is one of the greatest proofs to my mind that your lot will be found to contain the same kind of ore as is being shipped from these mines."

—C. E. Kingswell, M.E.

THIS IS A CHANCE OF A LIFETIME.

THE PROPERTY OF THE SILVER MOUNTAIN CO. HAS NEVER BEEN DEVELOPED, THOUGH SOME

Thirty-eight Veins Carrying Silver Have Been Discovered on the Surface

And all the property should need to bring it to the shipping point is some development work.

The property has been completely paid for with stock of the company, and not one dollar is required except for development purposes.

Just about a year ago, as you know, a block of stock of the Foster Mine, a close neighbor to The Silver Mountain, was offered to the public for 80 cents per share in order to raise money for development work. You know also that this stock has sold since for over $4.00 per share and can be sold to-day to yield an immense profit to the original purchasers.

BUT REMEMBER it is the man who bought the stock when first offered who made the most money, NOT the man who waited until it reached somewhere near its real value. Please remember the above and read the following offer:

THE SILVER MOUNTAIN CO. IS PREPARING TO COMMENCE OPERATIONS ON ITS PROPERTY ON A LARGE SCALE

And needs some working capital, consequently the directors have decided to offer for public subscription a small block of stock at

A SPECIAL PRICE OF

SIXTY CENTS PER SHARE

Cash with subscription. This is the first and only allotment which will be offered to the public at this price SUBSCRIPTIONS FOR ANY NUMBER OF SHARES WILL BE RECEIVED UP UNTIL NOON ON THE 15TH DAY OF MARCH, 1907, and the directors reserve the right to refund all over-subscriptions as soon as the necessary amount has been subscribed. Subscription will be accepted according to the order in which they are received, whether by wire or letter, and may be sent direct to the secretary of the company, 95 Sparks Street, Ottawa.

If you have any faith in Cobalt you will get some of this stock and get it at once, for to-morrow may be too late. Opportunities like this only come once. We believe if you know anything about Cobalt, we have said enough, and if you want to learn more, we will be glad to tell you all we can.

Send in your wire for reservation of stock, and your subscription to

THE EDIFYING SOLDIER.

Sketch of One of the Great German Toy Warehouses.

The Troedel market is on a little island in the heart of the old town of Nuremberg. Along the north branch of the river is an old, low eaved house with a little darkling doorway. When you have got so far you are met by a little old man—a rusty little man who looks as though he were made of metal—who leads you into the great mysterious warehouse of toys.

Round all the walls they are ranged—guns, cannons, motors, steamships, trumpets, sabers, and everywhere the soldiers. How many millions of metal soldiers have marched away from the Troedel market not even the rusty old man could tell you—mighty articles of pewter and tin.

Hundreds of regiments, of battalions, of divisions, are drawn up on the shelves, waiting for the day when they shall be sent out into battle. And with a kind of pride the rusty old man says, "They are edifying soldiers."

That is the German way of putting it. What it means is that each army illustrates a battle or a campaign—the war of Troy, the campaigns of Alexander, the exploits of Coeur de Lion, the war of thirty years, the siege of Orleans, the victories of Napoleon, the battles of 1870 and (the one I liked best) that desperate battle in which a tiny tin hero with gleaming teeth rough rode it up San Juan hill. In a word, the edifying soldiers teach history, geography, strategy.—Vance Thompson in Everybody's.

EATING IN PUBLIC.

The Varied Sorrows of the Critical Man Who Dines Out.

What chance has the diner out of being completely happy? The mere actions of eating and drinking are neither pretty nor conducive to showing people at their best. It is really a most uncouth sight to see a man or a woman stoking food. The necessity of being polite at the same time makes it uncomfortable as well. No sooner have you got into conversation with a pleasant woman than the soup in your mustache stops all inspiration. She despises you for your play with your napkin, and your mustache is out of shape. And who can feel that the evening is going to be what he hoped when he realizes that his shirt front is smirched with some relic of the meal?

Indeed, dinner parties are really a struggle between eating and talking, a struggle which does not always end, as do most things, in the survival of the fittest. As one can't speak with one's mouth full and first hunger must be appeased, conversation and eating go on rather as a game, the one person whipping up some food while the other is speaking and then in his turn speaking in order to enable his partner to get some nourishment. To talk or to eat might be a sensible question at the beginning of dinner, but it is not one likely to be asked. One is seldom sure which is least worth sacrificing, the food or the conversation. How much simpler it would be if we fed apart and indulged in conversation afterward.—Macmillan's.

Montreal Live Stock.

Montreal, March 4.—Cable advices from Liverpool and London on Canadian cattle were stronger, and prices show an advance of ¾c per lb. since this day week, with sales at 12½c. Exports for last week from Portland and St. John, N.B., were 2004 cattle, and the shipments for February from Portland were 7006 cattle, 3422 sheep, and from St. John, N.B., 6164 cattle and 236 sheep.

At the Montreal Stock Yards' West End Market the receipts of live stock for the week ending March 2 were 3589 cattle, 54 sheep and lambs, 2322 hogs and 354 calves, and the offerings for local consumption today were 900 cattle, 1225 hogs and 100 calves. A feature of trade was the stronger feeling in the market for cattle, and prices advanced ¼c per lb., as compared with those paid a week ago. This was not due to shorter supplies, but to the recent rise in values in Western Ontario markets. Cable advices since this day week from Liverpool and London on cattle have also been of a more encouraging nature, and this has tended to increase the demand from exporters for cattle in the west, which naturally added strength to the situation, but it failed to induce local exporters to operate any more freely on spot today; in fact, they showed a disposition to hold off on account of the higher prices demanded, consequently trade in this respect was somewhat quieter than a week ago; but, as there was an increased attendance of butchers, who all required some beef, the demand from them was good and an active trade was done, which resulted in the market being well cleaned up of supplies by noon. Choice beeves sold at 5¼c to 5½c; good, 4¾c to 5c; fair, 4¼c to 4½c; common, 3½c to 4c, and inferior 2½c to 3¼c per lb. Another feature of the trade was the renewed strength in the market for hogs, and prices show an advance of 15c per 100 lbs. since last Wednesday. The demand, however, from packers and dealers was not by any means keen at the higher range of values, and, as supplies were fairly large, it was late in the day before a clearance was made. Sales of selected lots were made at $7.40 to $7.50 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars. Cable advices on Saturday from London and Bristol were firmer in tone, but not sufficiently so to warrant any higher prices for hogs here. Owing to the continued scarcity of sheep and lambs, and the urgent demand for the same, considerable strength has developed in the market, and prices for sheep are ¼c to ½c per lb. higher, at 4½c to 5c, and lambs ½c, to 6½c to 7c per lb. A fair trade was done in calves, but, as the quality of the same was only medium, prices ruled low, at from $3 to $6 each.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

East Buffalo, March 4.—Cattle—Receipts, 4000 head; steady; prime steers, $5.50 to $6; shipping, $5 to $5.40; butchers', $4.30 to $5.25; heifers, $3.50 to $5; cows, $3 to $4.50; bulls, $3.25 to $4.75; stockers and feeders, $3 to $4.25; stock heifers, $2.50 to $3; fresh cows and springers steady to $2 higher, $20 to $56.

Veals—Receipts, 1200 head; active and 25c lower, $4.25 to $9.

Hogs—Receipts, 14,500 head; active and 5c higher; heavy, mixed and yorkers, $7.35 to $7.40; pigs, $7.40 to $7.50; roughs, $6.50 to $6.75; stags, $4.75 to $5.50.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 17,000 head; active; sheep steady; lambs 15c to 25c higher; lambs, $5 to $7.75; yearlings, $6.25 to $6.65; wethers, $5.75 to $6; ewes, $4.75 to $5.25; sheep, mixed, $3 to $5.25.

New York Live Stock.

New York, March 4.—Beeves—Receipts, 4348; good to choice steers steady to firm; others slow; bulls steady; cows steady to firm; steers, $4.90 to $6.25; stags, $4.75 to $4.90; bulls, $3.50 to $4.15; cows, $1.75 to $4.05; fancy do., $4.40 to $4.50. Exports to-day, 725 cattle; to-morrow, 18 cattle and 8 sheep.

FARM AND FIRESIDE

Useful Hints Which Will be Appreciated by the Progressive Farmer and His Housekeeper.

AGRICULTURAL.

Sheep Farming in New England.

Some time ago there appeared in the Country Gentleman an article aimed at the New England Farm Stock Co., which advised the farmers of New England whatever they did, not to go into sheep farming. They were advised to grow hay to sell, also celery, to build glass houses for growing flowers, etc. The article was such a tirade against sheep farming that it fairly hung itself. It was therefore not deemed worthy of reply at the time, nor is this article for that purpose.

The writer, however, has received so many inquiries from his Country Gentleman friends, asking how the plan of the company was coming on, etc., that he takes this opportunity of replying, so as to cover the questions usually asked. In order to understand the situation, especially the abandoned farm question, which is at the bottom of the whole subject, the writer will attempt to cover the ground as he sees it.

The greatest success in agriculture usually comes to those who seek to win from the soil the one thing for which it may be adapted. That one thing when found will usually return a profit to the owner more easily than any other. The next all-important factor to be considered is the question of available markets. New England is the great woolen manufacturing district of America. As for mutton, the New England hills are at the very door of the best meat markets in the world. So much for the wool and mutton markets.

Sheep, like goats, which they very strongly resemble in habit and general characteristics, are mountain animals. While under favorable conditions they may be successfully grown on level and even on bottom lands, the hills and mountains suit them best. The greater the altitude, other things being equal, the better.

Contrary to general belief, sheep are very dainty animals; while their wants are simple and easily supplied, they are somewhat exacting, and if not found under natural conditions, what they need must be provided; otherwise they cannot be expected to thrive. A little study of their habits and the conditions under which they thrive shows that they require (1) a dry or well-drained soil; dampness under foot is impossible; (2) dry air; they are not affected by cold air if it be a dry cold; (3) fresh air; no other domestic animal requires so much and such a constant supply of fresh air. They are an out-of-door animal, summer or winter, and those farmers who keep them out and feed them out-of-doors, even in cold weather, stabling only in severe storms, will get on better with them than those who shut them up in warm barns. Close confinement has killed more sheep than ever died from cold or exposure. Finally, they need fresh food, a short nutritious pasture, and a wide range. Sheep do not like to feed after themselves. The taint of their own bodies makes a pasture distasteful to them. Hills and mountains being more exposed to passing breezes, suit them better than lowlands. Again, a short pasture is more readily freshened than a long, and a large range is naturally less affected by taint than a small one. Every condition best suited to the natural tastes and habits of sheep is, as a rule, to be found on the hills and mountains. The richer and more productive the pasture, the better.

There are still other reasons why hill and mountain pastures are especially suited to sheep. While there, they are less troubled with flies, which are the result of "grub in the head." Again, stomach worms, which are so troublesome to sheep on many lowland pastures, are seldom met with in higher elevations. Judging from the natural habits and instincts of sheep, the hill countries of New England seem to be especially suited to sheep rearing, and with such exceptional market advantages that the business should be a profitable one.

On the question of the special adaptability of these New England hills for sheep husbandry there need be no hesitation. The hills at least have been tested, the climatic conditions and natural surroundings. They have in years past given such an example of unqualified success as can be found in no other sheep-breeding section of the United States.

To some the above statements may seem exaggerated, and it may be well to spend a little time in substantiating them. During the '40s there were several importations of Merino sheep from Spain to different parts of New England. The Spanish Merino, as then imported, and which in its native country remains unchanged to this day, is a small, fine-wooled sheep. The ewes weigh from 60 to 75 pounds, shearing 4 to 8 pounds, the rams from 90 to 100 pounds, shearing 10 to 12 pounds. These sheep, after being transferred to these New England hills, by the natural process of evolution and without the admission of any new or foreign blood, developed in the course of fifteen to twenty years into the breed of sheep known as the American Merino — the ewes weighing 125 to 150 pounds, and shearing from 10 to 20 pounds of wool, and the rams 150 to 200, shearing from 20 to 30 pounds. They came to this country a sheep worth, say, $5 to $10 a head, and sold in their improved form for $500 to $1000 per head. These prices it never would have come about had not the hills and pastures of New England been especially adapted to sheep.

It is presumptuous to say the men who received the original sheep set about producing the American Merino. That they helped it on and hastened the breed to perfection is undoubtedly true, but this was after they saw what the hills and climate were doing and whither the trend of evolution was leading. The natural evolution of the breed, however, came not from the will of the shepherds, but from the hills and the pastures they lived upon. Nowhere, the writer believes, either at home or abroad, is there another such example of improvement in sheep without the aid of cross-breeding, and, furthermore, no such example of improvement is to be found in any other breed of domestic animals where the breed has been kept pure.

So much for the special adaptability of the New England hills for successful sheep husbandry. So much also for a breed of sheep especially adapted to these hills. By this I do not mean to infer that no other breed would be found profitable or incapable of improvement if brought into the New England hills. But I do mean that the nature and climate of the New England hills are especially adapted to sheep, and that the Merino sheep, at least, are especially adapted to the New England hills. There is no speculation, no guesswork and no experiment on these points, for they are history.

There were in former years tens of thousands of sheep on these New England hills where now there are less than half as many hundred. It was in the days of sheep that the New England farmers built big barns and fine houses, and sent their sons and daughters to college. The day the sheep industry abandoned these hill countries marked the beginning of the abandonment of farms. The agricultural prosperity of the hill countries rose and fell with the rise and decline of sheep husbandry. The small town of Leyden, Mass., in Franklin County, at one time supported over 10,000 sheep, and was considered one of the most thrifty, prosperous towns in the hill portion of the country. To-day there are practically no sheep in the town, except 700 on the New England Farm Stock Company's ranch, and there are over 10,000 acres of abandoned and semi-abandoned farms in the same county. This is the history and experience of nearly every hill town in northwestern New England.

The Cause of the Decline.

The removal of the duty on wool was a death blow to this great industry. It resulted in cutting the throats of sheep, not by hundreds nor thousands, but by millions. The injury to the agricultural interests of the country, and especially these New England hills, can never be estimated in dollars and cents. The killing of sheep was but a small portion of the damage these New England farmers sustained; their sons and daughters, no longer able to make a living from the soil, refused these hill-country farms as a gift, and left them for the factories and towns. Their fathers and mothers stayed on for a time, while their stock of hope lasted; finally they also abandoned the farm and moved to town or to the West, where the government at Washington was giving away millions of acres of the public domain and setting up tens and hundreds of thousands of foreigners and others in farming annually, until not only New England, but all agriculturists of the eastern states were reduced by their competition to unremitting toil. Whatever may be said of the decline in agriculture in the eastern states, the responsibility rests on short-sighted statesmanship at Washington.

The duty on wool was, after four years, restored, but no amount of legislation could bring to life the millions of slaughtered sheep. In the meantime, as we said above, the sons and daughters abandoned the farms, and the only thing left for the fathers and mothers was to put dairy stock on the farms that were too steep and hilly for cultivation. How poorly they fill the place of sheep is everywhere apparent, for in spite of them the hill pastures, which, with sheep, ever continued to improve, have steadily declined. They are to this day still going back into bush and forest. The meadows are cutting less and less hay and are yearly being turned into pastures, on their way to becoming a forest. This may sound strange to persons living outside of New England, but there are thousands and tens of thousands of acres of land in these hill countries that once supported prosperous flocks of sheep, cut big crops of hay and grew fine apples, that are now well-grown forests. There are hundreds of thousands of acres in nearly every hill country of New England to-day that are going the same way.

So much for the past and present conditions of the sheep industry and the abandoned farm question of New England.

THE DAIRY.

Producing Sanitary Milk.

(Paragraphs from an address delivered by F. E. Dawley before the Massachusetts State Medical Society at Springfield.)

Some have thought that pasteurization was going to solve all the difficulties regarding our milk supply, but pasteurization, unless more ...

Consumption is less deadly than it used to be.
Certain relief and usually complete recovery will result from the following treatment:
Hope, rest, fresh air, and—Scott's Emulsion.

a protection, while the pathological germs, which are really the menace to health, are left in an alkaline instead of an acid medium, all ready to multiply when other conditions are favorable. The danger of using pasteurized milk may be far greater than using it when unpasteurized. The fact that this idea of pasteurization has been exploited so greatly at our dairy and other conventions has led many farmers to believe that it was a cure for all evils, and that there was no necessity of their taking better care of their milk at home, since running it through the pasteurizer would eradicate the results of all the sins that they committed.

The absolute necessity of thoroughly cleansing and sterilizing the cans or bottles, no matter which are used, is obvious, and the fact that milk dipped from an open can on a public thoroughfare on a windy day is bound to be greatly contaminated by street filth should lead every municipality to demand that all milk be delivered in sealed packages. How long could a man deliver consomme or mock turtle soup from an open can to the residents of this city? How many of you would relish succotash that was brought to your door in forty-quart lots and a pint or quart dipped from the top of this can into an uncovered pail and hung on a hook on a tree until you were ready to go out after it? No other food is handled in such a slovenly manner as dipped milk, and if the consumers will not protect themselves, they should be protected by municipal enactment.

Certified milk has been introduced in New York to meet the demand for something better. Such milk must have passed inspection by some qualified body. It means a pure, rich, unadulterated milk produced under regulations laid down by some recognized medical society or board and endorsed (certified) by them. There are probably some 40 farmers in New York who are making more or less of such milk. The majority of these are some distance from their market, and the milk is sold through dealers. It is probable that the most perplexing problem for the individual producer is the matter of delivery. In one of our island cities, where a very fine quality of certified milk is sold for 10 cents a quart, I am informed that the cost of delivery is as great as the cost of production, and my own experiments at home lead me to believe that one cannot produce certified milk, running with approximately 3000 bacteria to the cubic centimeter, at less than 7 cents per quart, and stand bottle losses. I am also told that one of the firms delivering a certain brand of certified milk in New York City travels something over 100 miles in delivering the output of one farm. Of course they deliver many quarts of their regular product at the same time. Except in the smaller cities, the large milk companies must be depended upon to make the sales. It is stated that in New York City and Brooklyn something over 12,000 quarts of certified milk are sold daily. The Mercantile Exchange of New York states that, in 1905, 1,992,267 quarts of market milk was sold daily, so you can see that while there is a growing demand for the certified product, the amount sold is comparatively small. The demand is bound to increase, however, and today farmers who are so situated that they can make a good product will have no trouble in finding a market for it if the quality is right. In working up a business in certified milk in a city where it is not sold, it should be remembered that a short promise filled to the dot is worth more than a volume of assertions that are carelessly made. Secure the co-operation of the medical fraternity, and be conservative. Do not say your product is the best in the world unless you are sure of it. Some bacteriologist may disprove your assertion, and you will find it necessary to substantiate your argument with a nearly perfect milk.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When the tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

CROMWELL'S HORSES.

An Accident That Befell the Protector in Hyde Park.

"As Cromwell rose in power and rank his love of horses began to be more conspicuous," says a writer in Blackwood's. "When he started from London in 1649 to reconquer Ireland he went forth in that state and equipage as the like hath hardly been seen, himself in a coach with six gallant Flanders mares, reddish gray." In 1655, when the Spanish ambassador took his leave of the lord protector, Cromwell sent him "his own coach of six white horses" to convey him to and from Whitehall. "Certain it is," adds the narrator, "that none of the English kings had ever any such."

The protector was not much of a whip, however. In 1654 the Count of Oldenburg sent Cromwell a present of six horses, and the protector's anxiety to make trial of their quality led to his well known adventure in Hyde park. On Friday, Sept. 29, he went with Secretary Thurloe and some of his gentlemen to take air in the park, ordered the six horses to be harnessed to his coach, put Thurloe inside of it and undertook to drive himself. "His highness," said a letter from the Dutch ambassador, "drove pretty handsomely for some time, but at last, provoking those horses too much with the whip, they grew unruly, whereby his highness was flung out of the coach box upon the ground. His foot getting hold in the tackling, he was carried away a good while in that posture, but at last he got his foot clear and so came to escape. He was presently brought home and let blood and after some rest taken is now well again. The secretary, being hurt on his ankle with leaping out of the coach, hath been forced to keep his chamber hitherto and been unfit for any business."

The royalist Scroggs, afterward chief justice, writing of this incident, hoped that the next fall would be from a cart—hinting at the gallows. As to Cromwell's views on the burning question of horse racing it is difficult to arrive at a positive conclusion. His constant aim was to possess as many good horses as he could afford. Whether he entered his horses for races or had the satisfaction of owning a winner history does not say.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

The only thing some people always have ready is an excuse.

Almost any one can be induced to lie if you ask enough questions.

The better you behave the better you get along. It's old, but it's true.

A man nobody can quarrel with has the life problem reasonably well solved.

Lack of opportunity has to stand as an excuse for a lot of general shiftlessness.

The trouble with some people lies in the fact that they consider their faults their misfortunes.

Are you among those who treat their new acquaintances better than they treat their old friends?

If a man has plenty of money to back up a lot of fool notions, people call him eccentric, but if he only has the notions he is a crank.

Tamed the Box Office Man.

A theater box office man whose seats were all sold days ahead was turning away disappointed patrons more than gruffly when a man who had watched the process with glowing ire reached the window. "Selling any more seats this season?" he began. The ticket seller answered with a stare. The question, quietly but firmly repeated, finally received an affirmative answer. "Give me two." "When?" growled the seller, recovering. "Any time," said the man. The seller was almost too crushed to ask "Where?" "Anywhere," replied the man. "How much?" whispered the seller, his voice deserting him. "Any price," said the man. The tickets were transferred in an awed silence, and the line of purchasers that had overheard smiled benevolently at the noticeably tamed man in the cage.

Antiquity of Proverbs.

Proverbs existed long before books. In the earliest times they served as the unwritten language of morality and have been passed down through the generations. In Africa there are numerous quaint proverbs. Among them are: "He who dives on dry land will scarify his face," "Two people cannot sit down upon the point of the same thorn at the same time." In the Transvaal the proverb, "Beware of a silent man; he has a brass band in his mouth," is often heard.

Murdered Man Had Some Relatives Here

PARTICULARS OF DEATH OF ERNEST IRONSIDE SHOW HE SUFFERED AWFUL DEATH.

It will be remembered that in last evening's paper, some particulars were given of the death and supposed murder of Ernest Ironside, an operator on the C. P. R., in the west. The following despatch gives fuller particulars:

Port Arthur, March 4. — Ernest Ironside, a C. P. R. operator at MacKenzie, was found yesterday morning cold in death with two gaping wounds in his neck near the station to which he was transferred a few days ago. Close beside him lay the knife with which the deed was done. He was 21 years of age and son of the Collector of Inland Revenue at this place. The inquest into the circumstances of his death, has given rise to the opinion that Ironside was first murdered and afterwards placed in front of a snow plough.

The coroner says that the wounds in the throat which caused death were undeniably inflicted by the knife which was found near the scene, as was also a deep gash found under the elbow. The position of that wound leads to the belief that it was received in an attempt to ward off a thrust at the throat. A big patch of blood-stained snow between the rails shows that the lad lay on the track for some time before being thrown off by the snow plough. One shoulder and his back were broken by the snow-plough. Articles which he had been carrying were scattered along the track. It is not known whether any person accompanied the young man from Port Arthur, nor is it known whether he was seen by any person after he left here some time about 4 o'clock on Friday afternoon.

We have since learned that the supposedly murdered man had relatives in this city, Mr. A. W. Buchanan, of Queen Victoria avenue, being an uncle. Miss Eileen Buchanan, daughter of Mr. A. W. Buchanan, is at present staying with Mrs. Ironside, the mother of the dead man. The late Ernest Ironside, we are told had just received his diploma from the Toronto School of Telegraphy, and taken the position he was holding at the time of his death.

BODY BLOW FOR KAISER BILL.

EXPERT SAYS SEVENTEEN OF GERMANY'S WARSHIPS WOULD BE USELESS IN TIME OF WAR.

London, March 4.—The Berlin correspondent of the Express says that Germany dare not even think of fighting a naval war before 1920. This, he adds, is the verdict of the great German naval expert, Count Reventlow, on the country's much vaunted fleet.

Count Reventlow has nothing but praise for the officers and men of the German navy, but he condemns many of the battleships as unseaworthy and obsolete. Seventeen German battleships, which figure as formidable fighting units in all navy lists are floating coffins, the use of which in war would only mean the sacrifice of their gallant crews.

Count Reventlow gives the names of the seventeen ships which he includes in this class of floating coffins. He points out that the construction of new and more efficient battleships is proceeding so slowly that thirteen years will pass before Germany can contemplate the possibiltiy of a naval war with equanimity.

The ships which Count Reventlow condemns are eight coast defence vessels, four ships of the Sachsen class, and the ships of the Oldenburg and Brandenburg classes. One Dreadnought, he declares, could face all these simultaneously and put them out of action without great difficulty.

THIS TIME IT WAS ON THE NEW YORK CENTRAL, AND A PICTON MAN WAS INJURED.

New York, March 5.—(Special.) — Six persons were injured to-day when a New York Central express train separated at Tivoli, N. Y., ninety miles from here, and crashed into a switchman's tower.

Only meagre details were received at the Grand Central station, but the officials declare that of the victims only one suffered serious injury.

Among the injured is B. B. Hepburn, of Picton, Ont., scalp wound.

GWEN R. WEESE.

The funeral of the late Mr. O. R. Weese which took place yesterday afternoon from the family residence, 2nd concession of Thurlow, was very largely attended. Services were held at the house by the Rev. Canon Bogert, rector of St. John's Church, in this city. The floral offerings were numerous and beautiful. Six of the neighbors of the deceased acted as bearers.

MRS. (DR.) LISTER.

The remains of the late Mrs. (Dr.) Lister, who died at Madoc village, arrived here at 9.30 this morning, and many citizens were present at the station to accompany the remains to St. Thomas' church. Here the impressive burial services of the Anglican Church were conducted by the rector, Rev. Rural Dean Beamish, after which the interment took place at the Belleville cemetery. Many beautiful floral tributes were placed upon the casket. The bearers were Sir Mackenzie Bowell, Messrs. F. S. Wallbridge, R. C. Hulme, J. P. C. Phillips, Sheriff Hope, Col. Ponton, Col. Stewart and Dr. Farley.

CORRESPONDENT SENDS NEWSY BUDGET FROM BUSTLING SUBURB.

Anniversary services in connection with the Methodist church on Sunday last were conducted, morning and evening by Rev. G. W. McCall of Wellington. Very eloquent sermons were delivered on both occasions to large and appreciative audiences. The choir recently re-organized with Mr. Keyes as leader, rendered appropriate music. During the absence of the organist Miss Hazel Hume, Corbyville, presided at the organ. A sum of $71 was realized as the thank-offering.

Notwithstanding the scant sleighing the saw-mill yard is full to overflowing, which promises a very busy spring for Mr. H. Eveleigh, the proprietor.

A Business Change Of Public Interest.

MR. A. E. LEWIS RETIRES FROM WELL - KNOWN FIRM OF LEWIS & CO.

By the retirement of Mr. A. E. Lewis the well-known firm of Lewis & Company, plumbers, etc., has changed members, but will be known by the same name. Messrs. M. R. Doyle and J. H. Reeves have secured Mr. Arthur Lewis' share in the business, and the other members of the firm will be Mrs. John Lewis, of this city, and Mr. Jones L. Lewis, of Hamilton. The firm will continue to transact business in the same place and the public's interest in the matter of plumbing, etc., will be well served. Mr. Doyle is a practical man who for 14 years has been connected with the concern, and Mr. Reeves for six years has been connected with the business part of the firm. Mr. Doyle will be at the head of the mechanical part of the business and this will be a guarantee that all work entrusted to him will be faithfully carried out. The firm, in addition to doing plumbing work, will also carry in stock a full range of plumbers' and tinsmiths' supplies, stoves, etc. No doubt the new firm will receive that share of public patronage which it justly deserves.

Anglican Pupils Given Sleighride.

The pupils of the Institution for the Deaf and Dumb, who are attendants of Anglican churches were treated to a sleigh ride yesterday afternoon. It is needless to say they enjoyed themselves immensely and were very grateful to the ladies who provided the sleigh, namely, Mrs. H. Corby and Mrs. E. Terrill, whose thoughtfulness was greatly appreciated by the staff of the Institute.

A Quiet Wedding

A quiet wedding took place last evening at the residence of Mrs. G. F. Poste, Everett street, when Mr. G. H. Murdoff, of Sidney, and Miss Eva E. Ross, of Thurlow, were united in marriage. Rev. Geo. Brown, of the Tabernacle, performed the ceremony. The young couple were unattended. Mr. and Mrs. Murdoff will take up their residence in this city.

A Pleasant Evening.

The members of the Tabernacle Church Epworth League last evening spent a very pleasant and profitable time at the parsonage on Church street. The pastor, Rev. Geo. Brown, was chairman of the gathering, and during the evening Prof. Doxsee and Miss Peake gave addresses in reference to the forward movement. After the addresses a pleasant time was spent in social intercourse, and refreshments were served.

The members of the Sites, Building and Repairs Committee of the Board of Education this afternoon visited the various schools of the city for the purpose of ascertaining what repairs were necessary during the summer vacation.

Mr. Hamilton's Bearers.

It was incorrectly stated in last night's paper that the bearers at the funeral of the late Mr. Hamilton were four sons and two sons-in-law of the deceased. The bearers were the following gentlemen: Messrs. Stork, Tannahill and Murray, managers of the Commerce, Montreal and Dominion banks respectively; Messrs. R. C. Hulme, Geo. Denmark and Stewart Masson.

"UNCLE JOSH SPRUCEBY."

You can almost imagine that you are inhaling the fragrance of the apple blossoms during some of the scenes in the charming play of "Uncle Josh Spruceby," and, dear reader, we will let you into the secret. You are not imagining it, as it is reality. During the scene in question the theatre is secretly perfumed by the sprinkling of apple blossom perfume through the house. This may be thought a little costly, but nothing is too good for the patrons of the play. So say the managers, and they are the men who carry little hatchets just the same as the immortal George W. S. S. DAKOTA A WRECK.

Struck a Rock and Sank Forty Miles From Yokohama.

Tokio, March 5.—Advices indicate that the steamship Dakota struck a rock, at 6 o'clock on Sunday night, lost her balance and that her stern plunged into the water. She is now in that position and leaking badly. The damage, it is believed, will be serious. The scene of the disaster is near the Mojima light house, 40 miles from Yokohama. The day was clear, and it is difficult to determine the cause of the disaster. It is presumed that a strong current was reached.

Struck at Full Speed.

Tokio, March 4, afternoon.—The captain of the Japanese steamer Tokai, who was steaming abreast of the Dakota yesterday, reports that when sighted the steamer was at full speed, heading south, when she changed her course quickly in order to avoid danger. Just at that moment she struck with her head down and lower screw exposed. The passengers were panic-stricken, but were rescued by boats from the Tokai and from the land, which took them all ashore. The day was calm, but the dreaded current peculiar to that locality was strong.

The Japanese steamer Omi has been sent to the rescue, but the wreck is unapproachable, and owing to the heavy seas it is impossible to establish connection with the land.

The Dakota lies one mile off shore with her bow under water up to the second mast. She is still sinking.

DOMINION COURT MARTIAL.

Officers Tried for Negligence In Allowing Vessel To Go Ashore.

London, March 5.—(C. A. P.)—There was a court-martial held at Chatham, before Rear-Admiral Finnis, on Capt. Kingsmill, Navigating Lieut. Basil Noake and Lieut. Clarkson, charged with negligence in connection with the stranding of the battleship Dominion.

It appeared that a bush fire was mistaken for Souris Point Light, which, in turn, was taken for a steamer's masthead light. When a lead was sounded, the engines were reversed, but it was then too late. It was also shown that no allowance was made for the current into the Cascapidia by the captain. The navigating officer was off deck a great portion of the time between 7.15 and 9.15, when the ship took ground.

Commander Massey Dawson said he could not understand how the Dominion got 1.7 miles out of her course. The enquiry adjourned.

Canada and the Tariff.

London, March 5.—(C. A. P.)—In the House of Commons Keerley said he would consider Gilbert Parker's suggestion that in future drafts of tariffs of colonies be submitted to the commercial intelligence committee.

The president of the Board of Trade, however, was doubtful of its expediency. He also informed Parker that there was no information that Canada would remove the surtax on German goods if the Dominion Government considered such a step desirable there appeared no reason for action by the Board of Trade.

Steps From Track to Death.

Thamesville, March 5.—Samuel Goddard, an old British army pensioner, was killed on the Grand Trunk tracks here yesterday.

He stepped onto the eastbound track to let a westbound Wabash freight pass. The eastbound Grand Trunk mail train struck him and threw him against the freight.

Ottawa, March 5.—Constable Sellars of the N.W.M.P. at Fort Churchill, on the Hudson Bay, has arrived in the capital with despatches from Major Moodie.

He reports that October was the fiercest month of the year, and that the harbor was open well into the month of November.

CIGARETTE SMOKING

Proposal to Introduce Bill of Prohibition Is Turned Down.

Enormous Increase In Number of Cigarettes Manufactured — Suggestion That Provinces Be Allowed to Act—Premier Opposes the Scheme—Deprecates Smoking by Boys, But Thinks Law Would Become Dead.

Ottawa, March 5.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier gently waved aside the proposal to introduce at this session of Parliament a bill to prohibit the importation, manufacture and sale of cigarettes when it came up for discussion in the House yesterday, saying, "Such a law would not be supported by public opinion and would become a dead letter."

Mr. Blain (Peel) started the discussion by declaring it was expedient to bring in such a bill at this session. He pleaded for the growing youth of Canada, and said statistics showed that the number of cigarettes manufactured in Canada had increased from 85,000,000 in 1896 to 270,000,000 in 1906.

Would Let Provinces Act.

A resolution declaring such legislation necessary had passed the House in 1903 by a vote of 103 to 48. A bill had been introduced, but had been routed on a technicality. A bill could not be introduced now unless preceded by this resolution.

E. M. MacDonald (Liberal, N. S.), apparently in response to a nod from the Premier, asked if Mr. Blain would not prefer a law giving to each province power to make the manufacture and sale of cigarettes criminal.

"Would such legislation be constitutional?" asked W. F. Maclean.

"I am not prepared to answer that," said Mr. MacDonald.

Premier Opposes Scheme.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier did not minimize the importance of the question. "Cigarette smoking is injurious," he said, "physically and mentally to the immature youth; so, indeed, is the use of tobacco in any form.

"It hardly can be maintained, however, that the use of tobacco is injurious to the majority of adults.

"Shall we prohibit cigarettes to men, because they are injurious to small boys? Then why not forbid the use of tobacco in any form?

"Nothing is more offensive to me, than to see a child smoking a cigarette. The police should stop it, parents should stop it, but Mr. Blain's propositon is too sumptuary, too drastic.

"If we prohibited the use of tobacco, such a law would become a dead letter."

The Premier stated that, in any event, it was too late to bring in novel legislation. Parliament, he hoped and believed, would prorogue early in April. He believed this could be accomplished with the help of kind Providence.

Vast Amount of Hysteria.

Dr. Black (Liberal, N. S.) said cigarette smoking undoubtedly injured children, yet there had been published a vast amount of hysterical literature on this subject. The habit was more prevalent among children than we supposed. So long as a father smoked a pipe or a cigar, so long would the boy imitate him, by smoking a cigarette.

The doctor went on to say that the great evil of Canada was the slaughter of the innocents. Half the children born in Canada died in infancy; as a rule, through indigestion, caused entirely by the ignorance of their parents.

"Why does the Government, which spends money in conserving the health of domestic cattle, spend something in conserving the health of human citizens?" he asked. "This Government pays more attention to raising a bull calf than it does to raising a baby boy."

Hon. Sydney Fisher said the principle embodied in Mr. Blain's resolution had been adopted by the House in 1903.

"We should aim, if possible, to make the principle of some effect," he said, "but will such legislation do any good? It might. As a matter of principle I am opposed to the use of tobacco in every form. Nevertheless, I could not support the resolution, because it is too late in the session."

Mr. Monk's Amendment.

Mr. Monk offered an amendment calling upon the Government to introduce legislation against the use of cigarettes by or the sale of cigarettes to minors under the age of 18."

Dr. Barr said such a law already existed in Ontario. It did some good, but more drastic legislation was needed.

Mr. Monk then moved that "the question be now put."

It being three minutes to six, Mr. Hughes talked the entire subject matter out, thus saving the Government the embarrassment of a vote.

Advocates Free Ports.

Mr. Wright (Renfrew) resumed in the evening the adjourned debate upon the transportation question. He favored making Montreal, Quebec, Halifax and St. John absolutely free ports. He claimed that Montreal had not the proper facilities for handling grain when it arrived from the west. This condition, he hoped, would soon be improved. He urged the building of the Georgian Bay Canal; that canal would regulate railway freight rates better than any act of Parliament.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier stated that he expected the session to end quite early in April.

During the question hour the House learned that $845,167 has been paid up to date as bounties upon crude petroleum, and that iron and steel have been produced in Canada to the amount of 1,227,531 tons.

THE LATE CHIEF RANGER.

The Body of Dr. Oronhyatekha To Lie In State.

Toronto, March 5.—The body of Dr. Oronhyatekha arrives here at 10.50 a. m. to-morrow. On arrival, the train will be met by the executive council in a body and other members of the staff; a uniformed guard of Royal Foresters, with the band of the 48th Highlanders.

The cortege will proceed direct to Massey Hall, where it will lie in state, and on Wednesday afternoon will be viewed by members of the I. O. F. and friends. A memorial service will be held on Wednesday evening at which a large gathering of Foresters from all over the Province is expected.

At 9 a. m. Thursday, the body will leave here for Deseronto, arriving about two o'clock. The executive is not able to announce as yet whether further ceremonies will occur there. Dr. Oronhyatekha was a member of the Mohawk tribe. The funeral will take place in the old burying ground of the Mohawk Indians' reservation, where Dr. Oronhyatekha will be interred with his wife and two sons. It will take place on Friday.

WHITE PLAGUE PROBLEM

Provincial Board of Health Will Take Active Steps.

Compulsory Notification From Physicians May Be Adopted—Terrible Growth of This Disease in the Province—Bill to Amend Liquor License Act Held Over Till Next Year—Mr. Hanna's Denial.

Toronto, March 5.—The Ontario Government plans to actively assist in the great movement to fight tuberculosis. To this end the Provincial Board of Health will be asked to take up the whole problem of the white plague, the advisability of calling for compulsory notification from physicians in all cases and the establishment of county Boards of Health and sanitoria.

Growth of White Plague.

"The Provincial Board will be asked to take up the matter earnestly, definitely and actively and lay before the Legislature at its next session its report and recommendations."

Such was the announcement of the Provincial Secretary, Hon. W. J. Hanna, at yesterday's sitting of the Legislature. The decision was reached on the vigorous advocacy of Mr. J. P. Downey (South Wellington) who will submit to the Provincial Board for its assistance the measure he has drafted, and the startling statistics showing the terrible growth of the dread disease in the Province he has prepared.

A Tremendous Problem.

Mr. Downey's address was an exceptionally strong one. "This is a tremendous problem," he declared. We cannot afford to be longer lethargetic, indifferent or inactive. We must stem the terrible tide of the plague in our Province. We must determine what public measures can best and most effectively be taken, independent of economic and financial considerations. Consumption seeks life at the period of greatest happiness to the individual and greatest value to the community. It is the first duty of our Government to watch over the health of our people. This Legislature has a solemn and sacred duty to the people it represents."

The Assessment Act.

Hon. J. P Whitney, the Prime Minister, announced that he would, on the morrow, be in a position to suggest a method of dealing with all the amendments to the assessment act—a method which he thought would do away with the necessity for many of the pending bills on the subject.

Aid For Temperance Hotels.

Mr. J. J. Preston (East Durham) moved the second reading of his bill to amend the Liquor License Act, which was designed to permit municipalities which adopted local option to extend aid to temperance hotels.

Hon. Mr. Hanna asked the member for Durhaw to hold the bill over till next year in order that due consideration might be given to the important step it contemplated, and that the opinion of the municipalities might be ascertained.

Hon. Mr. Hanna, speaking to a matter of privilege, took occasion to emphatically deny a published report that he, Hon. Dr. Pyne and Mr. W. K. McNaught had held a conference over a Toronto license transfer. "There is absolutely no foundation for the statement," was his brief and effective comment.

King to Biarritz.

London, March 5.—King Edward started for Biarritz yesterday morning. He will spend the night in Paris.

After about three weeks' stay at Biarritz His Majesty will join the royal yacht Victoria and Albert in the south of France, and will cruise in the Mediterranean with Queen Alexandra. Their Majesties will return to England towards the end of April.

In the meanwhile Queen Alexandra will entertain in London and at Sandringham her sister, the Dowager Empress of Russia, who will arrive here from St. Petersburg March 7 and remain in England a week.

Burglar's Daring Attempt.

Winnipeg, March 5.—A burglar attempted to rob the jewelry store of Dingwall & Co. here last night while the street was crowded.

Expensive watches were on display, and he threw a jack-knife through the plate-glass window, smashing a hole large enough to permit him to grab a handful.

He failed in his attempt to secure booty, but made good his escape.

No Fear of Strike.

Ottawa, March 5.—A telegram received by the Department of Labor yesterday morning from F. A. Sherman of the Western Federation of Miners stated that there is no fear of a strike in the western coal mines. A conference of miners has been sitting in Calgary, and prospects for an amicable settlement of all questions is excellent.

Examiners Will Be Appointed to Secure Properly Qualified Men

Members Are to Have Busy Time--Commissioners To Control Burlington Beach Lands--Amendments to Assessment Act Referred to Municipal Committee--Explanation of Salary Increases.

Toronto, March 6.—The introduction of two additional Government bills preceded the resuming of the budget debate at the Legislature yesterday, when another night session was held. The days when the legislators idled through the session and crowded hasty legislation on the statute books at its close are ended under the present Whitney Administration, and from the present time till the end of the session the Prime Minister has intimated that it will be a case of work—and work diligently.

Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Lands and Mines, introduced a bill to provide for a Government commission of two to take control and hold in trust for the Crown the Burlington Beach lands, doing away with all control of the beach by the City of Hamilton and the Township of Saltfleet.

Hon. Mr. Monteith introduced the Government bill respecting stationary engineers, which provides for the appointment by the Lieutenant-Governor in Council of a board of three examiners consisting of competent engineers, to hold office during pleasure and report the results of examinations to the Minister of Agriculture. On the recommendation of the Minister the Lieutenant-Governor in Council may make regulations regarding the subjects of the tests and the fees payable.

Engineers To Be Qualified.

After Oct. 1, 1907, no person not holding a certificate of qualification obtained as the result of examination and on the recommendation of the Minister, may have charge of a steam plant in the Province. Engineers now holding certificates must pass an examination on the expiration of the same in September, 1910. Engineers' licenses must be displayed in the engine or boiler-room in which the holders are engaged. Appeal from decisions of the examiners may be made to the Minister. Engineers operating without the necessary qualifications and persons employing them make themselves liable to penalties of not less than $10 or more than $25 and costs.

Amendments to Assessment Act.

Hon. J. P. Whitney, the Prime Minister, made his promised announcement relative to amendments to the Assessment Act. The act in its present form, he said, was so made up that the important provisions balanced each other. It was well, then, to avoid anything like undigested alterations. Mr. Whitney purposed to refer all proposed amendments to the municipal committee, with the understanding that only formal alterations could be dealt with and others referred to the commission in charge of the revision of the statutes.

Budget Debate Continued.

The budget debate was continued by Messrs. Thompson (Wentworth), Lewis (Dufferin) and Clarke (Northumberland).

At the evening session the estimates were taken up, and Hon. Mr. Whitney, in a connection with a proposal to provide $3,000 as the salary of an assistant solicitor to the Attorney-General's department, gave a general explanation of the increases in salaries which are noted all along the line.

Increases of Salaries.

"The public business has greatly increased," he said. "In one department alone the work has practically doubled since we took office. There are, as a consequence, a number of appointments that appear to be new which are not so. Temporary officials have been merely placed on the permanent list. But the increase in the work has been so serious that it was incumbent upon the Government to deal with the problem. Officials under this roof have never been paid too high a salary; that is to say, the proper men to do the work could obtain much higher renumeration elsewhere."

The Prime Minister said the appointment of the solicitor had not yet been made.

Mr. Graham Approves.

Hon. Mr. Graham, the Liberal leader, commended the Government for placing temporary clerks, whose services had become indispensable, on the permanent list. In his own experience he had known officials who were at work for many years, every one of whom he had considered to be on the permanent list. "Whenever," said Mr. Graham, "officials are found to be necessary they should be placed on the permanent list. Otherwise an official is at a loss to know just where he stands, and his service to the Government is not as effective as could be wished."

At the opening of the session Mr. His father, Senator Geo .W. Ross, occupied a seat on the floor of the House.

Cows Poisoned Themselves.

Kingston, March 6.—Dr. Higginson, Dominion Veterinary Inspector, was here from Ottawa in regard to an alleged outbreak of contagion among cattle beyond Odessa. The farmer had been rubbing some poisonous powder into the animals' skin to kill some creeping things. The cows in licking themselves took the poison into their systems and three of them died.

Victim of Shooting Dies.

Fort William, March 6.—Bernard Armstrong, who was shot by Manson Patterson, died yesterday, and Patterson, who is believed to have been temporarily deranged, was brought to the jail in this place.

TRAIN WRECK AT TORONTO.

Montreal Express Runs Into a Freight—Four Injured.

Toronto, March 6.—The regular G. T. R. express for Montreal, leaving here at 9 o'clock yesterday morning., run down freight train No. 92, eastbound, this morning, near Pape avenue, and as a result four passengers were slightly bruised and injured. Miss M. V. Milne, Toronto, had her lip cut and was slightly bruised on the forehead; Mrs. G. Pemberton, Toronto, had her nose bruised; Mr. J. W. Prescott, Toronto, received sprains in the back, and Mr. J. H. Allan of Trenton, was cut on the lip and bruised.

The passenger train was proceeding at a moderate speed across the Don Valley, and when it reached Pape avenue it struck the caboose of the freight which was going up grade on the main line. The impact caused the injuries to the passengers named, but none of the crews were hurt.

The passenger train was brought back to the Union Station for a couple of new drawbars and some other repairs, and after some delay proceeded again to Montreal. The company gave out the facts of the accident, and stated that rolling stock was not damaged to any extent.

The cause of the accident seemed to have been that the freight failed to get into a side track before the passenger overtook it.

EXPLOSION AT COLLIERY.

Thirty Persons Were Injured, Several Probably Fatally.

Pottsville, Pa., March 6.—By the explosion of powder at the Richards colliery, at Mount Carmel, yesterday, the blacksmith shop, boiler house and large powder magazine were blown up. About 30 persons were injured, several probably fatally. The business street of Mount Carmel was badly damaged and in the vicinity of the colliery, houses were badly wrecked. Window panes were broken for 15 miles from the explosion.

More Ice In Lakes.

Detroit, March 6.—Reports indicate that there is more ice in all the lakes than at this period last year.

Over Western Superior, the ice fields extend beyond Two Harbors. Over the centre and eastern portions, the fields are heavier. St. Mary's River ice is solid and extends the entire length.

The icefields in Lake Michigan are more extensive than last season, but have impeded navigation but little this winter.

The ice at the Straits is solid and extends from the east end of Bois Blanc Island to Lake Michigan. It is not as heavy as usual, nor is it windrowed. There is little snow covering it.

There are extensive icefields over the northern portion of Lake Huron. The ice-bridge at the foot of the lake, which formed on Saturday night, is firm.

St. Clair River is solid from Port Huron to Lake St. Clair. The ice in the Detroit River extends from the Smith coal dock to the mouth.

The icefields along the south shore of Lake Erie extend beyond vision.

Falls From Auto Under Car.

New York, March 6.—Mrs. Jacob Tumbridge, wife of Major Jacob Tumbridge of Brooklyn, was run over by a street car on Brooklyn Bridge yesterday and instantly killed.

Mrs. Tumbridge was riding in an automobile in company with her husband and his father, Capt. William Tumbridge, proprietor of St. George's Hotel, in Brooklyn. She became frightened by the approach of a car and arose from her seat. The automobile

Discussing the electric lighting venture of the Kingston Council, the Whig remarks that enough has transpired already to make people feel that a great responsibility has been incurred in investing hundreds of thousands of dollars in property and putting it under municipal management. People in this city, too, are beginning to realize that it takes more than talk to run a municipal utility. Of course there is a great responsibility, and the responsibility must be properly met, otherwise it may lead to disaster. Business methods are needed, and with those applied there need be, in this city, no fear. But slipshod and hand-to-mouth methods should be put aside, never to be brought back. It is time for a little plain speaking in this connection and the Council, and citizens in general must face things, not as they would like them to be, but as they are.

Seems To Be Rather A Serious Situation

WATER MAIN BURST IN WEST BELLEVILLE, AND WATER MAY HAVE TO BE SHUT OFF.

Mr. A. G. Vermilyea, chairman of the Water committee, informs us that there is rather a serious state of affairs in his department.

There is a break of some description in the water main on Coleman street, near Henry street, and repairs may take some time.

The new gate, corner Coleman and Bridge streets, is not workable, and it may be necessary to shut off a portion of or the whole water supply when repairs to the main are made.

Both pumps are running at the pump house, and the engineer reports that they are just holding their own.

It would, the chairman thinks, be advisable for city water consumers to continue boilding the water, as the sponge gates are taxed to their utmost capacity.

Former Resident Died Of Apoplexy.

Toronto, March 6. — Mr. Richard Harper, a sessional writer at the Parliament buildings, died suddenly of apoplexy at the residence 337 Wellesley street Sunday night, after an illness of only a day. He was in his 65th year, was a native of England, and had resided in Canada about 40 years. Mr. Harper lived for some time at Belleville. He was at the Parliament buildings on Saturday, and appeared to be in his usual robust health.

Lost His Horse.

Wm. Sparrow, who resides at Ivanhoe, reports to the police that he is unable to find a horse and cutter which belongs to him. It appears that Sparrow was in this city on Monday, and towards evening started for home by way of North Front street. When near Albert College the horse became unmanageable and ran away, throwing Sparrow out. The horse continued northward on its wild run, and up to last evening he had been unable to find any trace of the outfit.

The Issue In Manitoba

This is how the Winnipeg Telegram sizes up things political in the Prairie province:

"There is but one crucial issue in this campaign.

"Manitoba on the 7th of March will give her judgment finally and decisively as to whether she desires to have incorporated within her boundaries the territory rightfully her's, or whether she does not.

"That is the outstanding issue.

"It would take an amendment to the British North America Act: the instrument of government in Canada, to return this province the territory which will be stolen from her should Edward Brown have an opportunity to deliver the goods which he has bargained for in his corrupt and scandalous understanding with the Prime Minister of Canada.

"All issues and all considerations dwindle into insignificance when compared with the tremendous, vital and all important case of the threatened theft of the territory which is rightfully Manitoba's.

"It is a business condition which confronts the people of Manitoba today. With territory increased threefold or four-fold this province will have three-fold or four-fold the number of contributors to its revenue. Next to the Province of Prince Edward Island, Manitoba to-day is the smallest. Premier Whitney is authority for saying that Ontario has no special interest in the enlargement of her borders across the Albany River. As a matter of fact the Prime Minister of Ontario went to Ottawa on Sir Wilfrid Laurier's express invitation to discuss the Keewatin case as a perfunctory duty. He made his claim, and like a vulture Laurier seized it, and is now holding it as a menace to our province.

"If Manitoba is to be handed over shackled, bound and helpless, Edward Brown is the man who desires to perform the act.

"Hon. R. P. Roblin has shown the people of Manitoba that he is ready to fight for their personal interests, and as a matter of fact the personal interests, the financial interest, is what should impel Manitobans—despite all previous political affiliations—to support the Government that has brought order out of chaos and prosperity after inefficiency.

"Corrupt and malign in every way is the attitude of the Laurier Government toward the Province of Manitoba in respect of the cession of our rightful share of the territory of Keewatin.

"In 1897 the British association for the advancement of science did Canada the honor of holding its session in the City of Toronto. Sir John Bourinot, who was undoubtedly the greatest authority on our habit of Government and on the interpretation on the constitution of the Canadian Dominion, wrote for the guidance of the distinguished visitors to Canada a chapter outlining the constitutional history and system of Government in this country.

"Had Sir John Bourinot, who was by no means a politician, who as a matter of fact cared nothing for politics, deliberately endeavored, in anticipation of the Laurier-Brown plot to show its utter illegality he could have done no more than on page 174 of the hand-book—compiled for the use of the members of the British association.

"On page 176 in paragraph, 4b. Sir John Bourinot says: As regards the territories of the Northwest, they have been divided into five districts for the purposes of self-governance. Keewatin is under the control of the Government of Manitoba until the question of boundaries will be actually settled.

"Sir Wilfrid Laurier ruthlessly and without any color of right wrenched from the Province of Manitoba the administration of Keewatin. He now, by way of a corrupt bargain with Edward Brown, endeavors to intimidate the free and indepedent electerate of this province.

"Unless the people of Manitoba have become unutterably changed in their judgment of right and wrong, Edward Brown on the 7th of March will be the recipient of the most smashing blow any Liberal leader—not excepting Hon. Tom Greenway—has ever had."

BRONCHITIS.

EVERYBODY KNOWS WHAT IT IS —BUT EVERYBODY DOES NOT KNOW WHAT WILL CURE IT.

J. S. McKEOWN TELLS THE PEOPLE OF BELLEVILLE.

Asked one day in his store the question, "What is good for bronchitis?" Mr. McKeown, our well known druggist, answered, "I hear such marvelous results from Vinol all the time that I believe it to be the greatest remedy for coughs, colds, bronchitis and all throat and lung troubles that we have ever sold in our store. It never disappoints people, and I do like to sell a thing that gives satisfaction. Vinol is cod liver oil medicine without the oil, and wherever old-fashioned cod liver oil preparations will do good, Vinol will do more good, for it is delicious to the taste and powerful as a curative agent.

"I wish every person in Belleville who is overworked, run down, debilitated, every old person, every weak woman, every sufferer with fall colds bronchitis or incipient consumption, every nervous, irritable person or any one suffering with stomach troubles, would take advantage of my guarantee to refund the money if Vinol does not help them and restore them to health. Please call at our store and learn more about it." — J. S. McKeown, Druggist.

Forgot Fire Drill

EVIDENCE AT INQUEST ON HOCHELAGA SCHOOL TRAGEDY.

Montreal, March 5.—Before Coroner McMahon and the jury was continued to-day the inquest into the deaths of the little victims of the Hochelaga Protestant School disaster of Tuesday last. Several of the pupils and all the teachers surviving gave evidence of the occurrences of that day.

That the fire drill was entirely forgotten except by Miss Campbell seems to be abundantly proved, while it would appear that no one realized the extent of the danger until it was found that escape was cut off. The hearing was adjourned to Friday.

Information For Municipalites.

In answering a query from a correspondent at Bancroft, the legal editor of the Mail and Empire says: The Council of a municipality has no right to use the funds of that municipality in payment for the Municipal World or any other journal or publication. They are personally responsible, or the Treasurer is, for any money paid for such a purpose. If any one of the members of a Council desires to purchase the Municipal World, or any other newspaper, he must do so with his own money. The Municipal World is only a newspaper or journal published by private individuals, for their own benefit, and the Council has no more right to use the money of the municipality in paying for that Fire Escapes For School Buildings.

AN OUNCE OF PREVENTION IS WORTH A POUND OF CURE.

How often, in times when most required, the devices which are depended upon for protection and safety, fail to work. In case of fire the hose is rotten, the danger signal does not work and the alarm fails. This was evidenced in the terrible holocaust in the Hochelaga Protestant school, Montreal, on Tuesday of last week, when seventeen children were suffocated—all members of the kindergarten department on the second floor of the building. There were no fire escapes on the building and the gong was pulled, but for some reason did not sound. Had the fire gong worked when needed and had the building been equipped with proper fire escapes, the lives of the large number who met death would doubtless have been saved. It appears that the fire drills were regularly practiced and no fault can be assigned to the school commissioners on this score. But what was the trouble with the gong? Had there been any fire escapes every child would have escaped. The Montreal Witness says:

"Here was a building standing completely isolated, accessible from every side, and with two entrances, these entrances being at opposite ends. The building consisted of a basement, two storeys above that, and a small upper storey. The fire originated in the basement at one end, being caused, it is believed, by an overheated furnace. It quickly worked its way up through that end of the building, and the school being heated by hot air, the heating pipes carried the smoke all over the building. This fact seems the only one which will explain the terrible mortality, for in the blinding smoke the children must have got into a hopeless panic. But even so, it is perfectly evident that had there been fire escapes on the building, as there should have been on a building of that kind, every child would have been saved.

"It would seem," continues the Witness, "that there were half a dozen contributory causes to this disaster. The building was not fitted for a modern school. The stairways were crooked, the passages narrow, and there were no fire escapes.

"The firemen say that if there had been a single fire escape no lives need have been lost. Is it not the duty of the building inspector to examine such buildings and compel measures for the safety of the inmates? Then in such a structure and near two furnaces, large piles of wood were stacked. Ought not this wood to have been kept in a separate shed? The hot air system of heating seems to be wonderfully adapted to the immediate distribution of smoke and poisonous fumes when something goes wrong. The question occurs, too, why the infants or the kindergarten should be placed on the top floor, where escape in case of alarm was most difficult? This is the case in other schools. If the lack of water had a share in causing the calamity, or if the lack of pressure added to the tragedy, the public will at least know where some of the blame is to be laid. Our waterworks engineer has long been warning us of the danger of a water famine. The need of more pumping power has long been admitted."

It is important that the school buildings of Belleville should be provided with proper fire escapes. The fire drills are faithfully practiced and the children are proficient enough in this respect. A tragedy like that in Montreal may occur in any school. Forewarned is forearmed, and an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure.

New Encampment Was Instituted.

A number of the members of the two local I.O.O.F. Encampments last evening visited Trenton, where an Encampment was instituted in connection with the I.O.O.F. lodge there. Some 51 members were enrolled, and the officers were installed by Grand Chief Powley, of Toronto, assisted by Grand Representative Garbutt, of Picton, and members from here. After the installation work was completed the visitors were royally entertained.

Invited For 4th Year

The Quarterly Official Board of Holloway St. Methodist Church has unanimously invited Rev. R. H. Leitch, pastor of the church, to remain another year, and the Rev. gentleman, we are informed, has accepted the invitation.

Cut this out and take it to R. Templeton & Co.'s drug store and get a free sample of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. These tablets are far superior to pills, being easier to take and more pleasant in effect. They correct disorders of the stomach, liver and bowels.

WILL THIS BILL PASS?

Bill Taylor's gone to Denver;
A legislative chair
He's got, for Bill was 'lected
To represent us there.
Before he left he told us
Proud of him we'd sure be.
He says we will, but will we?
We're waitin' now to see.

He says, by gum, he'll stun 'em
With speeches that he'll make,
An' folks will all be askin',
"Who's that bright country Jake?"
He says on bills we favor
He'll make 'em all agree.
He says he will, but will he?
We're waitin' now to see.

He vows no boss will rule him;
He'll stick to what is right,
No matter if to do it
The whole bunch he must fight.
He says he'll drink no whisky;
Bill swears he'll stick to tea.
He says he will, but will he?
We're waitin' now to see.

Bill Taylor's gone to Denver
With "Hon." hitched to his name;
He's not up there for riches
An' not to gain great fame.
He says it's his ambition
To serve us faithfully.
He says it is, but is it?
We're waitin' now to see.

Literary Notes

The early spring number of "The Designer" has a useful and interesting array of household matter and fiction. The first fifty pages are mainly devoted for spring and summer wear, and to the illustration of the accessories that go with them. The end of the book is reserved for articles relating to household affairs and simple entertainments, suitable for little home evening affairs are also given. The Puzzle pages, the Fashion Notes for Men—all regular departments of the magazine — are full of especial interest this month. The Fiction is made a feature in the March number. Edith Parker Johnson, now a resident of Korea, has contributed an interesting article. Besides these, there is a story by Edwin L. Sabin, and a particularly graceful little poem of Minna Irving's.

Suppose the Foreigner Should Leave Our Cities.

It is in the large cities that the departure of the foreigner would be most severely felt. In the thirty largest cities in the Union persons native-born of native parents formed in 1900 but 33 per cent. of the total population. New York, from its boasted eminence of 3,500,000 inhabitants at the twelfth census, would shrink to less than 800,000, yet still remain the most populous city. Philadelphia's population would be cut in half; Chicago would lose nearly four-fifths; Boston would decline from more than half a million to approximately 150,000; while Milwaukee would sink from near the 300,000 mark to less than 50,000, or to but little more than one-sixth of her total population. These facts faintly suggest the disturbance of the population equilibrium, especially in the urban centres of the North and West, which would result from the exodus of the foreigner and the children of foreigners. In this branch of the subject even the Southern States would be mildly interested, since in the cities are located practically all the foreign element resident in those

Time Glass Auctions.

In some parts of England auctions are held with a minute sand glass. The highest bid made between the time the glass is turned till the sand runs out wins the article that is under the hammer.

Desert of Sahara.

A comparison of the maximum temperature in different parts of the world shows that the great desert of Africa is by far the hottest. This vast plain, which extends 2,000 miles from east to west and 1,000 from north to south, has a temperature of 150 degrees F. in the hottest days of summer.

Minute Animal Life.

It is believed by microscopists that the highest powers of their instruments have not yet revealed the most minute forms of animal life.

Annapolis.

Annapolis, Md., was so called in honor of Queen Anne. The Catholics, who settled it, called it St. Mary's. It was renamed Arundelton in honor of the Earl of Arundel, still later was christened Anne Arundel, and finally the present name was bestowed.

The Word "Boss."

The word "boss," so commonly applied by an inferior to one of higher grade in the United States, is not, as generally supposed, American in its origin. It comes from the low German and is heard frequently in continental Europe. In Germany one often sees the sign "Schlaf-Baas," which translated means the boss of a lodging house.

COMPULSORY LAUGHTER.

(Buffalo Evening News.)

The foreman in our factory's a pretty decent feller,
He likes to crack a joke with us, and as a story-teller
There hain't his ekal in the shop, leastwise that's what I think,
Though when he starts to reel one off the boys begin to wink.

There's just one criticism here that
I would like to make,
And I will briefly state it, hoping no offence he'll take.
His stories are an ancient lot, and all have whiskers growing
So long and wavy that the wind is through them constant blowing.

But, still, whenever he tells one, we all are bound to listen,
He gets so animated, and his eyes,
how they do glisten!
And though of those old stories we are most completely tired,
We've got to laugh in the right place, or else we will get fired.

It is cheering to learn that our people are foresaking spirits for mild drink. In 1874 the consumption of spirits in Canada was 1,994 gallons—almost eight quarts a head, and that in the same year the use of beer amounted to just over three gallons a head. It was 1866 before the consumption of spirits permanently fell below a gallon a head. Last year, after varying fluctuations, it stood at 0.861 of a gallon a head, while the consumption of beer had risen to 5.25 gallons.

INCONSISTENCY.

(Hamilton Herald.)

It is pointed out that the Laurier Government was pledged to introduce a prohibition bill if a majority of votes were given in favor of prohibition in the Dominion plebiscite; that a majority of 15,000 was polled in favor of prohibition, but that the Government said it was not big enough: that the Government organs upheld the decision of the Government, and that now these same papers are berating the Whitney Government because he refuses to make the introduction of local prohibition depend on a bare majority of votes.

THE CAR NEXT THE ENGINE.

(Toronto Telegram.)

Murder to save money is little better than murder to gain money.

Murder is the only true name for this system of sending human beings into the car next the engine.

The car next the engine is inevitably a death-trap when there is a collision.

The fate of those express messengers who prished in the flames at Mountain is an example of the ever-present danger that threatens men who ride in the car next the engine.

Railways should be compelled to make up every train with a buffer car between the engine and human beings. There is always more or less danger or head-on collisions in the operation of every single-track railway. Such a collision means death to the men in the car next the engine. It is a crime for the railways to compel men to earn a living in such cars.

Liverpool, March 5.—Liverpool and London cables are steady at 11c to 12½c per lb., dressed weight; refrigerator beef is quoted at 9¼c to 9⅝c per lb.

Toronto Live Stock.

Toronto, March 5.—Receipts of live stock were light—50 car loads, composed of 810 cattle, 645 hogs, 182 sheep, 76 calves and 15 horses.

Exporters.

The supply of shipping cattle was limited. One lot of 13 picked out of more than 150 butcher cattle were bought by Brown and Wilkinson of Galt at $5.40 per cwt. The next best lot was a load of 18, brought in by H. L. Atkinson, 1340 lbs. each, at $5.12½, and a few others sold around $5 per cwt. Export bulls were quoted at from $3.75 to $4.30 per cwt.

Butchers.

Prime picked lots of butchers sold at $4.80 to $5 per cwt.; loads of good to choice, $4.50 to $4.85; fair to good loads, $4.35 to $4.60; medium butchers' and good cows, $3.65 to $4.12½; common butchers' and canners at $1.50 to $2.50.

Milch Cows.

There were about 30 milkers and springers, none of which could be classed as being very choice. Prices ranged from $30 to $53 each.

Veal Calves.

There is a good demand for choice veal calves, but few are coming forward. Prices ranged from $3 to $7 per cwt. A few prime new milk-fed calves would bring from 25c to 50c per cwt. more.

Sheep and Lambs.

The run being light, the market remained firm. Prices were as follows: Export ewes, $4.50 to $5.25 per cwt.; lambs, choice, $6.50 to $7.25 per cwt.; common lambs, $3 to $6 per cwt.

Hogs.

Deliveries light; market inclined to be easier, with selects, $6.85 to $6.90; lights, $6.60 to $6.65 per cwt.

Earl Grey at Levis.

Quebec, March 6.—Earl Grey visited the Caisse Populaire, Levis, yesterday, accompanied by a cousin, George Grey, Col. Hanbury Williams and Mr. Rickering.

Mr. Desjardins, the founder and manager, explained the system of the institution minutely, the Governor-General evincing keen interest.

DROPS DEAD AFTER FIGHT.

Altercation With Conductor In Street Car Leads to Blows.

New York, March 6.—Ira Kilburn, a wealthy retired manufacturer, living in Prospect Avenue, South Orange, N.J., dropped dead in a police station in Newark, N.J., last night, after a fight with a conductor on a street car.

He had been knocked off the car, and with the conductor, James Kelly, taken to the police station. He was 73 years old.

Mr. Kilburn was on his way home from Newark and boarded a car. He and the conductor exchanged words and then blows, and both were taken to the police station. Kilburn started to tell his story and fell dead in front of the desk. He was one of the best known men in the State, not only through his long connection with the agricultural society, but because of his reputation as a breeder of trotting and road horses. He was an expert driver.

Kelly was held pending the result of an autopsy.

WAS IT SUICIDE?

Young Canadian Found With Bullet Through His Head.

Saskatoon, Sask., March 6.—The body of E. C. H. Gwynn of Valley Park, 25 miles southwest of Saskatoon, was found in a shack Monday. A Winchester rifle along side the body and a hole in the skull suggested suicide. Mounted police have gone out to investigate. The body was found by the partner of deceased and R. W. Schram. No reason for suicide can be given. Deceased was unmarried, and was 36 years of age.

Berlin, March 6.—The Foreign Office says it is not true that the German cruiser Panther is taking an ultimatum to Hayti, concerning the charges made against Hermann & Co.

The Cotton Gin.

The first cotton gin in this country was put in operation by Eli Whitney, the inventor, in 1793.

Anthracite Coal.

The first anthracite coal known to be such was discovered at Mauch Chunk, Pa., in 1791. The Lehigh Coal Mining company began business in the same year, making a commodity of the recent discovery.

Lacquer For Brass.

Here is a very good recipe for lacquer for brass: Put into a quart jar an ounce of pale shellac, a quarter of an ounce of cape aloes, an eighth of an ounce of powdered gamboge and a pint of alcohol. When this is dissolved strain through cheesecloth. The brass must be perfectly clean and, if possible, slightly warm. Apply with a soft varnish brush.

Coleridge.

Coleridge left his wife and children without apology or farewell and never would see them again.

Storks In Egypt.

Were it not for the multitudes of storks that throng to Egypt every winter there would be no living in the country, for after every inundation frogs appear in most incredible numbers.

Rice.

Alexander the Great about B. C. 400 made an attempt to introduce many Asiatic plants into Europe. Rice was among the number, but the Greeks did not take kindly to its cultivation, preferring to import it from India and Egypt.

Fish Power.

The most prodigious power of muscle is exhibited by fish. The whale moves with a velocity through a dense medium of water that would carry him if continued round the world in something less than a fortnight, and a swordfish has been known to strike his sword through the oak plank of a ship.

Speed of the Elephant.

The elephant is commonly supposed to be a slow, clumsy animal, but when excited or frightened can attain a speed of twenty miles an hour and keep it up for half a day.

Old Fashioned Strategy

By Wilbur Bates

Copyright, 1906, by C. H. Sutcliffe

The instant you laid your eyes on her you felt quite sure that her grandmother had selected her clothes.

That is not just the way the girls at the Empire lunch room, No. 5, expressed it. Kitty Behman, who had always queened it over the force of black frocked, white aproned waitresses, patted her marceled locks placidly and remarked:

"Well, his nibs sure picked a lemon in that."

"That," otherwise Sally Loftus, sat in the cashier's booth near the entrance arranging small change in neat piles. Her head, crowned by brown locks, parted demurely and almost severely in the middle, was bent above her work, but her quiet glance traveled to the group of gossiping girls. Incidentally they took in other things. At one table the ice had melted in the butter dish and water trickled over the mahogany surface. On another table the glass sugar bowl was nearly empty. A soiled napkin and butter plate had been left at a third table.

The girl who looked as if her grandmother bought her clothes fingered the round buttons on her queer cashmere basque, and then her well manicured nails tapped gently against the old fashioned brooch at her throat. Inside the chased circle of gold reposed braided strands of hair the exact shade of the girl's. Her glance finally rested on the sloping shoulders of the young man who stood by the big plate glass window, where a white aproned youth poured a stream of white dough on hot griddles.

The young man, who was Ralph Putnam, son of the owner of the Empire circuit of lunch rooms, started back to the kitchen, and as he passed the new cashier he flung her a glance that was almost appealing. She met him with one oddly reassuring and fully understanding. He brightened perceptibly, but as he passed the group of girls near the coffee counter the light died out of his eyes once more.

Kitty Behman smiled up at him familiarly.

"Where'd you get the Christmas tree ornament, Ralph? There's one thing sure. You needn't worry about any of the boys copping her out. She's had her fortune read 'old maid' by every clairvoyant in town, or I miss my guess."

"Her father went to school with mine. She comes of very good family," he said apologetically.

"Gee, but it's fine to have a pull!" was Kitty's contemptuous reply.

Ralph wandered into the kitchen. More than ever he hated the lunch room and everything connected with it. And in truth he was not entirely to blame. His father had sent him from private school to college, where he had taken the classical courses, and then his somewhat unreasonable parent could not understand why his bookish son could not walk, diploma in hand, into an Empire lunch room and manage it as well as the other young men in the same position of responsibility who had served their apprenticeship, even to cooking griddle cakes in the window. Ralph had trouble auditing his accounts, settling quarrels in the kitchen and preserving some semblance of discipline among the pert waitresses.

All this—and more—Sally Loftus learned before the breakfast rush set in. It was a soggy day, and gradually discontent seemed to permeate the room. A tired looking stenographer in bedraggled skirts was arguing with a waitress because her toast had been burned. The waitress replied tartly that some folks expected a lot for 10 cents. Ralph stood helplessly at the table, afraid to take a hand in the argument, but when the waitress finally flounced to the coffee counter he stepped in awkwardly and told the patron he would bring her some fresh toast. After he had done this he paused wearily at Sally's elbow. She crossed her hands demurely on the marble ledge and said quietly:

"I was so glad to see you reprimand that waitress. She was very impertinent, and we ought to make every customer feel that she wants to breakfast here regularly. Don't you think so?"

Ralph started. He had not called down the saucy waitress. He had merely tried to undo the mischief she had wrought. Now he wished he had scolded her before the customer.

"We have a lot of regulars," he said in the same apologetic tone he had employed to Kitty Behman.

"But we want a lot more. We ought to have every place at these tables taken between 7:30 and 9 o'clock."

Suddenly Ralph started down the narrow aisle. For the first time he noticed the water dribbling from the butter plates. He approached the saucy waitress and said with a funny attempt at sternness which was quite lost on the astonished girl:

"Clean up those butter plates, and don't you ever again tell a customer she wants too much for her money. We want them to get all that's coming to them."

"What do you think of that?" demanded the girl, with an injured expression, as she turned to a helper. "What's come over him?"

Something had come over Ralph Putnam, a curious sense of panic. He hurried back to the cashier's desk and leaned against it as if for support. He had he dared assert his authority. But instead the girl really cleaned up the butter dishes, and the girl whose grandmother bought her clothes watched her do it from the tail of an observing eye.

Sally Loftus had a busy day, but when she was relieved at 7 o'clock she was not ready for home. She entered Ralph's tiny private office, some slips in hand.

"Will you please help me with the accounts?" she asked in friendly tones.

"Why, you don't have to—the other cashier"—

"I know, but I want to learn everything about the business, and I know you can teach me."

Ralph fairly gasped, but he spread the troublesome slips and bills before her. In fifteen minutes she had the matter straightened out, and with a quiet "Thank you, I can do it after this," left her employer with a sense that somehow an angel had suddenly illumined his miserable existence.

From that day on affairs at the Empire lunch room, No. 5, ran differently. The quiet young woman in the cashier's window was forever telling Ralph Putnam how sensible he was to do this or that—things which he had wanted to do, but was afraid to undertake—and straightway he went off and did them. The cashier was constantly investing him with business virtues he did not possess, and as constantly he tried to assume them. The climax came when an elderly man tipped Kitty Behman with a nickel, and as the girl dropped the coin into the pocket of her white apron she said to Ralph, who was almost at her elbow:

"Gee! I thought I read in the papers that Russell Sage was dead."

The old gentleman told Sally Loftus about the insult as he paid his check. Sally glanced up quickly. Ralph, red of face, was folding and unfolding a napkin, and Kitty, with dancing eyes and impertinent tilt of head, was telling the other girls what a smart answer she had given her stingy customer.

Ralph strolled over to Sally's side. She made change for a little typewriter. Then she turned to Ralph.

"There is one thing I admire in Kitty Behman. She is gritty. Not many girls would smile like that when they had just been dismissed for impertinence."

Ralph threw back his shoulders.

"Then you think it would be all right to fire her?" he asked.

"The only thing you could have done," replied Kitty firmly. "I felt sure you would see it that way."

Ralph had not thought of firing Kitty. She had ruled the entire floor so long—but now—

That night Kitty was summoned to the tiny office. Ralph was a trifle pale around the lips, and his voice was husky, but his intention had not wavered. It was well for him, however, that dismissal came so suddenly to Kitty that she actually lost the power of speech.

Three months later Tim, who checked umbrellas and ran errands at No. 5, met Kitty on her way home from work.

"How's the little old maid?" she inquired flippantly.

"Wot's eatin' you?" he inquired savagely. "She's goin' to beat you to the altar by a mile. She's trottin' in the class with his nibs, too—an' the old man's tickled to death. Says she's made a man of his boy, an' he don't care who knows it."

"Well, what do you think of that?" exclaimed Kitty, smoothing her marcel waves reflectively.

"That some of you wise ones ain't one, two, three with the old fashioned sort with the right kind of wheels in her think pot. So long."

The Sleeping Baby's "Smile."

It is interesting to see how old is the maternal delusion about the smiling of babies in their sleep. All children asleep are taken with a catching of the corners of the mouth, which is as unlike as possible to the real smile—the humorous and delightful little silent sketch of a laugh, appearing first at any age between a fortnight and a month. Yet human sentimentality has insisted on calling the sleeping grimace, due to flatulence, a smile, and even a smile caused by dreams of angels. And St. Monica must have been as unintelligent on this point as any other matron, for St. Augustine, reviewing in his "Confessions" the growth of his own mind, mentions that he had been told of the coming of infantile smiles, "having appeared previously in sleep." Thackeray echoes St. Monica, for he shows us Amelia sitting by her child, "who was smiling in his sleep." No baby ever smiled in his sleep yet or is ever likely to do so. —London Chronicle.

Origin of the Christmas Stocking.

From Italy comes the legend from which we are supposed to get the time honored custom of hanging up the Christmas stocking. Good old St. Nicholas of Padua used to throw long knitted purses tied at both ends into the open windows of the very poor people, and these purses were of yarn and not unlike a footless stocking. Finally it became the custom of the people to hang these empty receptacles out of their windows on the night before Christmas so that St. Nicholas would put a gift into them as he passed by. By and by, when the coin of the realm became scarce, toys were put in for the children and useful presents for grown people. In the north country, where it was rather chilly at Christmas time, the purses were hung on the mantelpiece, and it was believed that the good old saint would come down the chimney and fill them. When these purses went out of fashion, stockings

WEIGHT OF PLANETS.

It is the Mass of the Body That Counts With the Astronomer.

If a ham weighing thirty pounds were taken up to the moon and weighed there, the "pull"—the attractive force of the moon upon the ham—would amount to only five pounds. There would be another weight of the ham for the planet Mars and yet another on the sun. A ham weighing thirty pounds at New York ought to weigh some 800 pounds on the sun's surface; hence the astronomer does not speak of the weight of a planet, because that would depend upon the place where it was weighed. But he speaks of the mass of the planet, which means how much planet there is, no matter where it might be weighed.

At the same time we might, without any inexactness, agree that the weight of a heavenly body should be fixed by the weight it would have in New York. As we could not imagine a planet in New York, because it may be larger than the earth itself, what we are to imagine is this: Suppose the planet could be divided into a million million million equal parts and one of these parts brought to New York and weighed. We could easily find its weight in pounds or tons. Then multiply this by a million million million, and we shall have a weight of the planet. This would be equivalent to what astronomers might take as the mass of the planet.

A Use For His Hat.

A funny incident of a drawing room meeting was recently noticed. A grave looking gentleman, with an unusually tall hat, entered and, seeing no rack in the hall, placed his hat on the floor just behind the door. Pretty soon another grave man entered, with a large, dripping umbrella, and, peering anxiously for the usual receptacle, saw in the gloom the hat resting on the floor. His eyesight was probably poor, for he mistook it for one of the new umbrella holders, and in it he deposited his dripping umbrella. This was an example for those who followed, and in a short time the solemn looking hat was stanchly holding a dozen umbrellas. At the end of the meeting the water in the hat was an inch in depth.—London Tit-Bits.

A Thirsty Cat.

"Perhaps you think the old water in the milk joke has been worked to death, but I've found a new variation of it," said a south side man recently. "You know, I have a small negro girl as a nurse for my children, and one of her duties is to tell stories to the kids just before bedtime. They always listen intently to what she says, and last night I decided to listen too. This is what I heard:

"'An' de cat, she got thirsty, an' got thirstier an' mo' thirsty, an' finally she went to a pan ob milk sittin' in de pantry to get a drink ob watah.'

"I told the story to our milkman this morning, and he didn't laugh at all."

Absentminded.

The judge was at dinner in the new household, according to the Philadelphia Ledger, when the young housekeeper asked:

"Did you ever try any of my biscuits, judge?"

"No," replied the judge. "I never did, but I dare say they deserve it."

Deportment.

The new steamer was on its first trip, with a lot of landlubbers on board.

"Isn't she behaving beautifully, captain, in this heavy sea?" exclaimed an enthusiastic marine reporter.

"Yes, sir," said the gruff captain; "a great deal better, sir, than the passengers are."

Does Your Girl Swim?

Wedderly—Can the girl you are engaged to swim? Singleton—I don't know. But why do you ask? Wedderly—Because if she can you ought to be happy. A girl who can swim can keep her mouth shut.

A man rarely has reason to regret the things he doesn't say or the letters he doesn't write.

Only a Romance

By Laelia Walt

Copyright, 1906, by M. M. Cunningham

Miss Gussie Robertson had ridden out from the summer camp under the shadows of the Spanish peaks, Colorado, to do some sketching. A party of New York and Boston people were doing the camping out act in great shape. Miss Gussie was the daughter of Colonel Robertson, who was one of the party, and she was an artist of no mean ability. There was but one drawback to her complete happiness. Young Harry Caswell of Boston had imagined for a year past that he was very much in love with her. She didn't have any such feeling for him. She doubted if she ever would have, but she had joined the campers to have time to think it over and had arrived to find him very much in evidence.

It was 10 o'clock when Miss Gussie fastened her pony to a wild-plum tree at the head of a gulch two miles from camp and made her way down it and alongside a brawling creek until the wall on her right rose up a full hundred feet in massive ruggedness. Then she found a comfortable seat on a rock and began to sketch the grim wall and the half dozen trees whose roots had found a foothold thereon. It was a quiet, solemn place, even with the brawling of the creek in her ears, and the girl worked for an hour, forgetful almost of where she was. Then there came a sudden and startling interruption.

While Miss Gussie was hitching her broncho to the plum tree and descending the gorge a man about thirty years old, neither good nor bad looking, but possessed of a fighting jaw, was routed out of his camp on the mountain trail above her ten miles away. Five men, all mounted, came upon him as he was saddling up and called upon him to surrender. He yelled back in defiance, and, taking cover, he stood them off for half an hour, wounding two and being himself grazed by a bullet. Then, as the survivors began to work around to his rear, the man mounted his broncho and fled down the trail at full speed. The three unwounded men pursued him, firing whenever the curving trail brought him into sight. The girl in the gorge heard the shooting and shouting, but could not locate the sounds. In her alarm she rose to her feet and was looking up and down, seeking to make out the situation, when a man and horse came over the top of the cliff above her and crashed into a tree fifty feet down. Thence they deflected into the top of a second tree, thirty feet lower, and as she gazed with wide open eyes the two bodies brought up in the creek almost at her feet. She heard the shouts of men and the clatter of horses' hoofs above, but both soon passed out of hearing.

The girl sprang from the rock and bent over the bodies in the creek. The horse was dead, but the rider lived. In a moment she had dragged him out of the creek, and as he came to he stared at her in stupid surprise. Sitting up after a moment, he dreamily asked:

"Did I come over the cliff there?"

"You did," was the answer, "and your horse lies dead in the creek. Those trees broke your fall."

"Much obliged to the trees. Did the sheriff's party keep on down the trail?"

"So the sheriff was after you?" she queried as she stepped back a pace.

"Yes, but give me a chance to tell my side of the story. I had a claim up on the mountain, and a hound of a man jumped it. I tried to shoot him out. That's the game in these parts, and there's nothing criminal about it. Don't be afraid of me. You belong to some camping out party, I suppose?"

"Yes, and I will ride back and get help for you."

"Don't do it. If you'll help me a bit I can get along here all right. Help me over against the wall. Thanks. Now, then, I'll want a blanket and some food, and I shall depend on you. You have the soul of an artist and therefore plenty of romance. We will stop at romance. It will be an incident for you to think of, and it will save me making long explanations to the sheriff. Shall it be as I say or will you leave me to make a dinner for the first bear that comes along? Don't take too much trouble, and keep thinking what a romantic incident it is. No love, no matrimony—just romance."

There was something in the reckless nature of the man that appealed to Miss Gussie. She doubted that he had told her the truth about himself, but he was temporarily helpless, and she sympathized with him. She gave him her noonday lunch and rode away to camp, returning with a blanket and further provisions. She suggested the camp again, but the man made light of his shaking up and declared he was doing very well. Give him three or four days and he would be ready to go his way.

When the girl left the gorge on this occasion it was understood that she was not to return next day, but early next morning she stole a bottle of liniment from the medicine chest, bribed the cook to put up a luncheon for two and rode away for further sketching. She found the stranger stiff and lame, but more talkative than the day before. On this occasion she saw more romance in the affair. He was a fairly good looking man. He was a victim of injustice. He had passed through a great peril. He was what she had always hungered to behold—a hero.

taking her departure to reappear next day and the next and the next. In brief, her visits were made daily for the next seven days, and each day she saw that her bad man was making an improvement. On the last day she found him waiting at the plum trees. He had furbished himself up as best he could and looked more presentable. His lameness was about gone, and the saddle from his horse was on the ground beside him.

"My dear young lady," he began. "It goes without saying that my gratitude is unbounded. Did I promise not to make you a proposal of marriage?"

"I—I don't remember," prevaricated the girl as a red flush crossed her face.

"I think I did, and I will stick to my promise. It was to be romance and nothing beyond. No love, no matrimony—just romance. I might make an exception in your case, however."

"Please don't. That is—what are you doing with my saddle?"

"Removing it to make room for mine. There we have it. You see, I have got to borrow your horse. That will also be included in the romance."

"But I object. It is not my horse."

"Sorry, my dear girl, but I can't get away without him, and if I should be taken our little romance would be spoiled. For all your kindness I thank you, and should we meet again under different circumstances"—

Miss Gussie grabbed at the horse, but the bad man was too quick for her. He raised his hat and smiled as he rode away, and she sat down on a stone and cried. She was still crying when the sheriff and four men came galloping up and plunged down into the gorge. They were back in five minutes, and the official asked:

"Young woman, have you seen anything of a man around here this morning?"

"He rode off on my horse half an hour ago," replied the girl.

"So he lived through it?"

"But the men had no right to jump his claim when he was ill," said Miss Gussie in a spirited way.

"Jump his claim! Do you know who the feller is?"

"N-not exactly, but he was very nice. He had to take my horse to get away from you."

"Hear her talking. That feller is Bob Hill, the most notorious highway robber in four states. You must have nursed him up and helped him to vamoose, and I don't know but what I shall have to hold you as accessory."

That evening it was bright moonlight, and Miss Gussie was sitting well away from the camp watching the last rays of twilight fade into night. By and by young Mr. Caswell came over and took her hand and said:

"My dear Gussie, the fourth occasion has arrived. I know I am not fit to lick up your tracks in the dust, but"—

"You can consider that we are engaged," said the girl as she thought how mean it was of the stranger not to have made her at least a tiny proposal before he gobbled her horse and rode away—just enough of a proposal to enable her to brag about it among the other incidents of camping out.

A Maine Methuselah.

In a logging camp near Hulton, Me., a few years ago a man by the name of Peter Grimes was accidentally killed and his widow was left in rather poor circumstances.

Joseph Breed, a particular friend of the unfortunate man, being somewhat of a carpenter, decided to make Grimes' coffin and so cut down the funeral expenses. He told the widow of his intention and also of carving the name and age of her late husband on the lid, but he was rather worried when he found that the age was twenty-eight years.

"I am awful sorry, Mrs. Grimes," said Joe, "but I never could cut a figure 8."

"That's too bad," replied Mrs. Grimes; then as a happy thought came to her she asked him if he could cut a figure 7.

"Yes, I can cut a first rate figure 7."

"Well, then, why not cut four 7's? Everybody knows four 7's are twenty-eight."

So the following day Joe completed the coffin as she suggested.

The day of the funeral came and the late Rev. T. S. Black of Hulton was reading the service over the body and had arrived at that part where he was saying:

"Our dearly beloved brother, who departed this life at the age of"—

Here he glanced at the coffin lid for reference, and, his eyes lighting on Joe's row of four 7's, he gave a gasp and with a startled look in his eyes exclaimed:

"Good Lord, how did he ever miss the flood!"—Boston Herald.

Natural Enemies of the Quail.

Our quail have many natural enemies. They are often decimated by the severity of winter, and there are human beings so degraded and so lost to shame as to seek their destruction in ways most foul. A covey of quail will sometimes huddle as close together as possible in a circle, with their heads turned outward. I have heard of men who, discovering them in this situation, have fired upon them, killing every one at a single shot. There ought to be a law which would consign one guilty of this crime to prison for a comfortable term of years. A story is told of a man so stupidly unsportsmanlike that when he was interfered with as he raised his gun, apparently to shoot a quail running on the ground, he exclaimed with irritation, "I did not intend to shoot until it had stopped running!" This may be called innocent stupidity, but there is no place for such a man among sportsmen, and he is certainly out of place

THE CHANGE OF LIFE

Sensible Advice to Women from Mrs. Henry Lee, Mrs. Fred Certia and Mrs. Pinkham.

MRS HENRY LEE MRS. FRED CERTIA

Owing to modern methods of living not one woman in a thousand approaches this perfectly natural change without experiencing a train of very annoying and sometimes painful symptoms.

This is the most critical period of her whole existence and every woman who neglects the care of her health at this time invites disease and pain.

When her system is in a deranged condition or she is predisposed to apoplexy or congestion of any organ, the tendency is at this period likely to become active and with a host of nervous irritations make life a burden. At this time also cancers and tumors are more liable to form and begin their destructive work.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, melancholia, dread of impending evil, palpitation of the heart, irregularities, constipation and dizziness are promptly heeded by intelligent women who are approaching the period of life when this great change may be expected.

Mrs. Fred Certia, 1014 So. Lafayette Street, So. Bend, Ind., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the ideal medicine for women who are passing through Change of Life. For several months I suffered from hot flashes, extreme nervousness, headache and sleeplessness. I had no appetite and could not sleep. I had made up my mind there was no help for me until I began to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, my bad symptoms ceased, and it brought me safely through the danger period, built up my system and I am in excellent health. I consider Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound unsurpassed for women during this trying period of life."

Mrs. Henry Lee, 60 Winter Street, New Haven, Conn., writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"After suffering untold misery for three years during Change of Life I heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I wrote you of my condition, and began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and followed your advice, and to-day I am well and happy. I can now walk anywhere and work as well as anyone, and for years previous I had tried but could not get around without help. I consider your medicine a sovereign balm for suffering women."

Women passing through this critical period should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. If there is anything about your case you don't understand write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for advice. It is free and has guided thousands to health.

When a medicine has been successful in restoring to health, actually thousands of women, you cannot well say without trying it, "I do not believe it will help me." It is your duty to yourself and family to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

TIPPED AS HE WENT.

His Promise to Pay a Lump Sum Weekly Did Not Bring Results.

"I had heard all about the tipping system in Europe before going abroad," said the young man just returned from his maiden voyage, "so I thought I'd inaugurate a new system. At a fashionable hotel in London the valet assigned to my floor was the subject of my first experiment.

"'See here,' I said in a frank, jovial manner when he came in to attend me, 'I want to make an arrangement with you. It's an infernal nuisance to be handing out tips every few minutes, or, at least, when I want anything done. Now, I purpose to lump the whole thing in weekly payments. I expect to be here at least three weeks. You look after me to the best of your ability, and at the end of each week I'll make it all right with you—in fact, I'll give you more in a lump sum than you would get in tips. Is that satisfactory?'

"'Quite, sir,' he said cheerfully, but I fancied he looked disappointed.

"'Very well,' said I. 'I'm going out for a drive about town. Meanwhile take my evening clothes out of my trunk, have them pressed and laid out for me. You'll find studs and buttons for the shirt in that box on the dresser. My shoes are in that valise.'

"'H'all right, sir. Very good, sir. Thankee kindly,' said he, and I left with a feeling of elation.

"When I got back to the hotel I found my evening clothes still in the trunk, the shirt and shoes untouched and, in short, 'nothing doing.' Next day I went back to the old system."

PIE BIRDS OF BRITTANY.

They Must Be Pretty Strong, According to This Breton Story.

"Speaking of exaggerations," said a traveler, "reminds me of the pie bird story of the Breton farmer.

"There was a farmer in Brittany who wished to tell a visitor how his farm had been overrun with pies. Pies, you know, are large birds, black and white, with long tails—a kind of crow. The farmer said the pies devastated his fields horribly. If he put up scarecrows, the birds tore them down. One day his young son ran into the granite farmhouse and shouted:

"'Oh, father, hundreds and hundreds of birds! The wheat is being all eaten up!'

"The farmer loaded his gun. But where was the shot? It couldn't be found. He put in a few handfuls of tacks instead. Then he ran out. The wheatfield was black and white, like a checkerboard, with pies. The farmer gave a loud yell, and the birds all flew up into a tall poplar. He fired, and, lo, every bird was nailed fast to the tree. They were nailed fast. Their flapping wings filled the air with a loud whir. The farmer, amazed, stood watching them. Then a strange thing happened. The birds, with one grand united effort, pulled up the huge tree and flew away with it."

Important Correction.

To Tennyson truth was a simple thing. It was simply to be exact. In this light should be read an amusing story found in Bram Stoker's "Personson not long before had been lunching with friends in his own neighborhood not far from Haslemere. His hostess said to him as they went into the dining room:

"I have made a dish specially for you myself. I hope you will try it and tell me exactly what you think of it."

"Of course I shall," replied Tennyson.

After lunch she asked him what he thought of it.

"If you really wish to know," said he, "I thought it was like an old shoe."

When they met, Irving asked Tennyson if the story were true.

"No," he said at once. "I didn't say that. I said something, but it wasn't that it was like an old shoe."

"What did you say?" persisted Irving.

"I said it was like an old boot."

IMITATION PEARLS.

They May Be Detected by the Hole Drilled Through Them.

The means of ascertaining the genuineness of pearls, which are frequently imitated with marvelous skill, is especially important to the layman, even though the jeweler may quickly detect them. Imitations are usually lighter than real pearls and generally are brittle, although some are made solid of fish scales and do not break so easily, while the holes, which in the real pearl are drilled very small and have a sharp edge, are in the false larger and have a blunt edge. As a rule, the imitation pearls are like hollow spheres of glass colored internally with a coating imitating the orient of natural pearl.

The manufacture of these articles embraces two series of operations—the production of the sphere and the introduction of coating. The spheres are produced by the glassblower, who by aid of an enameler's lamp solders the extremity of a tube when the substance is of the right consistency. In this way are obtained very regular little spheres that serve for the composition of the ordinary quality of false pearls.

In the more beautiful imitations the tube employed is slightly opalescent, and the glassblower, besides, gives to the little spheres while they are yet malleable certain slight perceptible inequalities of surface by gently tapping them with a small iron bar. This gives them a still greater resemblance to natural pearls, which are very seldom absolutely regular.—Exchange.

Was Hamlet fat or slender? M. Catulle Mendes, who held the latter view, was nearly killed by a sword thrust of M. Vanor, who leaned to the hundred kilos. The Government And Zam-Buk.

SURVEY OUT FROM FORT WILLIAM TAKES A SUPPLY OF THIS USEFUL BALM.

Zam-Buk, the favorite household balm and salve, is now adopted as "the doctor" by leading parties engaged in surveying various parts of the Dominion lands.

Mr. Henry Hall, writing from Fort William, says: "Having proved how beneficial Zam-Buk is in cases of cuts, skin injuries and diseases, I determined to keep a supply handy. Being engaged to go on a survey, I thought it would be a most useful thing to take along. I obtained a supply in Fort William and very well it was I did so. I may say that pretty nearly every day it was called into requisition by one or other of the party for cuts, bruises, burns, or some injury or other. It is wonderful how quickly Zam-Buk takes the soreness out of cuts, burns, bruises and injuries; and on our survey it earned golden opinions from all who had occasion to try it. I have found it very fine for skin disease, and I can strongly recommend it as a household balm."

Mr. Lascelles Scott, one of the leading Government analysts, says: "I have no hesitation in certifying the entire purity of Zam-Buk, which in my opinion is excellently adapted for skin injuries and diseases." Zam-Buk cures cuts, scalds, burns, bruises, eczema, scalp sores, ringworm, ulcers, abscesses, chapped places, spring pimples, blood poison, chronic abscesses, etc. As an embrocation it relieves rheumatism, neuralgia and sciatica. All druggists and stores sell at 50c a box, or from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. 6 boxes sent for $2.50. Send 1c stamp and we will mail you free sample box.

THE LICORICE PLANT.

Where It Grows and How Its Black Juice Is Treated.

Black licorice is made from the juice of the licorice plant, mixed with starch to prevent it from melting in hot weather. The licorice plant grows for the most part on the banks of the Tigris and Euphrates rivers, which flow through immense treeless prairies of uncultivated land. The climate of these great plains is variable. Half the year it is mild and pleasant, but for three months it is very cold, and for three months in summer hot winds sweep across the country, raising the temperature to 104 degrees for weeks at a time.

The licorice plant is a shrub three feet high and grows without cultivation in situations where its roots can reach the water. The usual time of collecting is the winter, but roots are dug all the year around. At first the root is full of water and must be allowed to dry, a process which takes nearly a year. It is then cut into small pieces from six inches to a foot long. The good and sound pieces are kept, and the rotten ones are used for firewood.

As the valley of the Euphrates contained one of the earliest civilizations in the world, it is probable that licorice is about the oldest confection extant and that the taste, which pleases nearly all children today, was familiar to the little brown boys and girls of Babylon and Nineveh 3,000 years ago.

THE FIRST ZOO.

China, It Seems, Counts That Among Her Many Records.

The Chinese had the first zoo. Menageries are thought to owe their origin partly to the cult of sacred animals and partly to the ambition of rulers to possess specimens of rare and valuable creatures from foreign lands or savage beasts from their own. In the simplest forms zoological gardens were one of the earliest developments of culture and were familiar to the Chinese, Indians, Greeks, Romans and pre-Spanish Mexicans in ancient times. The oldest recorded menagerie is Chinese, dating from 1150 B. C. The den of lions kept by Darius, as described in the book of Daniel, is an example of one of those primitive menageries, while the cult of sacred white horses by the ancient Greeks and Romans and that of so called white elephants in Burma and Siam are instances of a second type. A live giraffe was received at the menagerie of Schonbrunn as early as 1828.

The Paris establishment is regarded as the earliest entitled to the designation "zoological gardens" in the modern sense of that term, which owes its origin, however, to the formation of the menagerie in the Regents' park. Of German establishments of this sort the one at Berlin is the earliest.

American zoos, notable among which is New York and Chicago, are among the completest in the world.—Exchange.

Roman House Heaters.

The methods used by the Romans for warming their houses were clever. In Rome itself artificial warmth may have been brought rarely into use, though the Italian winter requires fires at times, but when the Roman took up his abode abroad as the conqueror he certainly lived in chilly climates. In the country houses he built in England he had carefully devised heating arrangements, which are called hypocausts. These are flues running under the tessellated floors. Fires were lit outside of the house, and the hot air passed under the floors. To do this much required a knowledge of the builder's art, with the necessary precautions against fire. Remnants of these hypocausts are found today in England, built during the Roman occupation.

The Popular Song.

The definition of popularity as given by a salesman in a large music store is one that may be applied to other things besides songs.

"Is this a popular song?" asked a young woman, holding up a sheet of music brilliantly decorated in red and green.

"Well, no, miss," said the salesman, assuming a judicial air, "I can't say it is as yet. Of course lots of people are singing it, and everybody likes it, but nobody's got tired enough of it yet for it to be what you'd call a popular song, miss."

The Contrast.

A small negro boy was putting his head against the marble steps of the capitol. He would step back a few feet and then run toward the steps, striking them full force with his head.

"What on earth are you doing that for, boy?" asked a senator who came by. "Are you going to fight a goat?"

"Naw, sah, I's doin' it cause it feels so good when I don't."

The First Bull.

Charon, the boatman of the Styx, was thought by many to be of Irish blood, for invariably as he was casting off from the hither shore he would call out to his cargo of souls:

"Now, then, look alive!"

This was doubtless as near an approach to an Irish bull as the then state of civilization permitted.

Two Kinds of Foolhardiness.

Some of the men who laugh when a woman gets off a car backward would pull the muzzle of a loaded gun toward them when crawling through a fence.

REAL RHEUMATISM.

The Causes and Symptoms of Uric Acid In the Blood.

Rheumatism, so called, is probably as common as any ailment one ever hears of, and yet if one were to analyse carefully the average case of rheumatism the result would doubtless show that the disease was something very different indeed from the real thing. Almost everybody when suffering from a slight stiffness of a joint or a muscular soreness promptly makes a diagnosis of rheumatism when in reality the case is nothing more than what in technical language is known as lithaemia, sometimes called American gout.

The real disease of rheumatism is the result of an accumulation in the blood of imperfectly converted food, principally uric acid. This accumulation is due to intemperance in eating and drinking and insufficient active exercise.

Heredity in some cases seems to play an important part. In the great majority the symptoms follow a regular order, beginning with a feeling of fullness and discomfort after meals, indigestion, nausea and an unpleasant taste in the mouth, followed by throbbing headache, nervous irritability and vertigo, muscular pains which may be confined to one or more muscles or skip about them one to another. Lastly, and in most cases the most troublesome of all symptoms, is depression of spirits, the patient imagining that he has all sorts of ailments. Persons suffering from mental disorder as a result of this disease have been known to commit suicide. Fortunately these cases are not common, but it should be remembered that they are among the possibilities.—A Doctor in New York World.

STAGESTRUCK.

An Incident of the Boyhood Days of William McKinley.

One does not readily associate our martyred president, William McKinley, with an ambition to become an actor, but in a grouping of eminent personages who have conceived at one time or another in their lives a passion to tread the boards we find the subjoined account:

"It was while holding the humble position of clerk at a hat store in Cincinnati that Mr. McKinley became stagestruck and once confessed that he did not outgrow his desire to become an actor for many years afterward. This desire arose through witnessing the Shakespearean plays as presented by the great tragedian, Edwin Forrest, for whom Mr. McKinley conceived a great admiration.

"'Imagine my feelings,' the president said on one occasion when relating his boyish ambitions, 'when Forrest walked into our store one day to make a purchase. I rushed to the front in order to serve my ideal hero of the theater. The sale, however, was made by an older clerk, but I was given the privilege of pressing and stretching the hat. The great actor stood near me, observing my work, and the smile of appreciation which he gave me was one of the events of my youth.'"

Growth of Rocks.

Rocks do not grow in the sense that a plant grows. They may increase by accretion, and they may undergo chemical change. The old sea bed, being lifted up, becomes sandstone and limestone. The volcanic ash and lava strewn over the plains become tufa, hard enough for building stone. The pebbly shore of a river becomes conglomerate. The simple mineral does grow, however, when it takes a crystal form. The sparkling prism of quartz increases from an atom to a crystal as large as a forearm by a process of addition and assimilation, wonderfully slow but beautifully regular, exactly as crystals of ice form on the window pane.

Why Bulls Hate a Red Flag.

In the first place, says an English writer, red is a color to which cattle are unaccustomed, so that they may naturally be supposed to be startled by its very novelty. Scientists show the sensation of red to be the complement of that of green, being induced by exactly opposite affections of the retina. If the eyes of cattle are constructed on a similar principle to our own the continual contemplation of green, as in trees and herbage, must produce a state of retinal fatigue, predisposing a violent excitement of the retina immediately a red substance is presented to view.

Bismarck's Love of Authority.

At 9 p. m. we took tea with the king. I was seated opposite him when a footman came and whispered in my ear that Bismarck desired to see me. Great embarrassment! Puckler having told me I might leave the table, I did so. The king inquired what was the matter and permitted me to go. Bismarck had nothing of particular importance to tell me, and I suspect that he only wanted to show that he had the right to send for his employees even when they were with the king.

Strictly Business.

"The graspin'est man I ever knowed," said Uncle Jerry Peebles, "was an old chap named Snoopins. Somebody told him once that when he breathed he took in oxygen and gave out carbon. He spent a whole day tryin' to find out which of them two gases cost the most if you have to buy 'em. He wanted to know whether he was makin' or losin' money when he breathed."

THE ENGLISH SYSTEM.

Not a Hundred Persons Affected by a Change of Administration.

"All told, the government of England consists of only forty-six persons, and the transfer of political control from one party to another directly affects only these forty-six persons and a few great functionaries of state whose duties are purely ornamental," says A. Maurice Low in Appleton's. "In all not 100 persons are concerned by a change of administration. Postmasters, government employees of every class, from messengers to ambassadors and colonial administrators, are not disturbed by the transfer of power. Clearly no political party in England can count upon patronage as a political asset.

"The principle on which the parliamentary system of England is founded is the rule of the majority, and the majority elects to surrender its power to one man—the premier. The power of the majority is so strictly recognized that the rules of the house of commons deprive the minority of all power to initiate or shape legislation. When a majority of the electorate of the kingdom has sanctioned a policy represented by a political party that party is given free hand to put its policy into operation. In all legislatures the power of the majority is the control which it exercises to tax the people and spend their money. See, then, how absolute is the power of the prime minister in his command of the treasury."

LETTERS BY MESSENGER.

A Postal Law of Which You May Not Have Knowledge.

The statement made in an uptown club one evening lately that the law prohibits carrying an unstamped letter past a postoffice and delivering it caused much argument. Inquiry was made at the postoffice, where an official said that the question had been asked frequently. "You may send a letter by messenger anywhere, past as many postoffices as you please," said the official, "but you have no right to send your mail that way regularly or at stated periods. This is prohibited by the postal laws and regulations. Sections 1136 and 1137 were enacted to prevent the establishment of private mail routes, because the postoffice department is recognized as having the absolute monopoly of the transportation of letters and 'packets' or bundles of letters by regular trips and at stated periods on all post routes. As to open letters and circulars, they may be delivered by rival concerns, but the people who make the delivery of circulars a business have no right to deliver unstamped closed letters. The law shuts out the milkmen and the tradesmen, who travel regularly along established post roads, who would otherwise become rivals to the United States postoffice for the purpose of accommodating their customers."

An Anecdote of Shelley.

The poet Shelley tells an amusing story of the influence that language "hard to be understood" exercises on the vulgar mind. Walking near Covent Garden, London, he accidentally jostled against an Irish navvy, who, being in a quarrelsome mood, seemed inclined to attack the poet. A crowd of ragged sympathizers began to gather, when Shelley, calmly facing them, deliberately pronounced:

"I have put my hand into the hamper. I have looked on the sacred barley. I have eaten out of the drum. I have drunk and am well pleased. I have said 'Knox Ompax,' and it is finished."

The effect was magical. The astonished Irishman fell back. His friends began to question him. "What barley?" "Where's the hamper?" "What have you been drinking?" and Shelley walked away unmolested.

As Clean as a Whistle.

Any one who has witnessed the manufacture of a rustic whistle can be at no loss for the origin of the saying, "As clean as a whistle." A piece of young ash about four inches long and the thickness of a finger is hammered all over with the handle of a knife until the bark is disengaged from the wood and capable of being drawn off. A notch and a cut or two having been made in the stick, the cuticle is replaced, and the instrument is completed. When stripped of its covering the white wood, with its colorless sap, presents the very acme of cleanness.—London Answers.

Joseph Bonaparte.

Joseph Bonaparte fled to America after the hundred days and bought a home in Philadelphia, where he lived in winter, and a mansion in New Jersey, where he passed his summers. He was much liked in this country, but could not make up his mind to stay here, so returned to Europe, hoping to profit by the changes of government in France. He was always disappointed and found himself an unwelcome guest in every country save England. He finally secured permission to live in Italy and died in Florence in 1844.

Considerate.

Singleton—What have you in that package, old man? Wedderly—An ash receiver. It's a present for my wife. Singleton—What! You don't mean to tell me she smokes cigarettes? Wedderly—Oh, no, but if she has an ash receiver for me to put my cigar ashes in it will save her the trouble of sweeping them up. See?

There are some truths that are perceived less by the intellect than by the SILK OF THE SPIDER.

The Delicate Machinery That Spins the Liquid Threads.

The spider is able to secrete at least three colors of silk stuff—the white, which forms the web, and the enswathement of captives and the egg cocoon; the brown mass that fills the cocoon interior and the flossy yellow between that and the inside of the sac. The glands end in minute ducts which empty into spinning spools regularly arranged along the sides and upon the tips of the six spinnerets, or "spinning mammals," or "spinning fingers," which are placed just beneath the apex of the abdomen. The spinnerets are movable and can be flung wide apart or pushed closely together, and the spinning spools can be managed in the same way.

The silk glands are infolded in muscular tissue, pressure upon which, at the will of the spider, forces the liquid silk through the duct into the spool, whence it issues as a minute filament, since it hardens upon contact with the air. One thread as seen in a web may be made up of a number of the filaments and is formed by putting the tips of the spools together as the liquid jets are forced out of the ducts. When the spinnerets are joined and a number of the spools are emptied at once their contents merge, and the sheets or ribbons are formed which one sees in the enswathement of a captive or the making of Argiope's central shield. This delicate machinery the owner operates with utmost skill, bringing into play now one part and now another and again the whole with unfailing deftness and a mastery complete.—Dr. H. C. McCook in Harper's.

A QUEER HOUSE.

The Novel and Famous Fossil Bone Cabin In Wyoming.

"The queerest house in the world," said a zoologist, "is undoubtedly the famous bone cabin in Wyoming, near the Medicine Bow river. This cabin's foundations are built of fossil bones.

"Bones of dinosaurs—jaws of the diplodocus, teeth of the brontosaurus, knuckles of the ichthyosaurus, vertebrae of the camarasaurus, chunks of the barosaurus, the cetiasaurus, the brachiosaurus, the stegiosaurus, the ornitholestes or bird catching dinosaur—all entered into this wonderful cabin's foundations, making it the most curious and most costly edifice in America.

"This hut was built by a Mexican sheep herder who had happened by chance on the grandest extinct animal bed in the world. This was a plot about fifty yards square, wherein lay in rich profusion the bones of all the animals of the reptilian age. The heaviest and the lightest, the largest and the smallest, the most tranquil and the most ferocious, lay side by side.

"The place was evidently once a river bar, and the dead bodies that floated down the stream were here arrested to lie for hundreds of thousands of years till a sheep herder came along and, rooting among bones as big as bowlders, set about the building of the world's queerest cabin."

Grip Facts.

The grip is not simply a bad cold, and this fact is worth knowing. It resembles a cold in some respects, and colds are often wrongly diagnosed by the victims as grip. The grip is a malady which has laws of its own, both as to origin and progress after development. According to the doctors, it must run its course—"there is no special remedy that can directly destroy the infection, no drug that can kill the bacillus or neutralize its toxin." This also is worth knowing. The main thing is to nurse with care and give the system the best possible aid in its efforts to throw off the poison.

Not Thirsty.

Jane, the bright new maid, always anxious to please, had been intrusted with the care of a little aquarium, in which the goldfish had always thrived very well until Jane came on the scene. The first day she arrived she gave them fresh water, as instructed, and then left them to their own devices. But, alas, one morning the little fishes were found floating feebly on their backs. "Jane," called the anxious mistress, regarding her pets with concern, "have you given the fish any fresh water lately?" "No, ma'am. Bless their little hearts, they haven't drunk the water I gave them last month yet!"

A Normal Disadvantage.

"Why do reformers so often come to grief?"

"I have often asked the question," answered Senator Sorghum. "I think it must be because they take up politics as an incidental diversion instead of a regular business. It's the difference between the amateur and the professional."

Shopping Politeness.

"Never point, my dear," said the mother gently.

"But, mamma," objected the little girl, "suppose I don't know the name of the thing?"

"Then let the salesman show you all he has in stock until he comes to the article that is desired."

IT'S just about now that nearly every man has the Spring Suit question on his mind.

Many will come to us without any urging on our part.

Sometimes an old customer drops out; perhaps tries a high-priced tailor, but he comes back again and tells us frankly that he likes our clothing—likes the fit—the style—the fabric—the workmanship and our prices.

We have built up our reputation for selling the best of clothes by handling only the best productions of the World's Best Clothing Makers.

We are just entering on our tenth year's business in Belleville and can safely say that our showing for the coming season far excels our best previous effort.

Come see our handsome Spring Suits and learn how much suit goodness you can get here for

The Fire Drill.

BOARD OF EDUCATION SAW IT PERFORMED IN TWO SCHOOLS YESTERDAY AFTERNOON.

Yesterday afternoon, whilst the members of the Sites, Buildings and Repairs Committee of the Board of Education were visiting the various schools of the city to ascertain what necessary repairs were needed, two exhibitions of the fire drill were given by the children. They were at No. 2 school and Queen Victoria school. In both cases the time made was remarkably quick and the precision with which the children marched out was creditable to those who instructed them. At No. 2 school, although three of the rooms are situated upstairs, every scholar was out of the building and in line in 30 seconds after the alarm was given. In Queen Victoria school, which embraces a number of rooms, the scholars were all out in a few seconds over a minute. Those who had the privilege of witnessing the drill were much pleased with the result.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

SPORTING NOTES.

Fast ice for the match to-morrow night is now assured, and there is no doubt that Belleville hockey lovers will be treated to one of the best, if not the best, matches ever seen here. A party now in the city saw the Guelph team play this season, and he says they carry the goods in all their pockets. And they'll need to travel fast to hold the bunch which will line up under the local colors, for those three Cornwall men are stars in any company, and when McMillan and McCourt, on the wings, begin bouncing the Guelph men into the boards there will be quite a little excitement among the rooters. Who will ever forget that wonderful run "Reddy" McMillan made in the last game with Peterboro in this city? Hunter, in goal for Cornwall, is in the very first flight of goal-tenders, and McCourt, on the wing, is about as easy to stop as a runaway locomotive when he gets started.

This will be the probable line-up of the teams when they take the ice, though the local line-up may possibly be strengthened somewhat:

Belleville Goal.
Hunter
Pepper
Brown
Taylor
McCourt Burrows McMillan
Deyman Mercer Rochon
Green
Irving
Christman
Booth
Guelph Goal

Fyfe will be the Guelph spare man.

It will be seen that three of the old Red and White boys will line up under Belleville's colors, namely, Burrows, Brown and McMillan. Taylor played with Perth in senior O.H.A hockey. Pepper's showing this season needs no comment. It is not hard to see that the local team will be a strong bunch. Go and cheer them along.

A great scheme is outlined in the following despatch from Ottawa: "As a result of the unexpected defeat of Ottawa by the Wanderers Saturday night, there is reason to believe, on information obtained from inside sources, the whole Ottawa team will be transferred to the colors of the Ottawa Victorias, and an effort made to land the Federal league championship, and a challenge sent in for the Stanley Cup. By winning every one of it's three games to come, Victorias will be even with Montagnards for the Federal league championship."

A correspondent asks: "If a man plays in an exhibition game of any sport with professionals, and does not receive any money, directly or indirectly, for so playing, is he professionalized?"

Ans — Not by the standard set up by the C.A.A.U., as witness the fact that amateurs and pros. play together in the E. C. H. A. and C. L. A., and the amateurs remain in good standing. But the O.H.A. does not allow amateurs to mix with pros. at all. If an O.H.A. player plays on a team with a professional, knowingly, or against a team which has a professional, knowingly, he comes under the ban, and, in the opinion of that body, is no longer an amateur.

The Guelph pros. beat Berlin 6-5 last night, on the latter's own ice.

The junior O.H.A. finals will take place as follows:

Thursday, March 7 — Lindsay at Stratford. Referee—Whitehead.

Monday, March 11 — Stratford at Lindsay. Referee—Whitehead.

The original dates set for the intermediate finals have been changed to the following:

Friday, March 8 — Collingwood at Berlin. Referee—Whitehead.

Monday, March 11 — Berlin at Collingwood. Referee—Hancock.

The Wanderers have formally entered a challenge for the Stanley Cup. They have protested against any but bona fide members of the team which will defend the trophy in the West playing in the series. This is to cover such a case as arose when Kenora came East with Ross, of in the event of Brandon winning they might pick up Tom Phillips or some other good man out there.

The latest story from the Montreal pipe works, says the Globe, is that the Shamrocks are so eager to beat the Wanderers that they have wired to Manager McSwigan of Pittsburg for the use of his team in to-night's game in Montreal. As Pittsburg is playing Houghton in Pittsburg to-morrow night it is easy to see where the dreamer is wrong.

The Ottawa Victorias may hire the Ottawas to represent them in the remainder of the Federal League series in the hope of wresting the championship of that estimable organization from the Montagnards, but the latter can easily call that bluff. They can put Montagnard sweaters on the Wanderers and then the Ottawas would take to the woods.—Globe.

Dr. Gilbert, of this city, formerly of Picton, and in his time the bright particular star of the Varsity hockey team, will referee the match to-morrow night.

Fish and Game.

SPORTSMEN INTERVIEW THE GOVERNMENT REGARDING THE NEW BILL.

Toronto, March 6. — Representatives of the Ontario Fish and Game Protective Association waited on the Government yesterday afternoon and presented a memorial, based on resolutions passed at their last annual meeting. They were received by Hon. Mr. Whitney, the Prime Minister; Hon. Messrs. Reaume, Monteith, Hendrie, and Willoughby. Delegations were present from Toronto, Hamilton, Guelph, Wiarton, Windsor, Belleville, Sturgeon Point, Campbellford, Dunnville, Orillia, Brantford, Woodstock, London, and Bobcaygeon. The Toronto Hotelkeepers' Association was also represented. They approved of the new fish and game legislation, but objected to the addition of further varieties of game to the list whose sale is prohibited in hotels during close seasons.

Among the speakers were: Messrs. McConnell, Belleville; Chittick, London; F. W. Wood, Campbellford, and Thos. Reid, Windsor. They approved of the new legislation introduced by Hon. Dr. Reaume, and emphasized the necessity for protecting the food fisheries of the Great Lakes. They asked that the bill be referred to a special committee, before which parties interested might be heard.

Hon. Dr. Reaume, in his reply, conveyed the information that the measure would be submitted to the Standing Committee on Fish and Game. There the whole question could be discussed.

Paving Front Street

Belleville, March 5, 1907.

To The Editor of The Intelligencer:

Dear Sir, — I note in your valuable paper from time to time very good suggestions re paving Front-st. I have also read your reports of the Council and Board of Trade meeting talks on the same subject. For the benefit of the taxpayer as well as our representative in the Council, I offer a few suggestions so that when the proper time comes to go into the large expenditure, we would be able to do so from (or by) the knowledge gained by those who have expended large sums on such work." I have noticed during 1906 three different kinds of pavements have been built in Regina, St. Boniface and Ottawa, namely, asphalt—which costs, I am told $3.25, Bitulithic $2.25 and tar macadam $1.25 per square yard. The foundation of these pavements are about the same as put down under the granolithic walks in our city, therefore it would necessitate the removal of about 1 1-2 to 2 feet in depth of the entire Front-st. Tar, gravel and sand being plentiful in this vicinity the price would be somewhat reduced. I note asphalt is used on principal streets where heavy traffic is continually moving, and by some considered the best. Bitulithic is now being introduced for business streets also. The tar macadam is used on side and residential streets, and by many thought to be the coming pavement for general use. All three can now be seen in Ottawa. The Mayor, chairman of Public Works and City Engineer (adding any others who the Council deem advisable); these gentlemen could arrange to meet Sir Mackenzie Bowell, E. G. Porter, M.P., and W. B. Northrup, M.P., all citizens of Belleville, who, with the gentlemen who are now in Ottawa, and no doubt will be willing to inspect the different pavements and report (accordingly) to the Council, who then will be in a position to select the pavement most suitable for Belleville.

When a large expenditure is at stake it is well to "be sure you are right, then go ahead." Thanking you in advance for your valuable space.

I am, dear sir,
Yours faithfully.
"A CITIZEN."

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

THE BRIDGE ST. CONCERT.

The inclement weather doubtless kept many away from the sacred concert given by the Bridge St. Church choir last night, assisted by Mrs. Allen, Soprano; Miss Gertrude Price, contralto; Mr. H. Ruthven McDonald, baritone; Mr. Frank Bemrose, tenor; Miss Laura LaVoie and Prof. Hunt, organ soloists, and Miss Joy Higgs, violin. The attendance was rather small, and those who stayed away missed something extra good in the way of a sacred concert, a class of entertainment, by the way, which seems to have palled somewhat on the taste of Belleville music-lovers. Time was when such a programme, on which figured two visiting soloists, one of them of wide reputation, would have filled the big church.

However, as remarked before, the concert was extra good, and the programme had many other things to commend it besides its length.

Prof. Hunt and Miss Lavoie, the organ soloists, played quite up to their well-known form, the latter's first number, "Slavonic Cradle Song," being especially dainty and sweet.

Miss Joy Higgs played the "Angel's Serenade," with muted strings, in a pleasing way.

The choir was in fine form, and sang two numbers, "With Sheathed Swords," from "Naaman," and a chorus from "Gallia," in good style. The attack, balance and tone were quite up to the choir's traditions, but some of the vim and dash of former occasions seemed to be lacking. However, the choir quite upheld its reputation as a fine musical organization.

Mrs. Allen, soprano, was in splendid voice, and has hardly ever appeared to greater advantage. She sang "Show Me Thy Ways," a number in bravura style, almost, and surprised even those who have heard her for years by the remarkable range and qualities of her voice. Without attempting to draw invidious comparisons, the opinion may fairly be risked that nothing on last night's programme exceeded in interest and beauty Mrs. Allen's solo.

Mr. H. Ruthven McDonald is too well known here to require comment. He was quite in his best form last night, and sang three solos, to the delight of those who heard him. In the recitative and air from "The Creation," "And God Said," etc., Mr. McDonald was probably at his best. He sang with deep reverence and impressive sympathy, the wonderful descriptive accompaniment being played in a most masterly way by Prof. Hunt. Mr. McDonald's last number, "He is There," was rendered in an ideal way.

Mr. Frank Bemrose, tenor, made an excellent impression. He showed fine method, a lack of all meretricious effects and a voice of more than fair quality. His best number was probably "The Star of Eternity," by Lane, which was given with deep sympathy, and marked the singer as a vocalist of much more than ordinary calibre. Mr. Bemrose should be a welcome visitor to Belleville in the future.

In the duet with Mr. Bemrose, "My Faith Looks Up to Thee," Miss Gertrude Price sang in a pleasing and sympathetic way. It was a beautiful number, as was also the duet by Messrs. Bemrose and McDonald, "It is of the Lord's Great Mercies."

Very harmonious and delightful, indeed, was the quartette by Mrs. Allen and Miss Price, Messrs. McDonald and Bemrose, "Rock of Ages," sung to the setting of Dudley Buck. There was perfect balance, and the effect was to leave an indelible impression in the memory of more than one listener.

Taken altogether, the concert was a pronounced and artistic success, and deserved double the patronage it received.

Prof. Hunt and Miss Lavoie, the accompanists, played in a way which left nothing to be desired.

"UNCLE JOSH SPRUCEBY."

An intense heart story is unfolded in the charming comedy-drama "Uncle Josh Spruceby," which comes to the Carman on Friday night. The plot of the play is taken from scenes of every day life. A country maiden who has a boarding school education meets the tempter, in the guise of a polished city chap, who turns out later to be a confidence man and who persuades the girl that the comfortable, if homely, Vermont home is too dull for her. She is induced to elope to the city. "Uncle Josh" goes to the city to search for his lost "Nancy" and meets many adventures there. The comedy is furnished by Hans Von Bottlemeyer, the "just over Dutchman," and "Sally Spruceby," who has no use for city folks. The play is well staged and acted by a company of capable people.

ALLEGED INFRACTION OF A BY-LAW.

His Worship Mayor Sulman occupied the Police Magistrate's Bench this morning, owing to the fact that the newly-appointed Magistrate, Mr. Masson, has not yet been sworn in. There was a case against a Front street merchant who was charged with a breach of By-law No. 420, relative to obstructing the sidewalk with merchandise. It was alleged that the accused allowed a large packing case to remain upon the walk, after being notified to remove the same. The case, after being investigated, was dismissed. Mr. Mikel appeared on behalf of the city and Mr. Carnew for the defendant.

BRITISH NAVAL ESTIMATES.

Great Addition to Strength of Battleships in Number and Size.

London, March 6.—In introducing the navy estimates in the House of Commons yesterday, the Parliamentary Secretary of the Admiralty, Mr. Robertson, said the Admiralty believed the two-power standard would be adequately maintained by the proposed program of construction.

During the past ten years Great Britain had added 1,132,000 tons to her navy, while Russia, France and Germany together had added only 1,103,180 tons.

The British navy was the cheapest, costing $445 per ton. That of France cost $620, Russia $465, and Germany $485. Two years hence Great Britain will have completed six new battleships, including three of the Dreadnought class and three armored cruisers of the Invincible class, while neither France nor Germany would have a single ship of those types completed. The home fleet was a logical development of its concentration in home waters and furnished additional security against the remote risk of invasion. The Channel fleet was stronger than it was in 1905.

Wants U. S. to Cut Duty.

London, March 6.—In the House of Commons yesterday, Mitchell-Thomson (Conservative) suggested that Foreign Secretary Grey utilize the most favored nation clause of the Anglo-American treaties with the view of securing the admission of British goods into the United States on the same terms as Cuban goods.

The Secretary, however, said he did not believe any benefit would result on such representations at the present moment, owing to the differences shown to exist in the views of the two countries by exchanges of communications between the late (Balfour) Government and the Government of the United States on this subject.

Not Expedient.

London, March 6.—(C. A. P.)—The Premier replying to Henniker Heaton, in Commons, said it is not possible or expedient to accede to the suggestion that the Prime Ministers of the Colonies should address the House.

The Premier has accepted the invitation of the National Liberal Club to the banquet of Colonial Premiers.

GENERAL BOOTH'S SCHEMES.

$500,000 to Found Colony In England —Another In Rhodesia.

New York, March 6.—General William Booth, the aged leader of the Salvation Army, arrived in this city yesterday from London, and will remain two days as the guest of his daughter, Commander Eva Booth.

The General shows remarkable vigor for a man who on April 10th will celebrate the 78th anniversary of his birth.

"I have three great schemes on hand," he declared.

"First, I hope to complete my experiment of putting the people in possession of small land holdings—say, of five or six acres near market towns—where they can support themselves. I have one tract near Colchester, England, and have been given $500,000 for the work there.

"Next I have a great colonization scheme with Rhodesia, South Africa, as the location. We shall have a new world in the centre of South Africa.

"My third scheme is to create two institutions, one in London and the other in New York, to teach suitable persons the proper way to deal with the vices, sins, misfortunes and miseries of mankind generally."

Woman Killed at Crossing.

Pembroke, March 6.—Mrs. Moore of Point Alexander was killed and Abraham Thrasher of Beachburg had an arm broken yesterday evening, when the Winnipeg train, westbound, ran into Thrasher's team at a crossing near this place. The horses were killed and the cutter was smashed.

Nine Killed In Two Explosions.

El Paso, Texas, March 6.—Two explosions in the rock quarry of the Chihuahua and the Pacific Railroad at Sandoval, Chihuahua, Monday, killed nine men and seriously injured nine others.

CALLS IT REVOLUTION

To Demand That Federal Laws Be Duly Enforced.

Hon. Mr. Aylesworth Says This Could Not Be Done Without Amending Constitution—The Right and Privilege of Provinces—Not Duty of Minister of Justice to Enforce Laws.

Ottawa, March 6.—W. F. Maclean (South York) brought to the attention of the House yesterday the anomaly presented by the present Government in pressing for legislation and at the same time proclaiming that it has no power to enforce the acts of Parliament.

Upon motion to go into Committee of Ways and Means, he offered the following amendment:

"Resolved, that in the opinion of this House the Government of the day is responsible for the due enforcement of all federal laws; and that if any further legislation is necessary to secure such due enforcement, and the punishment of violations thereof, it is the duty of the Government to forthwith introduce such legislation."

The issues involved in this resolution, said Mr. Maclean, went to the very heart and life of our Government. If Parliament was unable to compel obedience to the laws it passed it had ceased to be a Parliament.

Mr. Aylesworth opined that the law could not be enforced without amending the constitution. No Canadian Government, he said, had ever attempted it. To enforce Federal law was the right and privilege of the various provinces. They must decide upon the various statutes and as to the propriety of their enforcement. It was not the duty of the Minister of Justice to enforce the laws. If any one wished a Federal law enforced, let him apply to the Attorney-General of his province. To introduce any other system would be unpatriotic. Were we to set ourselves up as wiser than the fathers of Confederation.

A Step Towards Revolution.

For the Federal Government to enforce criminal statutes would be, said Mr. Aylesworth, "a step towards revolution." He admitted that in certain cases Parliament had charged the Attorney-General with enforcing the law. It had the power to do so, but unless such an order was given him, the Attorney-General should not butt in and prosecute anybody. For him to do so would be an absurd anamoly. He must certainly oppose Mr. Maclean's amendment as uncalled for and bordering upon revolution.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier thought that this suggestion was unconstitutional. Apart from this, criminal jurisdiction was a delicate matter, some laws were not sustained by the public opinion of a certain province. Would it be wise for the Dominion to enforce a law like that?

MADE IT A CRIME.

Railway Committee Throws Out Bill to Legalize Sale of Ticket.

Ottawa, March 6.—A minority of the Railway Committee yesterday morning threw out the Maclean bill to legalize the sale of unused portions of railway tickets.

Only forty-two members recorded their names on the vote, whereas the full strength of the committee is something like a score short of the entire Commons membership. A strong contingent of Quebec Liberals were on hand with Louis Lavergne, the French Liberal whip.

The Minister of Railways was one of the chief opponents of the bill.

A strong force of railway lawyers and agents stood guard over the committee, and there was a free distribution of pamphlets setting forth the case of the railways.

RIOTING AFTER THE DOUMA.

Great Demonstration When Socialist Appeared—Police Rode Down Crowd.

St. Petersburg, March 5.—After the adjournment of the Lower House of Parliament yesterday a great demonstration was organized to cheer the Socialist Deputies. Revolutionary speeches were made and red flags were displayed in the crowds, which had by that time swelled to about 40,000 persons, who packed all the streets for blocks around the Tauride Palace.

Some of the demonstrators began to pelt the police with snowballs, and ultimately the police broke up the demonstration, mounted policemen riding down the crowds and using their whips right and life. Many persons were beaten, but no one was seriously injured.

MEAFORD BLOCK BURNED.

Three Families Had Barely Time to Escape With Their Lives.

Meaford, March 6.—Fire broke out about one o'clock yesterday morning in J. Secord's restaurant in the Trout block and spread to the stores of J. D. Fligg, dry goods, and Alfred Helstrop, furniture dealer and undertaker.

The block was completely destroyed, while Helstrop's building was gutted, part of the stock being saved. E. Pomfrey, Joseph Baker and Mrs. Dealva Sutherland and their families, who occupied apartments in the block, had barely time to escape with their lives.

Ran Into Open Switch.

Canfield Junction, March 6.—Wabash express No. 8 (Detroit to Buffalo) ran into an open switch here last night. The engine, tender and two cars of horses were upset in the ditch. The fireman was injured.

The train from Toronto was on an adjoining track. Had the Wabash locomotive upset toward it, many passengers would have been injured.

Suffered Scalp Wound In Derailment of Fast Train From Chicago.

Tivoli, N.Y., March 6.—The limited fast mail train from Chicago for New York, was partially derailed while passing through Tivoli, at 5.40 a.m. yesterday, and ten persons were injured, all but one sustaining only slight bruises. B. Brandon, cook of the dining car, suffered a broken leg, and three passengers and six other employes of the Pullman cars suffered scalp wounds and minor bruises.

Among the injured was B. R. Hebburg, Picton, Ont., scalp wound.

The train left Chicago at 8 a.m. yesday, and was due in New York at 8.15 a.m yesterday. It consisted of a baggage car, four sleeping cars, and a dining car. At a point 800 feet south of the Tivoli station, while passing over an interlocking switch on a straight track the three rear cars, two sleepers and the dining car, were derailed. The rest of the train remained on the tracks.

The derailed cars crashed into a string of freight cars standing on a siding between the southbound track and the Hudson River, along which the track runs at that point.

The freight cars were overturned, but the passenger cars remained upright. Only the presence of the freight cars prevented the passenger cars from going over the embankment into the river, and possible loss of life.

The injured passengers and porters were taken to Hoffman's Hotel, in Tivoli, where their injuries were treated. They were then placed on another train and proceeded to New York.

It is believed either that the cars were derailed by a switch or that a journal was broken.

Faith Healers Fight Bill.

Quebec, March 6.—A deputation of osteopathists and Christian Scientists, mostly from Montreal, protested yesterday against the clause in the bill of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, which, if adopted, would prohibit them practicing their methods of cure.

M. C. R. Men Strike.

Windsor, March 6.—One hundred men, employed at the Michigan Central tunnel, went on strike yesterday. They were asked to change from an eight-hour shift to a ten-hour shift, with the same pay.

Paris, March 6.—King Edward went to Biarritz yesterday by a special train.

Southampton Man Missing.

Windsor, March 6.—Chief of Police Wills has been asked to make a search for W. C. Williams of Southampton, who is believed by his friends to have met with foul play either in Detroit or near there. He left home four months ago with $700 and has not returned.

It is asserted that some time after leaving he drew on his bank from Detroit for more funds.

London, March 6.—The Prince of Wales, who held the rank of vice-admiral, has been promoted to a full admiralty.

Food Poisons.

90 PER CENT. OF ALL DISEASES THE RESULT OF UNDIGESTED PUTREFYING FOODS.

Men of affairs, women of society and children with active brains are too often sedentary in their habits, giving little time to exercise. To this evil is added that of high and irregular living—as a result, the stomach cannot stand the demands made upon it. The abused and overtaxed stomach does not properly do the work of digestion, food taken in ferments and the poison permeates the whole system. The body loses in weight and becomes a prey for the attack of whatever disease it may encounter.

Did it ever occur to you how busy that stomach of yours is? It only holds three pints, but in one year you force it to take in 2,400 pounds of material, digest it and prepare it for assimilation into the blood. No wonder it rebels when overworked. We crowd it with steaks and pastry, irritate its juices with spices and acids, and expect the stomach to do its work It can't do it.

All over the inner layer of the stomach are glands which secrete the juices necessary to digestion. The entrance of food into the stomach is the signal for these glands to do their work. The more the food, and the more indigestible, the greater the demand upon them and upon the muscles of the wall adjoining.

Think of the tons of high-seasoned game, sweetmeats and appetizers crammed into this little four-ounce mill, and then wonder, if you will, why you are dizzy or nauseated or constipated. Don't blame your stomach or curse your fate that you should be born so unfortunate. Blame yourself and apply the remedy.

First, get a small package of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, taking one after each meal and at bed time. They are not a medicine, but a digestive. Your stomach is worn out and needs help, not medicine. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will do the work that the stomach fails to do. There's enough power in one grain of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets to digest 3,000 grains of ordinary food, so you needn't fear that anything you eat will remain in your stomach undigested.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will rout the poison because they remove the cause—food fermentation. They are nature's own cure for dyspepsia. The host of troubles dyspepsia is father of cannot be numbered, for a healthy stomach is the source of all health.

Seize your opportunity before worse conditions confront you. Send to-day for a free trial package of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. They will bring your stomach relief. F. A. Stuart Co., 83 Stuart Bldg., Marshall

EVIDENCE BORES THAW

Paid No Attention to the Cross-Examination.

Prisoner Takes No Interest In Proceedings — Dr. Wagner Further Cross-Examined—Thaw's Mother to Be Called Next—Defence Will Take Chances With Jury Rather Than Lunacy Commission.

New York, March 6.—The prospect that Mrs. Wm. Thaw, the white-haired mother of the defendant, might be a witness yesterday at the trial of Harry K. Thaw, for the murder of Stanford White, apparently had but little effect in reviving the interest of the curious, for the court-room showed many empty benches when Mr. Justice Fitzgerald took his place.

Dr. Charles G. Wagner, superintendent of the State Hospital for the Insane at Binghamton, N. Y., was immediately recalled to the stand and his cross-examination resumed by District Attorney Jerome.

The prosecution began by reading the latter part of Dr. Wagner's testimony of Monday regarding the characteristics of the brain storms so as to take up the line of questioning where it was left off.

The witness Monday referred Mr. Jerome to an instance of brain storm cited in one of the medical authorities. Yesterday the prosecutor asked if the alienist knew of any reported cases of brain storm.

Dr. Wagner said he could not recall any off-hand.

Thaw Takes No Interest.

Thaw brought his customary batch of letters into court, and after a brief whispered conversation with his counsel, proceeded to read them. He then took a large pad out of one of his big brown paper envelopes, secured pen and ink, and began to write a letter. He was decidedly the least interested spectator in the room.

Dr. Wagner's definition of the various forms of insanity apparently held no interest whatever for the man on trial for his life.

Take Chances With Jury.

Mr. Delmas made few objections to Mr. Jerome's questions to Dr. Wagner Monday, but he will resist strenuously any attempt to show that Thaw is now insane, the defence preferring to take their chances with the jury rather than with a lunacy commission.

A New Point Raised.

Another point that is being discussed is the legal standing of the marriage between Thaw and Evelyn Nesbit. Both Dr. Evans and Dr. Wagner have testified that they believed Thaw was of unsound mind when he signed the will and codicil on the night of April 4, 1905. This was the day of the marriage. If Thaw was insane at that time, he was, under the law of Pennsylvania, incompetent to enter into a contract. Marriage is under the law a contract, and if he was insane at the time his marriage would be actually void under the law.

CANFIELD POISON CASE.

Mrs. Perkins Denies She Poisoned Her Husband and Expects Acquittal.

Cayuga, March 6.—With two score of witnesses, many of whom will weave a net of circumstantial evidence around Mrs. Mattie Perkins, whose hearing for the murder of her husband opens here this afternoon at 1.30 o'clock, the crown authorities have left no stone unturned to ferret out the mystery surrounding the death of Henry Perkins, the Canfield carpenter.

Witnesses are here from Canfield, Welland, Hamilton, Dunnville and rural postoffices, besides citizens who will be called to testify.

Doctors Bauer and Edgar of Hamilton, the strychnine specialists, will be called early in the investigation.

Magistrate Cline of Cayuga will have as an associate on the bench Dr. Harrison of Selkirk, who made the postmortem examination and was an important witness in the trial of Olive Sternaman for the murder of her husband ten years ago. Twenty-four witnesses will be called.

Mrs. Perkins is taking her imprisonment with remarkable self possession, her attitude when interviewed at the jail last night being one of extreme indifference.

"All I can say," she said, "is that I am innocent. I deny everything these people have charged me with and I know all will come right.

"My husband thought the world of me.

"I never saw strychnine; never used strychnine; never had anything to do with strychnine."

The Cayuga Murder Case.

Mrs. Perkins Faces Charge Of Killing Her Husband.

How Evidence Has Been Obtained--Witnesses Admit That Crown Attorney and Detective Asked Them to Give Testimony Which Seems Against the Accused Woman--Deathbed Scenes on Christmas Day.

Cayuga, March 7.—At the preliminary hearing of Mrs. Mattie Perkins for the alleged murder of her husband, E. F. B. Johnston, K.C., yesterday, forced Henry Wilkinson of Canfield, a witness, to admit that Crown Attorney Murphy and Detective Greer had asked him to say that he had seen Thomas MacDonald leaving the Perkins home "dozens of times."

The witness said his testimony to the effect that he had seen MacDonald leave the house "half a dozen times, staying in one instance until 9 o'clock," was voluntary evidence. Then he said he had only heard this statement.

"That's a slender thread to hang a woman on," was Mr. Johnston's comment, and a general feeling of relief was evident in the crowded courtroom.

Mrs. John MacDonald testified that Detective Greer urged her "to own up to things that were not true, but I knew nothing wrong about Thomas."

Startling Facts Promised.

It was announced that startling facts would come out, and that neither I. A. MacDonald nor any member of the Curry family would be called.

That the case will go to a jury seems to be assured by the appointment of George T. Blackstock of Toronto as crown counsel to conduct the trial at the assizes on April 16.

The prisoner entered on the arm of her sister, Mrs. Romain Hislop, wearing a black hat with a large feather and a heavy veil, a long black coat and a pair of gold rimmed spectacles. She looked to be forty-five years of age. The strain is telling on her, despite the matter of fact way in which she has taken events since her arrest three weeks ago.

Tells of Perkins' Visit.

John S. Darragh of Canfield, lessee of the Perkins farm, was the first witness. He told how Perkins visited the farm on Sunday morning, Dec. 23, suffering severely. He admitted he was half asleep when Perkins arrived. He could not remember the exact words Perkins used, although he testified at the inquest that Perkins had said he did not feel safe.

Louis Mehlenbacher, the Canfield hotelkeeper, who was called to Perkins' bedside the day he died, testified that for seven years he had not known "two married people to get on better than Henry and Millie Perkins." He said Perkins wrote the telegram to William Spencer at Welland and instructed his wife to send it at once.

Henry Wilkinson said he had seen Thomas Macdonald enter the Perkins' home during the absence of Perkins half a dozen times between September and December and always at six o'clock.

Perkins Expected Death.

Mrs. John MacDonald stated she knew of Perkin's sickness on the Sunday prior to his death, but was not sure whether the prisoner had told her.

She told of the conversation with Henry Perkins at 7 o'clock on Christmas morning, three hours before he died.

Mrs. Perkins had left the room for a bottle of medicine and Perkins told her he would not get better.

The medicine was not given, Perkins having been attacked by another spell.

After that, continued the witness, "Perkins asked me to take hold of his hands and asked his wife to raise the window. She did so and went over to the bed, put her arms around him and kissed him."

"Did she speak to you as to the rights of Henry's relatives in case Henry died without a will?"

"Not that I remember of."

Mrs. MacDonald said that the relations between husband and wife were most affectionate.

Dr. Ellis of Toronto, provincial analysist, testified he had found strychnine in the vital organs, but that death had not necessarily been the result.

Ottawa, March 7.—Judge Gunn of Orillia is stated to be the new junior judge of Carleton in succession to the late Judge O'Meara.

DEFEND CIVIL SERVANTS.

Vote Down Resolution As to Sacrificing Public Interest.

Ottawa, March 7.—Hon. Frank Oliver, characterized the debate this afternoon as a "petty scandal, pettily presented," but the Government was compelled to vote down a resolution declaring that public officers should not sacrifice the public interest to private gain.

The facts which occasioned the debate came out through a law suit brought by three Americans against Smith, Winnipeg immigration officer and A. W. Pritchard.

The defendants were found to have been guilty of fraud in contracting to sell and convey all the lands contained in a certain tract, and then hold out some of the best land.

The debate was commenced by Mr. Northrup (East Hastings) who read from testimony to show that Smith availed himself of his knowledge as commissioner to personally invest in lands. Mr. Northrup submitted that Smith should be removed.

Mr. Boyce (W. Algoma) thought it remarkable that the Minister of the Interior should sit dumb when serious charges were made against a prominent officer in his department. He offered an amendment that the Government should not continue in office any public servant, who, "in violation of his duty, uses his public position to advance his private interests."

R. L. Borden said that the Minister had not answer the charges, but Sir Wilfrid Laurier could see nothing in them. Smith was, of course, a salaried officer, but that would not prevent him from making an investigation when opportunity offered.

Mr. Boyce's amendment was lost, yeas 54, nays 94, a party vote.

Botha's Chinese Policy.

London, March 7.—(C. A. P.)—Several papers announce Botha has accepted the invitation to the Colonial Conference.

The Standard says the Cabinet is credited in Johannesburg with a desire to persuade Botha to carry out their policy regarding Chinese labor, in order to save the face of the Radicals in the eyes of their constituents.

TIMELY TOPICS.

The plans for the new drill shed have arrived in the city, which would appear to show that there may be something doing in the matter of building before long. We must confess to a sense of disappointment on learning that it is the intention of the Militia Department to give Belleville only a stone-faced brick building. Surely, with the record this city and district has, it is as much entitled to a stone building as some other places without half the claims or needs that Belleville has. However, it is gratifying to note that, apparently, the Government is at last going to take some action in the matter, and that the gallant Fifteenth may soon have a regimental home once more.

The Board of Trade certainly tackled a live question last night when they discussed the right of way of the railways which, we are told propose entering the city down by Queen Victoria park. There is no doubt at all that it would be a great loss to the average citizen were our beautiful park spoiled. It is all very well to say that this is a utilitarian age, and that the greatest good to the greatest number is the correct principle to work on, but there are under-lying rights in all questions which demand recognition.

The crux of this matter appears to us to be this: Does Belleville want the new railways as badly as some people appear to think? That question may safely be answered in the affirmative. Belleville needs the new railways, and needs them badly. The next question is: Can those who are opposing the proposed route of the railways suggest another which will be as convenient and suitable as the one the surveyors have picked out? If they cannot, then would it not be unwise to do anything which might block the roads' coming to Belleville? If an alternative route can be suggested, which would suit the railways and city alike, all well and good, but so far we have not heard of any.

The case which made Belleville famous still bobs up occasionally in Parliament, as witness the following from a Toronto paper: Mr. Aylesworth had declared that the matter of prosecution for certain offences rested with the provinces. This system he stood by. It had been deliberately adopted by the fathers of Confederation, with the United States' example before them. The Minister saw no object in any change. The powers had been left to the provinces "deliberately and designedly."

E. Guss Porter bethought him of case once in the city of Belleville, in the county of Hastings. There had been a bogus ballot box conspiracy. He had sought the activity of the Federal Department of Justice, in vain; he had gone to the county judge, in vain. He mentioned it.

The South York member recalled the presence of George F. Shepley, K.C., in Belleville. Mr. Porter understood that Mr. Shepley had been there "to watch" the case for the Dominion Government.

"Watchman," quoth the South York member.

SOME YANKEE TOLERANCE.

(New York American.)

We tolerate Canada as a British colony, and English ownership of islands in our waters, for the double reason that custom inures us to the anachronism, and that we suffer no present danger from it. But we learned while the civil war was being fought how perilous a matter it is, this British propinquity. The neutrality of England made the Bahama islands in reality hostile territory—a base of supplies for the Confederacy. There the blockade runners found shelter and gave aid and comfort to the south. Had we not been very tired of fighting after Lee surrendered, the United States would surely have taken the Bahamas. And it would have been good policy to do it, too, along with the other islands under British rule. It will be done some day, of course, in obedience to the demand of national security. And it may become expedient to annex Canada also. At the least, she will be required to cease being British and foreign, and made to sit up for herself in self-respecting American fashion.

And worse things could happen to England than to lose her distant possessions and become another peace-loving, harmless Holland, which is to be her fate, unless she shall grow in democratic sanity, get rid of her mediaeval flummery in the way of throne and nobility, and seek admission to the American union as a state.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When the tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

ANOTHER WONDER OF SCIENCE.

Biology Has Proved that Dandruff is Caused by a Germ.

Science is doing wonders these days in medicine as well as in mechanics. Since Adam lived, the human race has been troubled with dandruff, for which no hair preparation has heretofore proved a successful cure until Newbro's Herpicide was put on the market. It is a scientific preparation that kills the germ that makes dandruff or scurf by digging into the scalp to get at the root of the hair, where it saps the vitality; causing itching scalp, falling hair, and finally baldness. Without dandruff hair must grow luxuriantly. It is the only destroyer of dandruff. Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. The Fight Against Tuberculosis.

The disciples of Sir Almroth Wright affirm that the many disappointments in the use of serum in the treatment of tuberculosis is not the fault of the serum, so much as the failure to use it at the opportune moment, and it is this opportune moment which Dr. Wright set out to discover, and in this, it is said, he has succeeded. Of course, there are sera which under no circumstances would be a specific therapy for tuberculosis, but once having obtained the real antagonism of the tubercle bacillus, its use at the proper time is then a "sine qua non." Petruschky, for example, attempted to cure lupus by injections of streptococci, but only harm came from such a practice, for it was established later that the streptococcus is one of the most injurious of the mixed infections in tuberculosis, and because Portucatis believed that tuberculosis and syphilis were antagonistic, one to the other, he made, it is said, the fatal error of inoculating the tuberculosis patient with syphilis.

The alternating success and failure of such great man as Paquin (1895), with horse serum; Viquerat (1896), with mule serum; Acolair (1896), with fowl serum; Nieman (1896), with goat serum; De Schweinitz (1897), with cow serum; Fisch, with his anti-phthysic serum, and Patterson (1899), with fowl serum, or of Marmoree or Maragliano, may yet find its explanation in the injection taking place at the wrong time. The right time is said to be when, in its ebb and flow, the resisting power of the human blood is increasing. At that time the leucocytes, or white corpuscles, more readily digest the bacteria which the human serum gather for the former to devour. The feast which at such times the white corpuscles then enjoy gives to the treatment the name by which this treatment is now known to science. No name is given to the feast when the fight ends the other way, and when it often does, then the undertaker is called in.

Dr. Rutherford, of Stratford, who recently spent much time in Dr. Wright's clinic, is reported to have said that the right time for the opsonic treatment is one day, and only one day, out of ten. It follows, then, that without the aid of the opsonic index, the physician obviously gambles on the chance of being right, and of course ten to one he is wrong. With an advantage then of ten to one the "bug" "calls the game." He has had it pretty much his own way heretofore, killing one in seven, as Bishop Williams put it in Cronyn Hall a few nights ago. The new method is one by which the white corpuscle, always ready to fight, will be the better armed and more ready for the fray, and will be given half a chance, which it never has had in times gone by. This is strange, too, because the patient's serum helps in the fight, and with the white corpuscle it looks like two to one in the fight against the germ. But with these odds against it, we know the germ often proves itself the better of its two opponents put together.

How to discover the time of greatest resistance was the problem which faced Sir A. E. Wright, but he solved it. From the lobe of the ear or the joint of the finger he extracts blood, and to prevent it clotting he mixes it with a saline solution, then drops it into a glass tube, and by centrifugal force separates the white from the red corpuscles and both from the patient's serum. He then draws from this tube the white corpuscles, or as much as is required, and the same quantity of serum, and places them in another tube, separating the serum from the corpuscles by pads of air. Into this tube he places the same quantity of bacteria or microbe from which the patient suffers. Thus he has three equal parts of corpuscle, serum and bacteria, which he then places into another tube, mixing them up so that contact is complete. The mixture is then submitted to blood heat, and after fifteen or twenty minutes the mixture is taken from the tube and placed under the microscope. According, then, as the white corpuscles are seen to contain more or less dead bacteria than the corpuscles from healthy ing power of the patient's blood high or low. If it is low, he waits, for there is a negative and positive phase in the blood's action; if it is high he injects Koch's new tuberculine, repeating the injection about every ten days. This method is said to be wonderfully curative in those cases in which the affected parts can be restive; but less so, as in the case of the lung, which night and day must necessarily be more or less in motion. Dr. Trudeau, of Saranac Lake, in a paper read before the National Association in Washington last May, stated that he considered the opsonic index "a most valuable contribution to the knowledge on the subject of tuberculosis," but the technique required made it impracticable in the treatment of a large number of cases. Dr. Rutherford, of Stratford, reports the discoverer to be of the same opinion. And this indicates the more that the need of Ontario is the isolation system, with reference of its patients to some central institute where the practicability of the technique ensures the safest and best opsonic treatment.

Welsh Herbalists Effect Many Cures

Carduff, March 6.—In the last few days, since accounts of alleged marvelous cure effected by the herbalists, J. and D. Evans, of Cardigan, have appeared in the newspapers, patients have been arriving in the town by every train.

Among the patients beginning treatment, this week, are some with diseases as widely different as lupus, cancer of the breast and necrosis of the chief bone of the leg. Telegrams and letters are pouring in at the Evans surgery, and the reading and answering of these appears to be a greater task to the herbalists than the mere curing of the diseases.

In all cases the method of treatment is the same; A liquid or ointment made entirely from herbs, and said to contain no mineral caustic whatever, is painted over the part, and then fresh green leaves, bruised by rolling them out on a table with a bottle as a roller, are applied all over the part, and a bandage is put on. The treatment is often quite painful, though the Evanses say that by taking more time they could get equally good results painlessly.

They say their chief difficulty is with cancer that has been operated on. These cases they liken to trees cut away from their roots, and, the main bulk of the growth being gone, they have nothing into which their remedy may draw the roots. They pass directly from case to case, treating patients with widely different maladies without the precaution of disinfecting their hands.

A twig of wood pointed at one end is used throughout the day as a probe to pick off the leaves applied the day before. Their remedy is painted on the diseased surface with a camel-hair brush or a feather. Everything is done on a most primitive and unscientific scale; yet no case of blood poisoning or spreading of infection are known in the town.

Yesterday, leaving their farm early in the morning, they tramped all day through the rain, visiting their patients, with no time for a mid-day meal. They reached home between 2 and 3 a.m., to find about sixty letters and telegrams awaiting them. To letters begging for treatment, the invariable answer is that "if the writers will come to Cardigan the Evanses, with God's grace, will do their best to cure them." They seem dismayed at nothing. Among the patients at present are three cases of breast cancer, that most surgeons would call inoperable.

Making the morning rounds with these strange men, one is struck by the almost reverence with which they are greeted in the cottages. Some of the cottages are really small private hospitals, where four or five out-of-town patients board. Nearly all the present cases have come from distant towns.

The most noticeable characteristics about these men are extreme modesty, deep religious fervor and the fixed purpose to go on treating the poor. They have had several good offers on partnership terms, but appear to prefer a small competency, together with the privilege of going on working in their own way in Cardigan.

However far short they may fall in matters of scientific diagnosis and pathology, they, nevertheless, have effected cures in multitudes of cases which had proved recalcitrant, to say the least, under more regular treatment.

Several sound business men in Cardigan think that if these reported cures were investigated by the highest authorities, the result would be relief from all financial anxiety to the brothers Evans and an inestimable boon to suffering humanity the world over. Whether they are over optimistic or not time and results will tell.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

HOCKEY.

Rough House at Cornwall.

Cornwall, March 6.—The Cornwall hockey team defeated the Ottawa Victorias here to-night by a score of 11 goals to 3. "Bud" McCourt, of the Cornwall team, is lying unconscious in the Hotel Dieu, and his condition is declared by the doctors to be very precarious. Throop, of the Victorias, has a long gash on his cranium, and several other players of both teams have ugly cuts and bruises to remind them of the contest, which for half an hour was the most rough-and-tumble hockey ever seen in Cornwall. The whole trouble came from the fact that the referee seemed to be unable to handle the game properly, and tripping, slashing and cross-checking was rampant in the first half, and the second half was hardly started when there was a regular Donnybrook Fair. McCourt was knocked unconscious by a blow on the head, which cut the scalp badly. Throop was struck about the same time, and was unable to continue play. McCourt came back on, but was only able to play a short time, when he was obliged to retire. Afterwards he became unconscious, and the doctors, believing that there was internal bleeding in the brain, had him removed to the hospital. His mother and a priest were sent for, and are at his bedside.

When McCourt was obliged to quit Runions came on to take his place. From this out the Cornwalls forced the pace and scored 11 successive goals. Smith scored 5 Hol-

Palpitation & Dizziness

FOR 5 YEARS SHE SUFFERED BEFORE TRYING BILEANS. — NOW CURED!

Palpitation, spells of dizziness, "smothering" and "sinking" feelings, stabbing pains around the heart and that "all gone" sensation! Do you have these serious symptoms? If so, read what Mrs. J. S. Buckabee, of Eginburg, Ont., says: "For almost five years I suffered in that way," is her statement. "After meals I had pain and felt bloated, and when the dizzy spells and palpitation came on I had to give in and lie down for an hour or two! I feared heart trouble, but found when I began to take Bileans that my heart was sound enough and the trouble arose from acute digestive disorder. This Bileans soon corrected, and to-day I am cured completely. Bileans are just as good for constipation, headache, piles, female ailments, anaemia, blood impurities, pimples, etc. All druggists and stores at 50c a box, or from Bilean Co., Toronto, for price.

all played fine hockey, particularly Smith, McMillan and Hollingsworth.

More Stanley Cup Games.

The Kenora Thistles have accepted the challenge of the Wanderers for the Stanley Cup, and will play next Tuesday and Friday in Kenora, the total goals in the two games to count. This decision was come to on account of the uncertainty of the Thistles being the cup-holders at the end of the season in their own league. They are seriously threatened by both Brandon and Portage la Prairie and if the present opportunity for two good gates was passed it might not occur again. The Thistles are still without a point player, but will no doubt fill the place with the best man that can be had, regardless of any objection about engaging players especially for Stanley Cup games, as they did when they took Hall and Ross to Montreal.

SPORTING NOTES.

The gentlemen who have been instrumental in arranging the match with Guelph in this city to-night have run up against a grist of bad luck. Yesterday things looked as bright as they well could. The three Cornwall stars were surely coming, and the four local men were in good shape. This morning a telegram arrived which made the local management sit up. It seems that Cornwall and Ottawa Victorias played in the former place last night, and that (as noted elsewhere) the match was a rough one. "Bud" McCourt, who was to have played here to-night, was badly injured, so badly, in fact, that he was removed to the hospital. This morning "Sandy" Burrows received a telegram from "Reddy" McMillan stating that McCourt was dead, and that, under the circumstances, it would be impossible for either of the Cornwall boys to play here to-night.

This, as may be imagined, set the local management hustling, and they immediately got into communication with other places, with the object of engaging good players to fill the places which were to have been filled by the three Cornwall men. The result is that when the locals line up to-night one of the best goal-tenders in Western Ontario will be in front of the nets; Bentley, of Cobourg, a fast lad, and a comer, will be on one of the wings; and Moffatt, also of Cobourg, and a great scorer, will be on the other wing. Both the Cobourg lads are well known in this city as fine and speedy players. The Cornwall accident, of course, is to be greatly deplored, but the local management has done all in its power, and spared no expense, to make the local line-up as strong as possible. It's a safe bet that there will be a swift match in the rink to-night, and the chances for a large attendance seem bright.

The Guelph team are now in the city, and are as likely a looking bunch as you ever saw on skates. They had a light work-out at the rink this afternoon, and will do a few stunts of the real thing variety to-night.

What a lot of jokers they have in Peterboro! After stating in their local papers that they intended to turn professional, and writing to the O.H.A. to that effect, the club now coolly says that the statement was made without authority, and that the team will remain "amateur." Save the mark! What kind of nerve food does Chris Graham feed his club on?

The match to-night will start at 8.30, and Dr. Gilbert, the local hockey crack, will handle the bell.

Two Montreal Shamrock hockey men have lost an eye each this season, through injuries received in playing the game.

Mail and Empire: Peterboro do not intend to play professional hockey. Of course not. Only strictly "amateur" clubs for them—like Arnprior. Funny, isn't it.

Jack Johnson, the negro heavyweight, the only man in the world whom Jeffries is believed to fear, has been matched to fight for a purse and side bet that will total $20,000, with Bill Squires, the champion heavyweight of Australia. The match will take place at Melbourne within six weeks.

TIMELY TOPICS.

THE IMMIGRANTS.

(Boston Traveler.)

Our Uncle Sam's a kindly man—
He said to all who roam,
"Come hither, stay with me a while,
And I'll give you a home."
And when he called, from other lands
There came a motley crew;
His farm they coveted, and so
The long procession grew.

A fine domain had Uncle Sam,
Beneath a kindly sun;
To each he gave a slice, and then
They bade their cousins come.
His children cried, "Stop, father, stop!
What will our children do,
If you their birthright give away
To each who asks of you?"

"You're sturdy lads — just hustle 'round,
And each one help his brother;
And when they crowd you from one place,
Why, then just try another."
So some went off to Canada,
And some to Mexico,
Some to the islands of the seas,
And some to—Jericho.

And still they come—like some mad stream,
In its tempestuous flow;
Poor children of the Puritans,
You've surely got to go!
In some museum soon you'll find—
Or in some travelling show—
One Yankee and one Indian,
And one last buffalo.

The U. S. Government is to make another effort to break up the operations of certain padrones who have for several years been engaged in the traffic of importing Greek boys, who are held for long periods in what is said to amount to absolute slavery. These boys are largely employed as bootblacks in shoeshine parlors, and are said to practically work for nothing besides their keep for the first year or so. The Greek Government will assist the United States Government in putting a stop to this species of slavery.

According to the London Tailor and Cutter, there is a probability of fashionable England adopting the kilt; The Daily Graphic in contemplating such a sartorial revolution as the Sassenach in kilts mildly remarks that they "are draughty garments for the month of February and March, but perhaps the idea is that they shall only be worn in the weather in which as Mark Twain once said, the human skin is the most comfortable of all costumes. While it thinks they are "a step in the direction of the ideal," it laments that they give little scope for the cutter.

COMET IS COMING.

Prof. Matteucci, of the Vesuvius observatory, near Naples, who is neither a crank nor a fool, nor reputed as a humorist, predicts that toward the end of this month the comet discovered by Marchetti will contact with the atmospheric covering of the earth, and give us all a jar that may have serious consequences. It is somewhat consoling to think that should the tail be lying in the other direction the jog will be only momentary, and possibly may not extinguish all the life upon the planet; but if the earth passes through the tail the atmosphere of our planet may ignite, and the jig will be up with all of us, says the Detroit News.

There have been prophecies like this before, and it is needless to say that they have not been fulfilled but they have been made as a rule by people of no consequence or credit, mostly charlatans. But when such a man as Matteucci makes them they becomes serious, or seem serious. Nevertheless, in spite of Matteucci's reputation as a serious scientist, we would not be afraid to make a bet, payable any day during April, that the old planet will be at that time moving in her own orbit, and that her population will be undiminished. If all the astromoners in the world

It would be almost worth the cost to be a spectator of the early phases of the cataclysm. It would be the most interesting spectacle man ever witnessed.

"Wasn't it you who was here working the book swindle about this time last winter?" she interrupted him with.

"Me? No, ma'am. I wuz jest startin' on me trip about dat time an' biddin' me old gray haired mother goodby. Ah, lady, yer should hev seen de tears she shed as she parted from her only son! But, as I wuz sayin', de feed yer gib me will"—

"Just a minute. There's a little mistake in your figures, I think."

"As—as ter how, lady?"

"Why, as to the number of dogs that have bitten you. You said 116, didn't you?"

"Y-yes, lady."

"Well," she said as she came out into the yard and started toward the barn, "you want to change that, because Carlo will make the one hundred and seventeenth. Here, Carlo! Here, Carlo! Carlo! Carlo!"

In the Bondage of Meadville.

By RITA KELLEY.

Copyright, 1906, by C. H. Sutcliffe.

"It's no use talking to me," Ellen exclaimed. "My mind is fully made up."

The man rose and, walking over to where the girl sat, stood looking down at her intently. She shifted uncomfortably under his gaze and finally slipped from her chair and fled ignominiously to the window, where, she felt sure, he was too proud to follow her.

"Oh, I know you are shocked!" she cried. "It's plainly a girl's mission in life to marry the first man who thinks he wants her and settle down to dishwashing and wiping the children's noses." She shivered in disgust, ignoring the look of pain that crossed his face. "That is what all the girls in town have done," she continued. "And because I am palled by the very wholesale monotony of it you think me an anomaly, an unwomanly girl, a reprobate. Bah!"

The defiant little rebel against the conventions of Meadville struck terror to the heart of Elton Maxwell, lately chosen president of the Meadville Savings bank and owner of the fastest trotter on the Meadville county fair race track. He looked at her helplessly and cleared his throat.

SHE TOLD HIM THE WHOLE MISERABLE STORY.

"But we could keep a hired girl, Ellen," he said, and, brightening, "you could drive Fanny G. wherever you liked. You wouldn't be tied down. We'd run up to Chicago often to the theater. You would have a much easier time than any of the girls," he finished proudly.

Ellen looked at him a moment pityingly. How apparent were the limitations of his mind! Then she fired a death dealing bomb into the enemy's camp.

"I'm going to study art!" she said triumphantly.

"Ellen, no!" The horror in his voice was genuine.

Years ago another rebellious maiden of Meadville had expressed the same resolve, and it was like "Jane, Jane, she never was the same." There were dark hints of unseemly behavior, and the girl never became an artist and never returned home. To young Maxwell's mind his sweetheart was as good as lost already, though he broached the possibility of marrying him and then seeking the higher plane which the dullness of Meadville seemed to render imperative, but she quickly snatched the heart out of him.

"No," she said; "I shall be wedded to my art instead. It isn't that I want to do it exactly," she added, in a quick pity. "Maybe some time I'll find that you are the best, Elton, but not now. I must try. I'm so deathly sick of matrimony by the job lot!"

The amateurish daubs on the four sides of the little parlor appeared frightfully flat and unpromising as she turned from watching Elton walk down the street, the spring gone from his step, his face paler than she had ever seen it. But she must try! A year ago she would have given her two eyes for the love she had so lightly refused today, but that was before she had climbed the hill of knowledge and realized that her only habitation thenceforth must be in the realm of art, not stale old Meadville. She was packed, ready to go the moment the director of the big art school should say the word.

Her father stepped gingerly into the best room.

"A letter, Ellen. Must be from that art school. Have you got your things all packed ready to go? I reckon you'll come back 'bout the biggest picter painter in the country. Won't scarcely know us then, will you?"

The unwonted tenderness in her father's voice and the real misgiving in the last sentence, ill disguised by the short laugh, made her heart suddenly contract. How good every one was to her! Even her father and mother were ready to sacrific painfully, even to the point of placing her on a plane where she would be ashamed to recognize them as her humble Meadville parents if thereby she would be rendered happy.

She clung to her father in an unaccustomed, wholly demonstrative fashion that embarrassed him.

hair awkwardly. "Read your letter. Mebbe they don't want you to come so soon. I must go wash for supper."

It was true—they didn't want her to come so soon. In fact, they didn't want her to come at all. The director unkindly said satirical things about her cows—a study from nature—and suggested housework as a surer means of gaining renown.

It was a horrible shock. She did not cry; she was too stunned and humiliated for that; she had only enough reason left to wonder doubly how she could tell her parents that their sweet confidence had been misplaced—that their child always was and always would be a nobody.

The stuffy little parlor, the hateful daubs, had grown intolerable. Pulling a shawl from its hook in the narrow hall, she fled from the house and up the narrow street redolent of beefsteak, coffee and hot cakes—Meadville's favorite supper. Every one left the blinds up in Meadville, and there was a panorama of warm interiors, romping children, contented husbands and active, happy wives. Ellen, hurrying along in the chill gloom, felt like a pariah and passed quickly out of the din of dishwashing on to the country road.

She was brought at last to a realization of her whereabouts by a startled cry and jumped back barely in time to escape a horse's hoofs that just grazed her sleeve as the horse was pulled back on its haunches. The starlight was sufficient to indicate her close call. She uttered a belated but frightened shriek.

"By George!" exclaimed the man somewhere back of the horse. "What are you doing out here? Are you drunk?

"Say, are you hurt?" he continued in alarm, as there was no reply. He sprang to the ground, groped his way forward and plucked at her sleeve.

"Ellen!"

She began to sob. She couldn't help it. There had been too many shocks in Meadville that day.

It did not take Elton long to get her into the runabout and start up the erstwhile spurned Fanny G. Ellen continued to be so distressed that Elton, ignoring the fact that she had just refused him, slipped his arm around her and was not repulsed. Unfortunately, so it seemed, his extreme kindness and lack of curiosity about her plight served only to increase her discomfiture until, as he helped her to alight from the vehicle at her gate, she caught him close about the neck and told him the whole miserable story.

"How can I tell father and mother?" she cried.

"Leave that to me," he whispered jubilantly, "and cheer up."

The old people jumped to their feet as the door flew open, and a look of intense relief crossed their faces at the sight of Ellen and Elton.

"Oh, we didn't know what had become of you the last night you were here," said her mother a little reproachfully, but she smiled indulgently at Elton, and he smiled back.

"And whom should she be with?" he cried. "But I have good news for you. She isn't going away. She's promised to become a Meadville matron."

If Ellen had had fears, they were immediately dissipated by the warmth of her mother's embrace and the happy ejaculation of her father as he grasped Elton's hand. It dawned upon her at the instant that they were happier to know she was to marry the most promising young man in Meadville than they would be if she could surpass all the artists in history, and suddenly it appeared to her that she was the happiest of all and that Meadville—poor, cramped, despised Meadville—was a garden of Eden.

A Financial Genius.

"Sonny," said a company promoter to his youngest son the other day, "I'll give you 5 shillings if you dig that patch of ground all ready for your sister to start her flower garden."

"Right you are, guv'nor," said young hopeful thoughtfully, "but I shall have to ask you for 25 per cent of the contract price in advance, not as an evidence of good faith, but simply as working capital."

"Working capital? What do you mean?" said the father.

"Well, you see, I'll bury a sixpence somewhere and tell all the boys in the neighborhood that I have found out that an old miser buried his treasure in our field. When they strike that tanner they'll go on digging like Trojans, I can tell you. In that way I reckon I can clear about 90 per cent. In fact, I"—

"Well, what?" inquired the proud parent.

"In fact, I don't so much know but what I can also arrange to find that sixpence myself."

And father wept tears of joy as he thought of what a rough time financiers would have when his boy grew up.—Pearson's.

The Hearts of Birds.

Most people will be surprised to learn that the hearts of birds are far heavier proportionately than the hearts of animals, including man, but a little explanation will show that this is quite natural. The more the body works the greater the demand upon the heart, upon which falls the duty of driving the blood through the body; hence the heart develops and becomes heavier. Everybody knows that birds are among the most active and hard working of living creatures. The swallow can overtake an express train. The falcon will carry a load weighing three pounds in the air without hindrance to its power of flight or its speed. In short, they have a tremendous capacity for work, and their hearts are corre-

Marooned In London.

By FRANK CLIFTON.

"I'm sorry, miss," said the agent politely, "but there is not even a berth left."

"Perhaps I might get in the second cabin," suggested Madge, with a sudden accession of hope. The agent smiled.

"There are more persons going back second cabin than there are who want firsts," he explained. "You see, lots of those who come over first cabin only have enough for the second cabin on the way home. Some of them discount their return ticket for the little extra money they can get that way. Of course some one might decide not to go at the last moment, but there are 137 applications in ahead of yours, and there would have to be 138 passengers not going before I could fix you up on that boat."

"But the next?" she persisted.

"Just as bad, if not worse. I am afraid that I shall not be able to book you before the end of next month."

With a sigh, Madge turned away from the counter. She had lingered on in Europe after the rest of her original party had returned. She had joined the Worthingtons after that, but now they were starting for the Nile trip, and it was important that she should get home. There had been no hope of obtaining passage on the French and Hamburg liners, and she had run over to London supposing that there would be a better opportunity.

But everywhere the same story was told. The rush of westbound traffic was unexpectedly heavy and there would be no chance for a stateroom for weeks to come. Aunt Clara was fretting at the delay, her father had written her that he was not well and he wished her to return at once, and yet they would probably be forced to remain in London for five or six weeks.

Madge always thought better when she walked, so she dismissed her cab and started to walk back to the Cecil. The busy London streets quickened her thoughts, but these only served to show how unpleasant was her situation. It was a very blue face that crossed Tom Manning's line of vision.

"ISN'T THAT THE RICHEST JOKE?" HE CHUCKLED.

"Miss Howard!" he cried, starting forward. "This is indeed a surprise. I had supposed that you returned long ago."

"Returned," she laughed dismally. "Why, we are marooned here. We cannot get a berth for love or money."

"If misery loves company you have lots of it," he laughed. "Let's go and have some lunch. That may cheer you up a little. I'll telephone Mrs. Twomey."

Madge nodded gratefully. She had always liked Tom Manning, and they turned their steps toward the Carleton. She waited while he went off to telephone her aunt.

He ordered a capital lunch, for he had a rare sense of gastronomic proportions, and she really enjoyed the dainty meal, though she caught herself wondering how much more glad she would have been had it been Frank Roper whom she had encountered. He was a business man, where Tom was a mere society butterfly. Frank could have found some way of getting her out of the trouble; Tom was only a momentary diversion.

Almost as though in answer to her question Roper entered the dining room and came toward them. His alert bearing was in marked contrast to Manning's rather boyish pose, and yet somehow she did not feel so glad to see him as she had been to greet Tom.

He took a seat at their table in response to Manning's invitation and listened gravely to her recital of her troubles.

"I regret that I cannot be of assistance," he said when she had concluded. "I made every endeavor yesterday to arrange a similar matter for the relatives of some business friends, and the case is hopeless. Even the freighters are booked far ahead."

"Then you are marooned, too," she laughed gleefully.

"I never permit such a situation," he said complacently. "My interests are room was booked before I came over. I am going day after tomorrow."

"I guess we exiles shall have to charter a steamer," laughed Manning. "If you are done, Miss Howard, shall we go?"

She left the table with relief. Somehow Roper's attitude of complacent satisfaction was positively hateful. She had always liked him before. Down in her heart of hearts she had vacillated between the two men ever since her coming out ball. Her preference had been for Roper until now, but at present Tom's mercurial temperament suited her mood better, and she was glad that she had met him first.

"Since Frank has refused the request, may I take it up?" he asked as they parted at the hotel. "I may be able to sandbag some unwary tourist and take his stateroom from him."

"If you only could!" she cried impulsively. "Father is in poor health, and I am so anxious to get to him."

"Can you sail at once?" he asked.

"I'd like to go this minute," she cried.

"Consider it done," he said, with mock dramatics. "I will work the sandbag persuasion this very day."

Madge went upstairs oddly comforted by the assurance, though her sense told her that Manning could not succeed where Roper with his influence had failed.

It was with misgiving that she opened the note he sent her that evening, but a delighted cry escaped her when a ticket fell out. She let it flutter to the floor when she read the letter. It ran:

> Dear Miss Howard—I am called out of town and am mailing these to you. You can fix it up when I see you in New York. Hope you will have a pleasant passage. With regards to your aunt and yourself, THE SANDBAGGER.

Roper called that evening to explain that he had heard of a berth that she might obtain four weeks later and seemed much relieved to find that she had been provided for.

"I should have offered you my room," he said, "had it not been that it was imperative that I should be in town next week. We shall be fellow passengers."

Madge could not arouse great enthusiasm over this fact. A few weeks before she would have been glad. But since the luncheon she had changed. It was unreasonable to expect him to give up his stateroom, yet the complacent way in which he had dismissed that possibility had irritated her.

It was not as pleasant a trip as Roper anticipated. Madge was pleasant, but there was no chance to get a chat with her, and they were nearing home before the opportunity came to put his fate to the test.

He had regarded her acceptance as a matter of course, and her prompt and emphatic negative put him out of sorts with himself. He did not come near her again until they lay off quarantine and the steerage passengers were being transferred to the Ellis island boat.

The cabin passengers were hanging over the rail watching the odd characters as they trooped on board the little steamer. Roper leaned on the rail beside Madge.

Suddenly he grasped her arm and pointed to the gangway. "Isn't that the richest joke?" he chuckled. "There goes Manning. He probably got strapped and came over steerage because it was the best he could afford. This is rich."

In a flash Madge solved the situation.

"I am afraid," she said, "that we are occupying Mr. Manning's stateroom. That is probably his reason for coming third class. He knew how anxious I was to get home, and that is the way he solved the problem. Had I known I should never have consented."

Roper's mirth changed to a sickly smile. "I congratulate—Mr. Manning," he said as he turned away.

That evening Manning presented himself at the Howards' in response to Madge's note. "I was going to arrive officially in a couple of weeks from now," he explained sheepishly. "I did not want to see you two left alone in London, and I had to get back on a big deal I was working. I'm sorry you saw me, though."

"I'm not," she said decidedly. "I used to think you were just a society butterfly, and I'm glad to know differently."

"Oh, I work," he said lightly. "Only I don't bring my business to 5 o'clock teas, and I rather like the teas—that's all."

"Just—the teas?" asked Madge meaningly.

"Do you mean"— he stammered.

"Yes," said Madge. "Since you are afraid to appear to take advantage of your action I suppose I shall have to force you to propose."

"It won't take much forcing," he laughed. "Will you?"

"Gladly," said Madge.

A Profitable Inheritance.

The boatman, stolidly bending to his oars, looked up quickly and said, "Illustrissimo, my grandfather was the boatman of the Signor Shelley, drowned in this bay." Saying Shelley's name, he lifted his hat as if he had mentioned one of the saints.

The quick mist of emotion rose to Carducci's eyes at the boatman's simple gesture of reverence. "I salute thee, my friend," he said, stretching out his hand. The rower drew in his oars and, bending forward, shook hands with Carducci, then rowed quietly on, driving out into the blue waters.

I have since been told—but I refuse to believe it—that every boatman in Spezia tells the same grandfather story when Shelley's name is mentioned by visitors to the bay. "It is our little story for the English," they say, with a gleaming, irresponsible smile. "They like it much. It is worth a lira or two lira—sometimes five." In our case, I remember, it was worth five and a clasp of Carducci's hand.—Fortnightly

The Property of the Cobalt Silver Mountain Mining Company, Limited, is located in the heart of the richest silver belt in the world, and consists of twenty acres.

It is surrounded by five of the best and richest shipping Mines in the Cobalt Camp, viz. The University, Bailey, Pig Pete (or Cobalt-Central), McKinley-Darragh-Savage and Silver Bar Mines, and it is also adjacent to the famous Gillies Timber Limit and only a few hundred feet from the Nipissing and Foster Mines, as shown on the map.

The Silver Mountain Co. has the best located and most promising undeveloped property in the Cobalt camp to-day and the men most largely interested in the company comprising some of Cobalt's largest mine owners and some of the best-known and most influential men throughout Canada, including over a dozen members of parliament, confidently expect that

THE SILVER MOUNTAIN CO.

Will Be Just as Large a Shipper as the Mines Adjacent to it in a Few Months

Mr. C E. Kingswell, one of the best engineers in the Cobalt camp has made an extensive report on the property, and the company will gladly send a copy of same to anyone interested, upon request. He says in his report among other things:

ENGINEER'S REPORT

"Your lot is within one lot of and surrounded by the Foster, Big Pete and the McKinley-Darragh-Savage Mines and within two lots of the Nipissing, all of which are among the most famous mines in the camp. The property lies wholly in Diabase, and has thirty-eight veins so far discovered, and these veins form a perfect network all over the property. I carefully assayed this property some time ago, and never failed to get silver in any assay I took. The famous timber limit lies immediately southeast of this property, and borders it, and upon this limit the government are now working a very good mine, and this mine lies only a short distance from your property. Near your property and the timber limit a good smaltite ledge was discovered last June by the foreman of the Silver Bar Company, and this lead runs directly into your property. I know veins on your property that carry very much better ore than ever the Big Pete did at the start and no attempt has been made to follow these leads down. One ledge on your property has been explored for four hundred feet, and this ledge in places is quite four inches wide and it carries nine ounces of silver to the ton. Every ledge upon your property has good true walls, and they are all free from the walls and have every sign of permanency and value; and my humble opinion is, that if a shaft was put down to a reasonable depth good paying ore would be found, and you could cross-cut to strike other ledges. I have explored and reported upon most of the good mines here and also upon a large number of prospects, and have never yet inspected one with as many leads as yours has and I consider that it would be a freak of nature if your claim does not prove a good payable one. The fact that the Bailey Mine, which adjoins your property, and the Big Pete Mine, which is within one lot, are both located on this same Diabase hill on which your property is, and the fact that they are two of the best mines in the camp, is one of the greatest proofs to my mind that your lot will be found to contain the same kind of ore as is being shipped from these mines."
—C. E. Kingswell, M.E.

THIS IS A CHANCE OF A LIFETIME.

THE PROPERTY OF THE SILVER MOUNTAIN CO. HAS NEVER BEEN DEVELOPED, THOUGH SOME

Thirty-eight Veins Carrying Silver Have Been Discovered on the Surface

And all the property should need to bring it to the shipping point is some development work.

The property has been completely paid for with stock of the company, and not one dollar is required except for development purposes.

Just about a year ago, as you know, a block of stock of the Foster Mine, a close neighbor to The Silver Mountain, was offered to the public for 80 cents per share in order to raise money for development work. You know also that this stock has sold since for over $4.00 per share and can be sold to-day to yield an immense profit to the original purchasers.

BUT REMEMBER it is the man who bought the stock when first offered who made the most money, NOT the man who waited until it reached somewhere near its real value. Please remember the above and read the following offer:

THE SILVER MOUNTAIN CO. IS PREPARING TO COMMENCE OPERATIONS ON ITS PROPERTY ON A LARGE SCALE

And needs some working capital, consequently the directors have decided to offer for public subscription a small block of stock at

A SPECIAL PRICE OF

SIXTY CENTS PER SHARE

Cash with subscription. This is the first and only allotment which will be offered to the public at this price SUBSCRIPTIONS FOR ANY NUMBER OF SHARES WILL BE RECEIVED UP UNTIL NOON ON THE 15TH DAY OF MARCH, 1907, and the directors reserve the right to refund all over-subscriptions as soon as the necessary amount has been subscribed. Subscription will be accepted according to the order in which they are received, whether by wire or letter, and may be sent direct to the secretary of the company, 95 Sparks Street, Ottawa.

If you have any faith in Cobalt you will get some of this stock and get it at once, for to-morrow may be too late. Opportunities like this only come once. We believe if you know anything about Cobalt, we have said enough, and if you want to learn more, we will be glad to tell you all we can.

Send in your wire for reservation of stock, and your subscription to Cables Steady — Cattle Continue Strong at Chicago.

Liverpool, March 6.—Liverpool and London cables are steady at 11c to 12½c per lb., dressed weight; refrigerator beef is quoted at 9¼c to 9⅜c per lb.

Montreal Live Stock.

Montreal, March 6.—Receipts were 600 cattle, 50 milch cows, 900 hogs, 200 calves, 50 sheep and lambs. The market for hogs was weaker, in spite of small supplies, and prices declined 10c to 15c per 100 lbs. The demand from dealers was fair, but packers showed no disposition to operate freely, owing to the continued discouraging advices from European sources on Canadian bacon, and trade in consequence was slow, with sales of selected lots at $7.25 to $7.40 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars. The butchers were present in large numbers, but trade in cattle was slow, and prices were lower than they were on last Wednesday's market. A few of the best cattle sold at about 5c per lb., but they were not extra; pretty good sold at 4c to 4⅜c, and the common stock at 2⅜c to 3⅜c. Quite a number of the milch cows were rather thin in flesh, and these sold at $25 to $35 each; the other cows sold at $35 to $55 each. Calves sold at $2.50 to $8 each, or 3½c to 5c per lb. Sheep sold at 4½c to 5c, and lambs at 6½c to 7c per lb.

New York, March 6.—Beeves—Receipts, 1128; good to choice steers firm; medium and common slow; bulls full steady; bologna cows slow to 10c off; medium and good do. steady to strong; steers, $4.85 to $5.85; stags and oxen, $4.10 to $5.50; bulls, $3.50 to $4.35; cows, $1.65 to $4; heifers, $4.75. Liverpool and London cables quoted live cattle firm at 11½c to 13c per lb., dressed weight; refrigerator beef, 9c to 9½c per lb. Exports, 820 cattle, 1000 sheep and 6020 quarters of beef.

Calves—Receipts, 1041; veals steady; barnyard calves nominal; veals, $5 to $9.50; few tops, $9.75 to $10; culls, $4 to $4.50.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 2422; sheep almost nominal; lambs firm to higher; sheep, $3.50 to $5; lambs, $7 to $7.25 for common and medium; one car choice, $8.15.

Hogs—Receipts, 6022; steady feeling; whole range quoted at $7.50 to $7.75.

Chicago Live Stock.

Chicago, March 6.—Cattle—Receipts, 20,000; common to best steers, $4.25 to $6.85; heifers, $2.65 to $5.25; cows, $3.25 to $5; bulls, $3 to $4.50; calves, $2.50 to $7.25; stockers and feeders, $2.50 to $5.

Hogs—Receipts, 25,000; market steady, but slow; choice, heavy, shipping, $6.95 to $7; light butchers', $6.92½ to $6.97½; light, mixed, $6.92½ to $6.97½; packing, $6.50 to $6.95; pigs, $5.75 to $6.95; bulk of sales, $6.90 to $6.95.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 18,000; market for lambs strong to 10c higher; sheep steady, but dull; sheep, $5 to $6; lambs, $6 to $7.70.

Wills All to Fight Graft.

Port Huron, Mich., March 7.—Archimeds Galbraith, an aged hermit, who was carried from his hut a few miles from here a week ago because he was no longer able to care for himself, died in the county poor house yesterday.

He left a will in which he directs that his body be sold to any medical college for dissection, and that the proceeds, together with his $12,000 estate, be placed in the hands of a prominent lawyer, and an editor, who are to "fight and expose the corrupt court and lawyers of this county."

Czar "Satisfied."

St. Petersburg, March 7.—Parliament did not meet yesterday, pending the reception of M. Golovin, president of the Lower House, by Emperor Nicholas, which took place yesterday.

His majesty declared himself "thoroughly satisfied with the first session of the House, and assured the president that he and the Ministers were inspired by the best feelings toward Parliament, and hoped that its work, with the assistance of the legislative projects which the Ministers had prepared, would be beneficial to the country.

Head Found In City Hall.

Kingston, March 7.—Laborers working on the dome of the city building found a tin pail containing the perfectly preserved head of a middle aged man.

An inquiry was made and it was discovered that a medical student at one time had used the tower as a laboratory and on being graduated, left the head, which probably has been in the tower ten years.

SELECTIONS

SEAGOING RAILROAD.

Line From Miami to Key West to Cost About $20,000,000.

Inside of three years, when work now under way is completed, it will be possible to travel in a railroad car all the way from New York or Chicago to Havana. This will be brought about by the construction of a seagoing railroad which will run from key to key over the 154 miles separating Miami and Key West. From the latter point it is only 100 miles to the Cuban capital, and across this stretch of water the trains will be ferried on monster floats capable of holding thirty cars.

This project is an extension of the Florida East Coast railroad, owned by Henry M. Flagler. It was started last year, and up to date the grading of the section of the road on the mainland and the construction of some of the viaducts have been completed.

Some idea of the boldness of the undertaking may be gained from the fact that from Long key to Conch key it is 10,400 feet, across Knight's key channel 7,300 feet, across Moser key channel 7,800 feet and across Bahia Honda channel 14,940 feet. However, along the major portion of the route lies a coral bed which will make a firm foundation for the viaducts. One of these viaducts will be the longest marine bridge in the world, double the length of Brooklyn bridge, in New York. The viaducts will consist of reenforced concrete arch spans and piers, and to insure safety and comfort the rails will be laid thirty feet above low water. Eventually it will be a double track road all the way from Miami to Key West.

Aside from its attractiveness to travelers, this line across the Florida keys is already being regarded in the commercial world as a factor in the future development of both Florida and Cuba. About 4,000 men are engaged in this latest Flagler enterprise. The traffic between Florida and Cuba will begin as soon as the line reaches Bahia Honda, some distance north of Key West and where there is a deep harbor. But the plan is to reach Key West as soon as possible and make that place one of the big southern seaports.

Money From Seaweed.

Japan, which wastes nothing in its domestic economy, realizes $2,000,000 annually from its seaweed products. According to the report of C. J. Davidson, an attache of the British embassy at Tokyo, more than fifty varieties of the seaweed found along the Japanese coast are utilized either for food or as manufactured products.

The traveler sees bundles of dried seaweed, white with the crystallized salt of the sea water, hung from the front of every food stall. The coarser varieties are stewed and served with fish. Some of the delicate sprigs of sea grass are boiled with fish soups and remain a vivid green, floating against the red lacquer of the soup bowls.

Other species of seaweed are used in the manufacture of glue, of plaster and of starch. Whole villages are given over to seaweed fishing and the drying and packing of the product for shipment to the manufacturing plants in the large cities. In the country along the seashore the farmers use the coarse and ropy kelp for fertilizing their vegetable fields.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

India's Fine Roads.

It is probably not generally known that India is remarkable for its possession of many most excellent roads, some of them of great length, like that which runs from Bombay to Delhi, a distance of 900 miles. It is described as "a perfect highway." Another fine road, 1,500 miles in length, extends from Calcutta to Peshawur, at the frontier of Afghanistan. These roads are kept in perfect repair and were built originally for military purposes before the advent of railroads. Many of the native princes give particular care to their roads. Of course the nature of the country plays a part in the existence of the roads, and now they serve as a stimulus to the use of automobiles, which are very popular in India.

Steamships' Quick Lunches.

One of the finest cargoes of iron ore ever mined in the Lake Superior region was trundled aboard a little schooner about fifty years ago. Four days were required to put 300 tons aboard her. A week was required to get the ore out of her. Two seasons ago the great steel steamer Augustus B. Wolvin loaded more than 10,000 tons of ore in eighty-nine minutes, or in less than an hour and a half. And this huge cargo was jerked out of her in a little more than four hours.—Outing.

Japanese Brewing.

Mr. Shibata, the brewer, has ordered a solid gold pan, which will be used for tempering sake. The capacity of the pan is such as to hold about a hundred gallons. It will take two or three months to make the pan, during which time the house of the goldsmith will be specially guarded by the police.—Tokyo Times.

Would Cremate All Autos.

A petition has been presented to parliament asking that every motor vehicle in the country be burned in one great bonfire before 1908, the resultant scrap metal to be sold for the benefit of those who have been maimed by the JAPANESE ARMAMENTS.

England Is a Little Anxious About Her Enterprising Ally.

Great Britain's enterprising ally, Japan, intends not only practically to double her army, but to spend £7,000,000 on the increase of her navy as well. The ships will presumably be built in Japan, where possibly facilities for the production of armor plate will be installed. If this be so, with the cheap labor available, the sum named ought to give the Japanese at least five if not six ships of the type of the Dreadnought or something approaching thereto. She may, however, elect to build two or more cruisers, it not being by any means certain that the Japanese have followed our example in merging the two classes into the "capital ship." Perhaps four battleships and two armored cruisers may be the outcome of the proposals.

If this be so, how will Japan stand when her new programme is completed? The Mikasa has been raised, so she will have four ships of her old battle fleet, to which may be added the Orel, Peresviet, Retzivan, Poltava and Pobieda, taken from the Russians; the Kushima and Katori, the Aki and Satsuma and the (presumed) four new battleships, in all seventeen ships, the worst of which is a little better than our Royal Sovereign class. Backed by some sixteen good armored cruisers, the total is a formidable one, which any except the "mightiest power" may well think twice before tackling. It amounts practically to a fleet of six Dreadnoughts, two King Edwards, three Formidables, three Canopuses, one Majestic and two Royal Sovereigns. Where, it may fairly be asked, is to be found the enemy against whom it is expected that this formidable array of vessels will be employed?

I do not care to attempt to give an answer to the question. It is sufficient to know that in the belief of the Japanese the new vessels will see service. But no man knows where the conditions of the latest power are leading her nor what obstacles in her path she foresees. Any one can for himself imagine half a dozen possibilities, probable or improbable. It suffices to say that ten years is no long time in the construction of a fleet, and that at the expiration of that period it may be necessary again to keep a squadron of battleships in the seas of the far east. The possibility should be taken into account in considering the building programme of the next four years. Alliances are not eternal, and we need not be the less friends with Japan if we recognize that in her future relations she will consult her own imperial interests, with little regard for ours. The existing alliance gives her a breathing space, and in admiration of her deeds we are glad she should have it. But this does not absolve us from the duty of making preparations to "keep our own head" should the situation nine years hence be totally changed from what it is now.—St. James' Gazette.

Fever In Vegetables.

When plants are wounded their respiration increases and their temperature perceptibly rises. In recent experiments a thermo-electric apparatus capable of registering a change of one four-hundredth of a degree was employed. When a potato was wounded the fever manifested itself by an elevation of temperature which was greatest at the end of twenty-four hours, when it began slowly to decline. An onion similarly treated acquired an increase of temperature many times greater than that shown by the potato, and the fever instead of being confined to the neighborhood of the wound affected the entire onion. In fact, the onion proved to be more readily affected in this way than any other vegetable experimented with. The rise of temperature is caused by increased absorption of oxygen.—Portland Journal.

Good Money For Convicts.

It is not generally known, but it is nevertheless a fact, that convicts in the Ohio penitentiary earn as high as $50 or $60 a month for themselves working overtime. They have a certain task to perform in eight hours, and all work they get out above their tasks is credited to them. In the bolt shop alone more than 200 men divide every month $900 for work accomplished in overtime. The convicts are not allowed to work more than eight hours a day. One man in the bolt shop earns nearly $60 every month running what is called a perfect mill. A large number of convicts clear for themselves more than $30 a month.—Columbus Dispatch.

A Whale Headed Stork.

Among the many curious and unusual animals which have been found by Sir Harry Johnston, the African explorer, in the Uganda protectorate, is the whale headed stork. The bird resembles the common stork in everything but the head, which is anything but beautiful. The beak is enormous and gives the stork a peculiar, whalelike appearance. It is rather a puzzle to scientists to discover the reason for this enormous appendage. The whale's mouth is built to catch a multitude of small fish, and possibly the stork's beak may have been evolved by the same agency.

National Banks.

During 1906 there were 462 national banks organized in the United States, with aggregate capital of $23,493,500. At the end of the year there were in existence 6,283 national banks, with authorized capital of $862,016,775. As a result of the liquidation of seventy-three associations and the failure of four the net increase in number of banks during the year was 385, the in-

An Automobile Widow.

By Helena Smith Dayton.

Copyright, 1906, by Homer Sprague.

"Really, Elizabeth," protested Judge Ferris, "I think so much of you both I can't mix up in your trouble!"

"That's why I came to you," argued Mrs. Bradbury. "You see, when one is married one has one's favorite clergyman, so when one is unmarried why not one's pet lawyer? It seems kinder."

"Kinder? Going to make it a function with caterers and flumadiddles?" demanded the judge.

"At least you will inform Ned of my decision," ignoring the flippancy.

"Why, Bess, surely you've no grounds for a divorce. You can't wheedle your freedom out of a court because Ned perhaps forgot to give you violets on your birthday or"—

"I have a reason," icily.

"Oh, ho!" exclaimed the judge. "May I ask her name?"

"It's an automobile!" explained Elizabeth. "I'm what is called an 'automobile widow.'"

"A new one to me," commented the judge musingly.

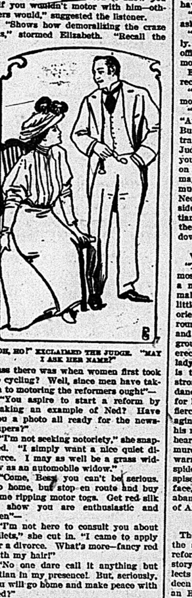
"We've quarreled ever since he bought that big circus chariot of his. I wanted horses instead—I'm originally from Kentucky, you know, and I vowed I'd never step foot in that car, and I haven't! He spends all his time in it, he says I'm unreasonable, and"—Elizabeth broke down.

"Proceed," prompted the judge.

"The last two days he hasn't even gone through the formality of asking me to accompany him, though of course I wouldn't have gone! Yesterday he whizzed by with that blond Johnson girl and today with Mrs. Wheeler. However, I'm not jealous of a mere woman. It's the car!"

"Ned probably wanted to show you if you wouldn't motor with him—others would," suggested the listener.

"Shows how demoralizing the craze is," stormed Elizabeth. "Recall the fuss there was when women first took to cycling? Well, since men have taken to motoring the reformers ought"—



"OH, HO!" EXCLAIMED THE JUDGE. "MAY I ASK HER NAME?"

"You aspire to start a reform by making an example of Ned? Have you a photo all ready for the newspapers?"

"I'm not seeking notoriety," she snapped. "I simply want a nice quiet divorce. I may as well be a grass widow as an automobile widow."

"Come, Bess, you can't be serious. Go home, but stop en route and buy some ripping motor togs. Get red silk to show you are enthusiastic and then"—

"I'm not here to consult you about toilets," she cut in. "I came to apply for a divorce. What's more—fancy red with my hair!"

"No one dare call it anything but Titian in my presence! But, seriously, you will go home and make peace with Ned?"

"If you wish to communicate with me further, I shall be at Clara Lincoln's. Good afternoon." She swept out and into the elevator. "But I mean business."

"Bess will purchase motor togs yet!" smiled the judge. "But I must give expert advice to Ned—surely one's 'pet lawyer' can be 'kinder!'"

Mrs. Bradbury went directly to an attorney who knew neither herself nor her husband. She decided it poor policy to do business with friends. Young Lawyer Elkins, she found, had no scruples.

"Has the defendant any property we could attach?" asked the splinter of the bar pompously.

"I wouldn't take a penny from him!" protested Elizabeth.

"We could worry him a lot!" tempted the legal adviser.

"Could I attach his automobile?" cried Elizabeth eagerly.

"I shall get out the writ at once!" he said decisively.

"I suppose it is a clever way for an automobile widow to avenge herself," sighed Elizabeth. Then briskly, "You will find the car at the Westminster garage."

Elizabeth went to Clara Lincoln's rejoicing at her coup d'etat. Clara, being of the Miss Hobbs type, congratulated her on her admirable spirit. Clara was propping up the "admirable spirit" when Elizabeth's lawyer called not there? A sheriff and two detectives searching? My goodness, every one in town will hear about it! Necessary? Oh, very well!"

Later another call came.

"Yes. Located the car at the Appleby Coach company? Bring it away at once— On the third floor? Well, bring it down the way it went up! Man refuses to operate the elevator? Can't you force him to? Then get a trained elevator man, and I'll pay for his time. They refuse to allow the elevator to be operated—ridiculous! Equipped with a writ to seize property, but balked because there's no law to force them to help you get it! Lawyer Elkins, are you there? Take it out a window; the wall must be full of windows. Windows too small? Take the machine apart. Gracious! Five hundred dollars to put it together again? You suggest leaving it there with a sheriff to guard it? Very well!"

Elizabeth passed an unhappy night. What would Ned do? She speculated about the blond and Mrs. Wheeler and worried about the sheriff sitting alone through the long night on the third floor of the Appleby repository with Ned's big cream colored motor car shining like a ghost out of the gloom. She feared she was punishing the sheriff more than Ned.

Next morning a strange lawyer called—Ned's lawyer! She shuddered.

"Mrs. Bradbury," began Lawyer Snyder, "how much will you take for your interest in the car?"

"It's not money I want," she explained loftily, "but the car."

"This is certainly the motoring season," he agreed, "and the dealers can't deliver a car under six weeks. That's why the other two ladies were so anxious to secure this one."

"What two ladies?" Elizabeth demanded.

"Why, a few days ago Mr. Bradbury advertised his car for sale, and he gave demonstrations to two lady prospects"—

"The blond and Mrs. Wheeler!" gasped Elizabeth, light dawning. "He was selling to please me. What a mess I have made of everything!"

"Any message to send my client?" asked Snyder, rising.

"Wait, please," cried Elizabeth wildly. "I'm going down to Mr. Bradbury's office myself. There's really nothing more you can do on the case."

Elizabeth was smiling on the lawyer recklessly.

"May I take you down in my automobile?" he suggested.

"Oh, would you?" she asked gayly. "Automobiles go so delightfully quick! But pardon me a moment. Hello, central! Give me 5006 Blue. Is that Judge Ferris? O-o-h, Dicky. I thought you'd be relieved to know I've decided on the color for my motor outfit. Red may denote enthusiasm, but gray is much more serviceable, and, you know, Ned has talked of some long trips. Besides, gray is so harmonious with Titian tresses. That's all. What? Ned there? How lovely! I'll be right down."

When the Spider Goes Courting.

"The male spider is the bravest and most demonstrative of all lovers," says a naturalist. "He approaches the female, runs round her a few times in little circles and then begins a violent oriental dance. He twirls round and round. Drawing in his legs, he writhes and crawls, serpentlike, along the ground. Straightening his legs and erecting his body, he towers above the lady grandly. And the mischief of it is that the female spider is always stronger than the male and when his dance is done she either accepts him for her mate or else, falling upon him fiercely, she tears him to pieces. Imagine a human lover trying to please his mistress with the knowledge in his heart that, if he failed, he would be murdered. His efforts would be lukewarm and distrait, eh? Yet the humble spider, whom we are accustomed to despise, dances, death staring him in the face, with a gayety, a warmth and an abandon seldom to be met with north of Africa."

Scotch Dialects.

The written language is so far from the spoken in Scotland that spelling reform is an academic question. A story which illustrates the many dialects is told of an examination at Aberdeen university. The examiners were an English clergyman and a lowland Scotchman. The master of the scholars put many questions to them which were admirably answered. The boys brought the Israelites out of Egypt with a simple directness which Moses would have envied. Then the clergyman asked, "How did Pharaoh die?" The boys sat dumb. The lowlander, to make it more plain, repeated the question, "Hoo did Phawraoh dee?" Again there was a dead silence. Next the master himself took the matter in hand—"Fat cam' to Phawraoh at his hinder end?" The boys answered as with one voice, "He was drooned!" To "dee" means in the Aberdeen dialect to die in one's bed. These careful scholars knew that Pharaoh had not "deed."

Queer Damage Calculation.

That spirit of thrift popularly supposed to pervade New England is amusingly illustrated by the observation of a Connecticut farmer. The good man had been seriously ill in midsummer, but by reason of his strong constitution he quickly rallied. On being asked in the autumn how he was feeling he replied in a cheerful tone:

"Pretty fair, now, thanks. Anyway, it don't make much difference, seein' that the farm's well fixed up. If I'd died in hayin' or harvestin' time, I calkilate it'd been $30 damage to me."

Then, after a pause, he added:

EYE-STRAIN.

May be divided into two distinctive varieties. In one the eye itself is at fault in what we call refractive errors, such as astigmatism, myopia ("near sight"), hypermetropia (the opposite of myopia), etc. People suffering from any of these may have more or less headache, blurring vision for reading, etc., along with reflex strain on the brain and nervous system. The second variety is where the strain is not caused by any refractive error and for this reason is often overlooked, though this kind is productive of by far the most serious results to the brain and nervous system, because it is in connection with the muscles that control the eyes which have a vital connection with the nerve centres of the brain. This kind requires a different kind of glass from that which is required in former cases. We have recently had a large number of complicated cases of the second class with very satisfactory results. Special Meeting Of The Board Of Trade.

MINING AND RAILWAY MATTERS WERE THE SUBJECTS OF DISCUSSION LAST NIGHT—TWO RESOLUTIONS PASSED.

A special meeting of the Board of Trade was called for last evening at 8 o'clock, but it was 8.30 before there were sufficient members present to form a quorum. Those present at the above hour were:

Messrs. R. J. Graham, president; F. S. Deacon, J. W. Johnson, W. N. Ponton, T. Blackburn, H. F. Ketcheson, W. S. Morden and Thornton. Subsequently Messrs. H. C. Hunt, C. S. Clapp, Walter Alford, F. Dolan, T. Manley and P. J. Wims came in.

The object of the meeting was to consider the proposed Mining Act introduced by the Hon. Mr. Cochrane, and more particularly the provisions thereof, exacting the payment of a royalty on minerals.

THE MINING ACT.

Mr. W. S. Morden was the first speaker and he read a number of clauses in the proposed bill, known as an Act to supplement the revenue of the Crown. The most objectionable clause, the speaker thought, appears to be that of the Government engaging a person known as the assessor or valuator, who, under the provision of the Act as drafted, would have the right to visit the mines to see their working and also have access to all books, etc. The amount of royalty has not yet been mentioned. Mr. Morden said the mining people considered the Act would put too much of a burden upon them. The speaker thought the Government might delay action for a year.

Mr. J. W. Johnson asked if a similar tax was in vogue in any other Province.

Mr. Morden said that in British Columbia the tax was two per cent.

Col. Ponton said we should not be punished because Cobalt came into existence, and yet it looked like that. The County of Hastings and this city was greatly interested in mining matters and we should join in urging the Government to postpone the passage of the bill. It was, he considered, a piece of hasty legislation and would no doubt deter capitalists from investing in mining property. It was in his opinion the thin edge of the wedge of socialism.

Mr. H. F. Ketcheson was not in favor of some of the provisions of the proposed bill. A large amount of money was being invested in mining in this County, and more would be invested if there were no restriction placed thereon which would be considered excessive. The County of Hastings was much interested in this matter.

After some further informal talk between a number present the following motion was submitted;

Col. Ponton moved, seconded by Mr. Walter Alford, "That the Board of Trade of the City of Belleville, as the city of a mining county, respectfully requests that the proposed legislation regarding the taxation or imposition of royalties or personal examination of the private affairs of mining companies and properties, be not proceeded with at this session, but that all possible facts be first ascertained and collated, and that the fullest consideration be given as to the possible deterrent effect which said legislation may have upon the investment of capital in this great and developing industry, in which this county and district are so vitally interested."

The motion was unanimously adopted.

A motion prevailed that the name of Mr. C. M. Stork be added to the Executive committee.

CANADIAN NORTHERN RAILWAY.

The proposed route of this railway through the city and vicinity, was discussed.

Mr. H. C. Hunt said the proposed route was along the bay front from Shannonville to near Brighton. It would go, as proposed, across the entrance to Queen Victoria Park, up the bay shore and through the Deaf and Dumb Institution property, and would cross the Trent road twice within a short distance. This was cause for alarm.

Col. Ponton said the routes as surveyed for the C.P.R. and the C.N.R. both crossed the approach to Victoria Park. The Canadian Northern contemplates going through the water front of the bay, and it will go just where it pleases unless the city of Belleville asks to have a say in the matter of location. We want railways and we want peace, but not at any price. He claimed the railway had no right to take all the water front in the city. There was no reason why the C.N.R. could not run parallel with the G.T.R.

Mr. Graham—"It will not do that."

Col. Ponton, continuing, said that the C.N.R. were contemplating advertising a scenic route of the water front of Belleville. He thought the Board of Trade and City Council should have a voice in the matter, and it would have to be heard soon. Let the railway come in here, but not utilize all our beautiful water front.

Mr. Graham said the Railway Commission might be consulted in the matter as they no doubt would have something to do as to the location of the route. The Board might apply for a hearing before them.

Mr. J. W. Johnson said that nature had given us a valuable asset in the water front and no railway can recompense us for it.

Mr. T. Manley said we want all the railways we can get, and yet there now appeared to be an objection to the railway coming into the city. Let us encourage and not discourage railways.

Mr. H. F. Ketcheson said one survey of the C.N.R. was by way of Frankford and Foxboro, and if there was objection taken to the route in the city it might not come in here but take the other route.

Mr. P. J. Wims was not in accord with offering any objection to the railway coming in here. We need competition in the way of railways.

Mr. Johnson thought that the G.T.R. was giving the city a good service.

Mr. Graham said that competition was necessary, as he knew it from actual experience.

Col. Ponton moved, seconded by Mr. H. C. Hunt the following resolution:

"That the Board of Trade of the City of Belleville respectfully request that the Minister of Railways and Canals do give this Board and City of Belleville an opportunity of being heard before approval is given of the plans of the Canadian Northern or any other railway along the water front of the Bay of Quinte. And that this resolution be forthwith forwarded to the Minister of Railways and the member for West Hastings."

Although the resolution was declared carried it was by no means unanimous, as some of those present did not vote at all.

The Board then adjourned.

This morning it was reported where the horse and cutter might be found, and Mr. Sparrow was so notified.

The Funeral Train

The special funeral train bearing the remains of the late Dr. Oronhyatekha passed through this city at 1.15 this afternoon. A stay was made here long enough to change engines. A number of citizens were at the station whilst the train was there. In all probability a goodly number of Bellevillians will attend the obsequies which will be held at Deseronto to-morrow morning. The remains will be interred in the Mohawk cemetery on the Indian reservation.

The Gas Question.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer;

Sir, — In your issue of Tuesday you quote "A large taxpayer of this city" as dissenting from the view I expressed in a recent letter that the city does not need to bring a gas expert here, and you also published "the report current on the street that Belleville has been getting 1500 feet less gas from a ton of coal than other places."

A Citizen's interest in the success of the gas works is my reason for writing you again. Let me deal with the two points mentioned above.

First—What constitutes an expert? Knowledge and practical experience. Mr. Middleton, the gas maker at the works, has been making gas there for seven years. I have known and seen the work of all the gas experts brought here during the last 20 years and I don't hesitate to state that in knowledge, in the result of his work, and in devotion to duty, Mr. Middleton has been the equal of any of them and better than some of them.

Second — The statement that "Belleville has been getting 1500 feet less gas from a ton of coal than other places" if true, should be capable of proof. In order to ascertain the basis for the assertion, I went to the gas works last evening. I asked for the "Daily Record" of coal and oil used and the number of feet of gas produced from the materials. I was told that such a record had not been required from the gas maker for 18 months, that when the book formerly kept for the purpose was filled another book was not supplied, and, further, that the retort system, now mostly used, would necessitate scales near the coal shed for the purpose of such a record, no scales have been supplied.

In view of these facts, and in justice to Mr. Middleton, your informant should make public over his

MR. S. MASSON IS NOW POLICE MAGISTRATE OF BELLEVILLE.

The Commission appointing Mr. S. Masson as Police Magistrate for the city arrived this morning and he was sworn in by Mr. Anderson, County Attorney. His Worship then proceeded to the police court and took his seat upon the bench, and the court was regularly declared open for business by Chief Newton.

Before proceeding with the ordinary business, Mr. Anderson extended congratulations to the newly-appointed Magistrate hoping that the same friendly feelings which had always existed between His Worship and the members of the Bar would still exist.

In replying the Magistrate thanked Mr. Anderson for his kind expressions and stated that his relationship with the members of the Bar would, he hoped always be cordial. In regard to his position, he would do all in his power for the proper administration of justice.

Sudden Death Of Wellington Russell

WELL - KNOWN RESIDENT OF AMELIASBURG PASSED AWAY LAST NIGHT.

Death came suddenly shortly after 6 o'clock last evening to Mr. Wellington Russell, a well-known yeoman residing near Rednersville, in the township of Ameliasburg.

Mr. Russell, at the hour named was about to visit one of his sons-in-law, in the township, and had started off with a horse and cutter when he was seized with a choking sensation. He returned to the house and in a few minutes expired. Heart disease was given as the cause of death. Mr. Russell was a lifelong resident of the township and was respected by all who knew him. He had apparently enjoyed the best of health up to a few minutes before he expired.

Deceased was an adherent of the Methodist Church, and was in politics a staunch Conservative. A widow and a family of two sons, Clarence and Wesley, and two daughters, Mrs. R. Alyea and Mrs. Wm. Way, all of whom reside in Ameliasburg township, survive.

The Water Main.

BREAK IN WEST BELLEVILLE GIVING MUCH INCONVENIENCE.

Considerable inconvenience was experienced in the city last night owing to the fact that the water supply was cut off in the early part of the evening. This could not be avoided owing to the serious break in the main on Coleman street, near the junction of Henry street. All night a number of men were at work making an excavation in order to locate the break, but it was not exactly located. At an early hour this morning the gates were again opened and water allowed to go through the various mains. In all probability the water will again have to be shut off to-night, in order that the break may be repaired.

THE BREAK LOCATED.

The Intelligencer has since learned that the break in the main has been located, and the management are confident that it can be repaired between 6 and 12 o'clock to-night, therefore the water was turned on again to-day, so as to give as little inconvenience to water users as possible. It is confidently believed that by to-morrow the break will be repaired and everything all right once more.

Plans Have Arrived

Col. Stewart has received plans of the proposed new drill shed, which, judging by the said plans, will be quite an ornate structure. It will have main doors facing on Bridge and Pinnacle streets, the officers' quarters being on the corner of Bridge and Pinnacle. The plans call for the erection of a building of cut stone front, with brick elevation. No intimation has yet been received as to when the work will start, but as Col. Stewart expresses it, "it looks as though things were moving." The building will have an exterior measurement of 210 x 135 feet.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"UNCLE JOSH SPRUCEBY."

A charming comedy drama, carload of special scenery and mechanical effects, a big band, grand operatic orchestra and many new and novel specialties, a strong company of acting people with the "Uncle Josh Spruceby" company will no doubt draw a large crowd during the engagement at the Carman to-morrow night. In these days when the public is flooded with "farce comedies" with no plot, it is a relief to witness a play of this character. Its pure homely humor and rustic pastoral scenes give the theatre-goer a rest from the "fast and furious" kind of show, and for those that like sensation the play has realistic scenes and startling climaxes that will surely give the necessary "shivers."

CHIEF RANGER LIES IN STATE.

Body of Dr. Oronhyatekha Brought to Toronto Yesterday.

Toronto, March 7.—The remains of Dr. Oronhyatekha, founder of the I. O. F., were brought to the city yesterday morning. Citizens and Foresters received the body at the station. Through the streets, lined by thousands, the funeral cortege passed. In the parade were many prominent men, and the civic deputation had its place. Hundreds walked on foot, behind the bands with their dirges, behind the hearse and its burden. That procession was international, too. Not only was Canada present in sentiment and fact, but the country to the south was represented. The departed was British, but his personal and fraternal associations had girdled the globe. The Temple Building, the Supreme Chief's monument, as it will now be regarded, was included in the itinerary. The casket was taken to Massey Hall, where the body lay in state, a guard of honor remaining on duty. Flowers were banked across the auditorium. A conspicuous design was a huge anchor, which stood at the head, with a portrait of the dead leader. The public was not admitted at noon, but the people thronged the hall from 2 o'clock. A public memorial service was held last night. To-day the body was taken to Deseronto for interment.

WHO GOT THE PLUMS?

Information About the Huron Ontario Railway Is Asked For.

Ottawa, March 7.—The Senate Railway Committee yesterday morning considered the Huron and Ontario Railway bill which has passed the Commons. Mr. R. G. Code, Ottawa, objected to the bill on behalf of the Ontario Government. He declared that as the line was entirely in the province of Ontario and should be left to Ontario to be dealt with. Mr. S. F. Kilgore, the promoter, stated the charter had been granted for the original line before 1896. What was now asked was power to construct some branches. The plans for construction had been approved by the Railway Commission. The $11,000,000 bonds had been underwritten.

Who Got Bonuses.

Senator Lougheed pressed to know who had got $3,000,000 capital stock which Mr. Kilgore acknowledged had been largely given as bonus to bond purchasers.

Senator Mitchell said Parliament had never made a practice of requiring such information. It would be very interesting, however, and the same information should be obtained from railway enterprises in future, and an enquiry might well be made into the past. For instance it had been reported that Lord Strathcona had got some stock at exceedingly reasonable figures. The bill was reported without vote and only a few dissenting voices.

Made In Canada.

Ottawa, March 7.—In the Senate yesterday afternoon the Meat Inspecting Bill was taken up in committee.

Sir Richard Cartwright said there had been objection from the lobster-packers of the Maritime Provinces and the salmon-canners of British Columbia to the provision requiring a Canadian label on all cans. If it be shown to the satisfaction of the Government that a label would prevent sale in any British or foreign market, the Government will allow the unlabelled can to be exported.

WILL PROBE TO BOTTOM

Premier Whitney Makes an Outspoken Announcement.

Intends Full and Complete Investigation Into License Scandals—Will Conceal Nothing—Due to Former Administration—New Era Has Dawned, and Nobody Engaged In Evil Practices Will Be Screened.

Toronto, March 7.—The strong and straightforward calibre of the Provincial Government was evidenced in the prompt and effective manner in which the ministry cleared up the culmination of certain corridor comment in a couple of matters at the Legislature yesterday.

The reported rumors regarding an alleged private transfer of the exceptionally rich mining property of the Nancy-Helen Mining Co. on the Temiskaming & Northern Ontario Railway right of way to the member for Algoma, Mr. W. R. Smyth, were effectively laid to rest by the explanation of Hon. Dr. Reaume, who, in the temporary absence of the Minister of Mines, answered the question by Mr. May (Ottawa).

Alleged Private Transfers.

Mr. May asked,—1. To whom were the following lots, in the Town Site of Cobalt, in the Township of Coleman, or any right, or interest therein, sold:—numbers 390, 391, 392, 393, 453, 454, 455, 456, 467, 468, 469. 2. Were the lots sold under the instruction of the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway Commission, or, if not, under whose instructions. 3. Was it by auction, or private sale. 4. Were the lots sold by private sale after having been advertised for sale by auction, and if so, why. 5. To whom were they sold and for what price. 6. To whom was the patent, or patents issued.

Hon. Dr. Reaume Explains.

Hon. Dr. Reaume's replies were as follows,—

1. These lots were not sold, but were leased to the Nancy-Helen Mining Co., Ltd. 2. The lots were leased by the T. & N. O. Railway Commission. 3 and 4. Three of the lots were, together with upward of 50 others, advertised to be disposed of by auction, and there were no bidders. 5 and 6. Therefore instructions were given to Supt. Black to offer leases of them at the upset prices, and the Commission approved of an agreement for leasing them to Mr. W. R. Smyth, who had been an applicant for these lots before they were offered by auction and who was the only applicant for them. The Commissioners were then instructed that Mr. Smyth had transferred his interest to the Nancy-Helen Mining Co. and the lease was given to them accordingly. The price was $500 for each lot and a royalty of 25 per cent. on ore up to $1,000 in value per ton, and 50 per cent. on all other ores. These are the terms on which the mining rights were disposed of to all applicants on the town site of Cobalt.

Will Conceal Nothing.

The other matter of special interest was the characteristically outspoken announcement of the Prime Minister regarding the license investigation going on in Toronto. Any trouble that had arisen was the result of years of training in impropriety under the former administration, when "money was sweated out of the hotel-keepers for election purposes." A new era had, however, dawned and any Conservatives found keeping up these practices would be punished. "Everything will be exposed to the light of day," was Hon. Mr. Whitney's concluding comment.

Licensing Improprieties.

The discussion was brought on by Mr. McDougal (Ottawa), who wanted information about license matters at Fort Frances, where he had learned improprieties were going on.

The Provincial Secretary was glad to furnish all the information. The condition of affairs at Fort Frances was best described by a minister who had written that the regulation had been better enforced there for the past 18 months than ever before. So much so that the reverend gentleman, heretofore a Liberal, expressed his intention of hereafter following Mr. Whitney. It was an effective counter.

It was private members day in the House, and the afternoon session was devoted to advancing local legislation, while in the evening the members resumed work on the estimates.

The agricultural estimates gave rise to some smart challenges, and the San Jose scale vote was left over. The treasury and provincial auditor's vote, the public institution votes, except that for the central prison and the smaller educational votes were all passed in committee.

Mr. Torrance withdrew his bill for the administrative control of pulmonary phthisis.

Bills Read.

The following bills were read a first time:

Respecting the weekly court.—Mr. McDougal.

Respecting the Town of Cornwall and the Modern Bedstead Co.—Mr. Torrance.

To confirm the taxes in the Township of Etobicoke.—Mr. Lennox.

Respecting the City of Windsor.—Mr. Bowyer.

Respecting the City of Toronto.—Mr. Crawford.

Respecting the Petrolea and Rapid Railway Co.—T. H. Preston.

To incorporate the Village of Hepworth.—A. G. MacKay.

To incorporate the Thessalon and Northern Railway Co.—Mr. Sutherland.

Respecting the St. George Cemetery in the Township of Bentinck.—Mr. Duff.

To incorporate the Silver Belt Electric Railway Co.—Mr. Sutherland.

To confirm bylaw No. 742 of the City of Brantford.—Mr. Duff.

NO MORE SUNDAY CARS.

the private bills committee, Premier Whitney yesterday ruled, on behalf of the Government, against allowing any more Sunday car privileges in Ontario. The announcement was in connection with the application of Port Arthur to be allowed to operate such a service. The letter read:

"The Government spent a great deal of time last year in preparing the 'Ontario Railway Act of 1906.' The provision relating to Sunday traffic received a great deal of attention. There can be no doubt that the act, as finally passed, represents the feeling of a large majority of the people of this province.

"It is possible that in some respects, and from some points of view, it may impose hardship upon certain localities. Under the circumstances, however, having in view the care bestowed upon the preparation of the act and our conviction that it represents the views of the people of the province, the Government feels that it would be taking a distinct step backwards to allow, within twelve months of the passage of the act, a new exception to be made which would open the door to a large number of similar applications in the future, and thus practically destroy the effect of the act as finally passed."

BLIZZARD IN MANITOBA.

May Prevent Farmers From Voting In Provincial Election.

Winnipeg, March 7.—The night before the climax of the fiercest political fight Manitoba has ever experienced, found a big snowstorm sweeping over the province and it is feared the roads will be blocked for farmers. This would seriously affect the vote.

The result is much in doubt. With 25,000 new voters in the province, neither side can begin to figure it out.

The betting is that Roblin will be returned with a greatly reduced majority.

Nearly everything depends on how much influence the Tribune, which has bitterly opposed the Conservatives, has with the independent electorate. Roblin, Rogers and Agnew are sure of election, but it is doubtful whether Campbell or McFadden will be returned.

On the other hand, betting is that Edward Bown, Liberal leader, will be defeated in Portage, while Horace Chevrier, the orator of the Liberals in the House, will likely be defeated in St. Boniface.

Winnipeg has been the theatre of the fight, and the Liberals have made a desperate attempt to carry the city. It is generally believed the parties will break even.

Both sides are accusing each other of bribery and corruption.

Roseberry to Oppose Curzon.

London, March 7.—An interesting contest is imminent between Lord Curzon and Lord Rosebery for the vacant chancellorship of Oxford University.

It has been supposed that Lord Curzon, who was nominated to this office some days ago, would be returned without opposition, but now Lord Rosebery also has accepted a nomination, and the matter will be decided on March 14, when the election will be held.

TO SAVE SON'S LIFE

Thaw's Aged Mother Takes Witness Stand on His Behalf.

Pathetic Figure In Murder Trial—She Learned Little by Little of Sorrow Over Which Her Boy Brooded—Breaks Down Twice While Giving Her Evidence — Dr. Wagner Concludes His Testimony.

New York, March 7.—Mr. Jerome yesterday took a new tack in his cross-examination of Dr. Wagner, and asked if in the acts surrounding the killing of White there was anything to enable the witness to differentiate between insanity and intoxication.

Dr. Wagner declared there was nothing whatever to indicate intoxication but much to indicate insanity.

Dr. Wagner further testified yesterday that Thaw was of unsound mind when he married, but had sufficient intelligence to know what he was doing.

Possible Lucid Intervals.

After questioning Dr. Wagner at some length regarding the letter written by Thaw in 1903 to Attorney Longfellow, Mr. Jerome suddenly asked:

"Was there any period between 1903 and 1905 when this defendant was in full possession of his faculties?"

Dr. Wagner hesitated a moment and then replied:

"There are several months in that period of which I have no record. It is possible that there may have been recovery during that time and a condition of soundness."

Mother Takes Stand.

Another dramatic chapter was added to the Thaw trial yesterday, when the grey-haired mother of the defendant took the witness stand to tell what she might toward saving her son.

Mrs. Thaw's story was brief. When Delphin M. Delmas had deftly limited her examination to the change she noted in her son's condition following his return from Paris in 1903, after Evelyn Nesbit had told him her life story, Jerome, with the greatest respect and consideration, conducted a short and ineffectual cross-examination.

Then the mother-love welled strong in Mrs. Thaw and she felt she had not done her all. She was loath to leave the witness chair.

"There is still the question of heredity," she protested, when Delmas and Jerome told her she might step down.

"I have asked you, meantime, all that is considered necessary," said Thaw's attorney, with the utmost deference.

Twice during her recital Mrs. Thaw broke down and was unable to proceed.

He Lost All Interest.

She said that when Harry went home in 1903, he seemed depressed and apparently had lost all interest in life. He passed sleepless nights and would often leave the table at meals to play upon the piano. She told in a motherly way of her solicitude for the boy after he had mentioned the "wickedest man in New York, who had ruined his life."

Mrs. Thaw told of the part in the evenings leading up to her son's marriage and his condition in that interval.

Mrs. Thaw's story was deeply impressive in its simplicity and brevity. Her anxiety to go on and tell more added immeasurably to the meaning of her presence as a witness. The court-room listened almost breathlessly to each word she uttered and there was a general sigh of relief when Mr. Jerome announced that his brief examination was ended.

Threatens Lunacy Test.

If Harry Thaw's fate is placed in the hands of the 12 men in the jury box who yesterday heard his mother's story, there seems little doubt that what she said will carry wonderful weight with it. But Mr. Jerome gave the impression that he may use the mother's testimony in another direction—in his fight to have a commission appointed to test the present state of mind of the defendant.

He became involved in a dispute with Mr. Delmas, during which he uttered publicity for the first time the threat as to a lunacy commission.

The court is not sitting to-day owing to a death in Judge Fitzgerald's family.

Taxation Of Mining Profits

Government Measure Endorsed By Members of Opposition.

Public Revenue Must Receive Share of Mineral Wealth--Studying the People's Interest--Scale of Taxation to Be Uniform--Farmers Will Not Pay For Natural Gas Consumed at Home.

Toronto, March 8.—The Government bill of Hon. Frank Cochrane, the Minister of Lands and Mines, providing for the taxation of mining profits was endorsed in the Legislature yesterday by several Liberal members. Hon. Mr. Mackay and Hon. R. Harcourt expressed their approval of the principle of the measure, and Mr. Hyslop (Huron) went so far as to eulogize and congratulate the Minister upon it.

A Just Provision.

In moving the second reading of the bill Hon. Mr. Cochrane briefly explained its leading features. The object, he said, was to obtain for the public revenue a reasonable share of the mineral wealth which has passed, or shall hereafter pass, from the general ownership of the people to the ownership of individuals.

"In every civilized country on the globe," said the Minister," the people are insisting upon their law-makers keeping steadily and persistently in view the people's right and the people's interest in dealing with the public utilities and public resources. This is particularly the case with those mineral deposits which, being the property of the Crown, or of the people, are handed over on very easy terms to the private individual.

"I trust there is nothing in the bill injurious to the mining industry of this country—an industry yet in its infancy, but rapidly taking its place among the leading factors in the prosperity of the people of Ontario. I would hesitate to press the measure did I believe its provisions to be calculated to cripple, or even hamper that industry in the smallest degree. I do not think it will have any such effect, but I am confident that the people of Ontario demand, and rightly demand, that the great prizes in the shape of enormously rich mineral lands should no longer be given away for practically nothing, but that a fair share of their value shall be obtained to assist in defraying the necessary expenses of Government, to provide the means for benefitting the mining industry itself, and to assist in developing the resources of the newer parts of the Province."

Uniform Scale of Taxation.

Hon. Mr. Cochrane proposed a change in the bill as now printed, which calls for a sliding scale of taxation, viz., the percentage of tax increases with the increase of profits. This was objectionable to the mining men and their arguments were convincing enough to lead to a change to a uniform scale. The first draft would penalize success and fine men for careful and economical management. He would, therefore, make this amendment in committee.

Answering Col. Atkinson (North Norfolk) Mr. Cochrane said it was not the intention to tax farmers who were themselves using natural gas, but only those who were trafficking in it on a commercial basis.

Mr. T. H. Preston (South Brant) protested against the tax on natural gas, which was destined to provide cheap light, heat and fuel. The Government, in his opinion, should rather bonus than tax.

Tax On Natural Gas.

Hon. J. P. Whitney, the Prime Minister, said the Government could not put an export tax on natural gas. It was on that account—and only on that account—that the Government had determined to put a tax on natural gas and rebate for that used locally.

Mr. E. Jessop (Lincoln) said that if the tax would prevent the exportation of natural gas from Ontario to the United States it was a step in the right direction. Last year over 97,000,000 cubic feet of natural gas was exported to the United States.

In reply to Mr. McCoig (West Kent) the Minister said that the Government would meet the question of meters in various ways. Mr. McCoig contended that near Chatham natural gas was forced ten miles, and that in this way there was considerable loss. He thought the meters should be placed where the gas was delivered.

No Double Taxation.

Hon. Richard Harcourt (Monk) endorsed the principle of the bill. Relative to gas there was no difficulty if the tax were on the gross output, but when one came to profits he was on illusory grounds. Mr. Harcourt wanted to know if it was fair to tax a natural gas company for revenue, and now to tax them again.

Hon. Mr. Cochrane said that the bill provided against that.

"That settles my objection then," said Mr. Harcourt. "We did not want double or triple taxation."

Messrs. Smith (Sault Ste. Marie) and Labrosse (Prescott) spoke against the bill and Hon. Mr. Mackay and Mr.

against the position in which the purchasers of Cobalt Lake found themselves. They had already paid the Government more than it had received from all the other mines. Mr. Hyslop (Huron) on the contrary declared the bill a step in the right direction, and, although a Liberal, congratulated the Minister of Mines upon his courage in dealing well with a difficult subject.

The measure passed its reading without division and the House adjourned.

Ship Sights Big Iceberg.

New York, March 8.—An immense field of ice was sighted off the Newfoundland banks by the steamer Saint Cuthbert, which arrived here yesterday from Antwerp. The Saint Cuthbert steamed for 50 miles along the southeast edge of the floe.

AMONG HIS OWN PEOPLE.

Body of Dr. Oronhyatekha Taken to Deseronto For Burial.

Deseronto, March 8.—The body of Oronhyatekha arrived at Deseronto at 2.30 yesterday afternoon. The special train stopped at Napanee, where a large number of people boarded the train and saw the casket and flowers.

A large crowd awaited the detraining of the casket and a party of Indians followed the cortege five miles to the "Pines."

Sixty persons traveled on the special train, including four nephews of Oronhyatekha, Chief Hiawatha of the Cayuga and three other Indians from the Six Nations reserve. All the executive were on board, also Dr. and Mrs. Acland Oronhyatekha and Mrs. Percy Johnston.

It is said by the Indians that Oronhyatekha's brother is dangerously ill on the Grand River reserve.

ARMIES CANNOT UNITE.

Ballington Booth Declares General's Force Is Autocratic.

New York, March 8.—Ballington Booth, head of the Volunteers of America, declares that there can be no amalgamation of the volunteers and the Salvation Army in America as long as he lives, and that he has not heard of the arrival of General Booth, his father, in this country until he read of it in the newspapers.

It had been reported that General William Booth, as head of the Salvation Army, would try to bring about a union between the older organization and the volunteers through his son, but the latter declared the principles upon which the two organizations were founded are so different that a union is impossible.

He said the heads of the Salvation Army are autocrats, and the leaders of the Volunteers of America democratic.

Suffragists Will Fight.

London, March 8.—The woman suffragists, by insisting upon martyrdom are placing the authorities in an embarrassing position.

Mrs. Despard, sister of General French, and several of her fellow agitators, were released from prison yesterday after a term of confinement for participation in the recent agitation at the House of Commons.

Several of the suffragists delivered speeches in which they announced their purpose of forcing the authorities to keep them in prison by committing breaches of the peace until suffrage legislation is enacted.

Bryce Coming.

Washington, March 8.—Ambassador Bryce called upon Secretary of State Root yesterday and had a general talk about pending matters of business in which the State Department and British embassy are actually interested.

The ambassador has arranged to go to Canada next month to confer with Earl Grey, the Governor-General, concerning all questions of a diplomatic nature now at issue between the United States and Canada.

Pupils Kill Teacher.

Gotebo, Okla., March 8.—Because he attempted to whip a boy pupil, Perry Evans, teacher of a country school was assaulted yesterday by a number of male pupils and injured so that he died a few hours later.

The young men who committed the assault are under arrest.

A few facts in regard to the new P. M.'s career may be of interest. He came to Belleville in 1875, and studied law with Messrs. Ponton and Denmark, being called to the Bar in 1881. He then moved to Mount Forest, and afterwards to Peterboro, in each of which places he stayed two years. Returning to Belleville he formed a partnership with the late N. B. Falkiner, which continued till 1892. Since then Mr. Masson has held various civic offices, such as City Solicitor. After the death of the late John Bell he was appointed County Solicitor, which position he still holds. Mr. Masson was born in Seymour township, we don't know how many years ago.

It now turns out that many of the essential parts of the celebrated Ross rifle are manufactured in the United States. And for this poor excuse for a weapon, which is more dangerous to the man behind than the man in front of the gun; which British army experts refused to have anything to do with, and which the Northwest Mounted Police side-stepped because they feared accidents during target practice, the Canadian Government has already spent over $800,000, for which they have received less than 5000 rifles! Lazier, then living on a farm in Thurlow, but since 1881, citizens of the City of Belleville. Her sorrowing family are Walter L., of Calgary, and Mrs. W. H. T. Peake, of Winnipeg, besides whom there are Richard, of New York, and Frank and George, of Seattle (whom she loved as her own), none of whom could be with her in her last illness, saving her daughter, Mrs. Peake. Her only sister is Mrs. Isaac Wilson, of Bloomfield. Of brothers she had eight, three of whom survive her, viz., William Stickney, of Iowa; Jacob, of St. Louis, and Willet, of Kansas City. For many years she had been a consistent member of the Methodist Church, worshipping with the Tabernacle congregation. Her illness was only since Christmas, and that was broken by a short respite,

Fire Protection For the Schools.

One of the most important questions engaging the attention of the Canadian press and people at present is that of fire protection for schools, the equipment of school buildings with fire escapes, and the general preparation for the rescue of children in case of fire. The recent Hochelaga school disaster, in which so many little victims lost their lives, has aroused a wide-spread interest in the question of avoiding a repetition of such a terrible affair.

Various measures to ensure the rescue of our little ones, should a school be on fire, have been suggested and discussed. Fire drill is one of the first measures of precaution mentioned, but it is demanded that it must be a genuine fire drill—not the mere arranging of the pupils in line, or sending them to get their clothes before they march out. The chief defect of the fire drill, as usually practised, is that it is not attended by any of the factors of a real fire, and in the case of an outbreak with a panic which would defeat the very object sought to be accomplished—that of getting the children quickly out of the available means of exit.

It is almost inviting a heavy death roll in case of fire to place little children on the upper flats of a school. The "babes" must be kept on the ground floor and as near the door as possible. There is, of course, always the danger of the larger children becoming panic-stricken, and in the haste to escape from above trampling on the smaller ones as they meet below. But in almost every case it will be easier to restrain the older ones than to hasten the little tots, and this is but another instance of where the discipline effected by fire drill has its value.

Belleville is fortunate in being pretty well secure as far as these two measures of precaution are concerned. Fire drill has long been practised and in most of our schools the smaller children are on the ground floor.

One increased measure of precaution that is being recommended in many cities is the erection of outside fire escapes for all school buildings, and this is likely to receive consideration by the Boards of Education everywhere. There is, of course, two sides to the question of fire escapes. No one who thinks at all can fail to see what snares many of them might be in the hour of danger, or what perilous temptations they would offer at all times to adventurous boys. On the other hand, the first mentioned defect would largely disappear in case of a fire by the outward assistance which would quickly be available. The older children from the upper rooms might well be trained in seeking escape by the fire escapes instead of the inside stairway, so that the outside means of escape would not be an altogether unknown and untried instrument until the hour of danger comes.

It will take some trouble to practice the pupils on fire escapes, because there will have to be outside assistance answering to the assistance of the firemen, but it is contended that the trouble should be taken and the children familiarized with this means of escape.

Most people know that if they have been sick they need Scott's Emulsion to bring back health and strength.

But the strongest point about Scott's Emulsion is that you don't have to be sick to get results from it.

It keeps up the athlete's strength, puts fat on thin people, makes a fretful baby happy, brings color to a pale girl's cheeks, and prevents coughs, colds and consumption.

Food in concentrated form for sick and well, young and old, rich and poor.

And it contains no drugs and no alcohol.

McCourt Killed By An Alderman's Son.

HOW THE TROUBLE HAPPENED WHICH DEPRIVED BELLEVILLE OF A PLAYER LAST NIGHT.

Cornwall, March 7.—Owen McCourt, "Bud," the famous rover of the Cornwall hockey club, died about 8 a.m. to-day, in the Hotel Dieu as the result of the injuries he received in last night's hockey match.

"Reddy" McMillan, the captain of the Cornwall team, said that he was an eye-witness of the fatal fracas. He says that Chamberlain, not Throop, and McCourt, had a mix-up near the south end of the rink. Chamberlain followed McCourt and struck him. McCourt, as was his style, dropped his stick and struck Chamberlain with his fist. He says that Masson, who was thirty or forty feet away, started up and struck McCourt, who fell. Masson continued towards McMillan, to whom he gave a blow with the side of the stick. Both brought up against the fence with their sticks crossed, and here McMillan claims that he received a blow behind the ear from some one which dazed him, and when he recovered it was all over.

It all happened in a second or two and both men were helped off the ice and a doctor sent for. McCourt returned to the game for a few minutes, but complaining that he was "all in," he retired to the dressing-room. These were his last words, as he was unconscious when Dr. D. O. Alguire reached his side a minute or so later. He was taken to the Hotel Dieu, where an operation by Drs. Alguire and Hamilton revealed a broken blood vessel in the brain.

The fracture was almost in the same place as that of Alcide Larin, the Alexandria player, who was killed two years ago at Maxville. McCourt never regained consciousness, and passed away about 8 o'clock this morning.

When it was discovered that McCourt's condition was critical, Chief of Police Smyth laid an information before Hill Campbell, J. P., charging Masson with assault with intent to do grievous bodily harm, and this morning just before McCourt breathed his last, Chief Smyth arrested Masson at the Hotel Duquette, and conveyed him to the lock-up.

Masson, who is a son of Alderman Masson, of Ottawa, wanted bail, but this was out of the question when it was known that McCourt had passed away. The charge against Masson will be amended to-day.

Coroner Hamilton has empanelled a jury, and will hold an inquest into the cause of McCourt's death.

He was the eldest son of the late Patrick McCourt and was born in Cornwall 22 years ago. Last fall he had a severe attack of typhoid fever, but recovered and was able to take part in recent matches. Last night he seemed to have a premonition of something and did not want to play. He did not come to the rink till nearly 9 o'clock, and only went on at the last minute, because the local team were handicapped by the absence of several other men.

FUNERAL.

The funeral of the late Mrs. N. W. Lazier will take place at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, March 12, from the family residence.

Resolution Of Sympathy.

The Woman's Christian Association met Tuesday afternoon, and passed the following resolution:

The trustees of the W.C.A. desire to convey to Mrs. Hamilton and family their sincere sympathy at this time of severe trial, in the loss of a loving husband and father. For many years Mr. Hamilton was a member of the Advisory Board; he was always interested in the work of the hospital, ever ready with practical aid, and to assist with counsel and advice. We trust that strength and comfort may be granted from the Father of all comfort and blessing.

Signed on behalf of the trustees,
Florence H. Yeomans, Pres.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"UNCLE JOSH SPRUCEBY" TO-NIGHT.

A charming comedy drama, carload of special scenery and mechanical effects, a big band, grand operatic orchestra and many new and novel specialties, a strong company of acting people with the "Uncle Josh Spruceby" company, will, no doubt, draw a large audience to the Carman to-night. Anyhow, judging by the press notices, it deserves to.

Literary Notes

CANADIAN PICTORIAL.

Delightful Number of The National Illustrated Monthly.

The cover-picture of the "Canadian Pictorial" for March is a happy Canadian girl with her toboggan, a picture that breathes the crisp air of winter. The winter idea predominates throughout the number. There is winter in England—a slushy London street scene; winter in Holland—a bracing skating scene on a Dutch canal; winter in Scotland—the trying task of the shepherd; winter in a Canadian hunting camp; and then there is a page of pictures showing the interesting process of harvesting the ice of the St. Lawrence. A page is given to the Davis-Swettenham incident, the sequel to the earthquake at Kingston, Jamaica, which threatened to become an international question, and the wreck of the Berlin has made terribly timely a vivid picture of the capsizing of a life-boat. Wild animals under the auctioneer's hammer will please young as well as old, and even in warmer climates they will be interested in a large group of snowshoers in the picturesque costume. The central feature of the issue is a double page production of Munkacsy's famous painting, 'Christ before Pilate," which is specially effective as Eastertide approaches. A Canadian artist's painting of the British Premier and a Canadian sculptor's bust of a Canadian novelist are given. The statesman figuring in the series of Canadian public men is this month the leader of the Opposition, Mr. R. L. Borden, and in the women's department there is a portrait and sketch of Mrs. Borden. "Canadian girls in athletics," "Models in lingerie," "Arts and crafts," and the usual patterns are also features of this department. The news and humorous pages are fully up to the high standard set by the initial number of the "Canadian Pictorial."

In order to start a movement to improve the condition of earth roads in Ontario, "The Farmer's Advocate," in co-operation with the Public Department of the Ontario Government, is offering $100 in prizes for the best results from a season's use of the inexpensive implement called the split-log drag. There are two sets of prizes, one for the Eastern and one for the Western part of the Province. The first prize in each case is $25, second prize $15, and third prize $10. There is no fee to enter, and the conditions are very simple. The judging will be done by Mr. A. W. Campbell, Good Roads Commissioner. Fuller particulars may be obtained by dropping a card to "The Farmer's Advocate," London, Ont. We might add that the entries for this exceedingly interesting and practical competition will close on March 27th.

A MAGISTRATE'S EVIDENCE IN FAVOR OF ZAM-BUK

MR. PERRY J.P.

Read carefully the evidence of Magistrate Perry given below and you will find that judged by men of experience who are fully qualified to decide. Zam-Buk more than fulfils all that is claimed for it.

Facts About Zam-Buk

Zam-Buk is different to the older ointments and salves in being purely herbal, without trace of animal oil or fat.

Zam-Buk applied to an open sore will immediately kill all disease, germs and prevent festering, suppuration or blood poison.

Zam-Buk has penetrating power as well as healing power and used as an embrocation quickly cures rheumatism, sciatica and neuralgia.

Zam-Buk by its miracles of healing has won the praise and confidence of magistrates, doctors, nurses, and men and women who KNOW. Test it at our expense.

"The Pavilion,"
Goldfields, B.C.

After a very fair trial I have proved Zam-Buk eminently satisfactory. In my case it cured a skin rash of five years' standing which no doctor had been able to do any good for. I would certainly encourage any person to keep Zam-Buk in their home. It truly does even more than you claim for it. For my own part I would not now be without it in the house. Yours very truly,
ROGER F. PERRY,
Justice of the Peace for B.C.

I'm neither very bad nor good

My presence doth evoke no cheer;
I'm not a bogie children fear;
Just why I am permitted here
  I am in doubt.

I've haunted no one's nights or days
  To terrorize,
Nor spread my mantle in their ways,
  Sir Walter-wise.
I simply jog along my way
And eat three square meals every day,
Nor seek the hero's part to play
  Where trouble lies.

I do not go about the streets
  To air my ills,
Nor do I fill the yellow sheets
  With scandal thrills.
I never beat my child or wife,
Nor for them jeopardize my life.
But when they dance to fashion's fife
  I pay the bills.

I hope I never need confess
  To some great sin;
I know I'll not for righteousness
  A halo win.
I'm neither crook, nor saint, nor seer
Just a plain man with no veneer;
Ah! that's the reason I am here—
  Just to fill in.

CANADA FOR CANADIANS

Resolution to Limit the Preference on British Goods.

Only Stuff Imported Through Canadian Ports to Get the Benefit—Freight Schedule Criticized — Mr. Logan Wants Fast Atlantic Service—Sir Wilfrid Laurier Says Wait—Time Is Not Yet Opportune.

Ottawa, March 8.—The House upon assembling yesterday went into committee upon the tariff, and Hance Logan (Liberal, N. S.) asked that the British preference be confined to goods imported through Canadian ports. He offered a resolution so limiting the preference after May 1, 1908. At present, of the $69,000,000 of imported goods entitled to the preference, $13,000,000 came through United States ports. He pleaded for a fast Atlantic service, which, incidentally, would contribute to the prosperity of the I. C. R. Respecting the Canadian railway service from the Maritime ports, the all-round freight schedule was the best in the world.

Freight Schedules.

Mr. Kemp (East Toronto) said all favored the principle underlying the resolution. He paid scant respect, however, to his freight schedules. As a matter of fact, in some cases, it required a fortnight to move a carload of freight from Toronto to Montreal. The great bulk of imports, under the preference, came by the St. Lawrence route, he said. There was a strong feeling among the people to exploit Canada for the Canadians, and in time this problem would adjust itself. Meanwhile it must be remembered that many steamship lines charged, for the same freight, twice as much from Liverpool to Halifax as from Liverpool to New York. The railway companies charged a rate that equalized these differences. He was satisfied that all the Canadian railways would oppose Mr. Logan's contention.

For Canada's Benefit.

W. F. Maclean said he intended to give the proposal, not only his sympathy, but his vote. He had no great belief in a measure of trade based on a preference where the Government offering it asked for nothing in return and where the Government receiving it did not see the propriety of giving anything in return.

"If we wish to build up Canadian ports and keep them national ports and connect them with railway systems in the West, let us concentrate everything we can in that direction, and not abandon this national policy for a temporary consideration. I am ready to disturb the U. S. or the bonding privilege any day if it is to the advantage of Canada to do so.

Premier Says Wait.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said that the principle involved in the resolution had been approved by every speaker except the member for East Toronto (Mr. Kemp). A more difficult question was this: Is the time now opportune for its application? Since confederation, our national policy had been to build up Canadian ports and harbors. That policy would not be abandoned. That ultimately the policy embodied in Mr. Logan's resolution would be adopetd every one would admit. It was not, however, feasible to adopt it immediately. Mr. Logan had recognized this in proposing to make his resolution effective a year hence. It would be all right, say, in 1911, when the G.T.P. was completed.

He proposed an amendment providing that "on and after a date to be fixed by the Governor-in-Council the British preference shall apply only to imports brought directly to Canadian reports."

Fielding's Position.

Mr. Foster stirred up the Minister of Customs, and a brisk debate ensued, in which R. L. Borden participated respecting the attitude of the Government in 1904, and the inaction of the tariff commission in not investigating this question.

Dr. Sproule pointed out the inconsistency of the Premier and the Government upon this question, and Dr. Daniel (Conservative, New Brunswick) urged the Minister of Finance to define his position.

Mr. Fielding said that a resolution corresponding to the Logan resolution had passed the House in 1904 without division. Both parties had supported it. He regretted that after forty years we were not commercially independent. He was satisfied, however, that the facilities were sufficient even now to carry out Mr. Logan's resolution. However, he declared his adhesion to the substitute suggested by the first Minister.

The Laurier substitute was carried.

Two-Cent Clause.

Ottawa, March 8.—When the Grand Trunk Railway Co.'s bill came before the Commons Railway Committee yesterday morning it was announced that the company had decided to drop the clause providing for the repeal of that portion of the act of 1852, which provided that the company must maintain a penny-a-mile service. W. F. Maclean wanted to know why the clause was dropped. He had heard that the Minister of Railways had insisted on it. No answer was given by the Minister or the railway. The bill was reported.

Adams Jury Disagrees.

Stops Headache

Zutoo, the Japanese headache cure, is a friend in need.

Don't without a trial, condemn it as something that will hurt you.

Taken when you suspect a headache, it will ward it off. Taken later it will cure the headache in twenty minutes. In every case it will leave you feeling good. It is harmless as the soda which is one of its ingredients.

If it does not do all that is claimed for it, then discard it. But don't confound it with the drug cures and condemn it without a trial. That isn't fair to

EMMY'S REDEMPTION

By Martha McCulloch-Williams.

Copyright, 1906, by Homer Sprague.

"You wish! 'If wishes were horses, beggars might ride.'" Aunt Mag quoted spitefully to her partial namesake, Margaret Emmeline.

The Emmeline had been a standing grievance ever since the girl was christened. Aunt Mag, otherwise Miss Bronson, had an instinct of jealous supremacy toward whatever was her own. Being a just person, she called her only niece by the awkward full name, notwithstanding in all other mouths she was simply Emmy. That was the worst of it. Miss Bronson in her own mind accused Emmy's meek mother of having plotted it from the first. Naturally she had not shed many tears when the offender slipped apologetically out of life, leaving Emmy to the untender mercies of her masterful sister-in-law. Handsome, luckless, Jack Bronson, the father, had died soon after Emmy was born—died on the ocean and been buried at sea—at least that was what his sister had given out. The widow had said nothing. Neither had she worn black—to the anger of Miss Bronson and the great scandal of the village. For once the slim faced woman, who was commonly as wax in stronger hands, had withstood her world, saying only with a dreamy, wistful look, "Jack understands."

Emmy was her father over again—dark eyed, olive skinned, with red lips delicately curved and cheeks like damask roses. She had his gay temper also, his high head, his habit of getting her own way in spite of everything. The village unanimously pronounced her a handful—even for Miss Bronson, whose hand was not light. Emmy was fourteen when her mother died. It was a standing marvel to everybody that she had gone quietly away to boarding school at Miss Bronson's orders, albeit heretofore she had hated and flouted schools of every sort. It was even a greater surprise to have her come back four years later, just the same Emmy for all her wonderful accomplishments.

It was plain she did not love Aunt Mag, but the two kept truce with each other. Those who wondered at it might have understood had they heard poor Lena Bronson's dying admonition: "Obey your Aunt Margaret. Remember what we owe her. Until—unless the debt is paid—it rests with you to make her the only possible return." There had been no need to be more explicit—Emmy understood. Through a passion of tears she had sobbed in answer, "I will."

Obedience had been hard and wearing often, but she had not flinched until it came to the question of marriage. Miss Bronson's precepts were all against her example. "I want you to marry young—and marry well," she had said to Emmy as soon as the girl came home. For a year she had said nothing more save in a general way, but Emmy had come to understand what her elder meant by marrying well. Cliffe Gorton was the only one among her half dozen beaus Miss Bronson approved. She had to approve him indeed, seeing that she had at least half raised him. Judge Gorton, his father, had been her man of business ever since her own father died. His wife, flabby and an invalid, had been pretty well under Miss Bronson's thumb—so had her son, who was, after a sort, her image made vigorous and vital. From his cradle Cliffe had been a prize pretty boy—as fair and blue eyed as Emmy was peach tinted. Although he was three years older, she had thrashed him roundly in the era of short frocks. Possibly it was some reflex memory of the thrashing which made him as a lover appear to her ridiculously impossible.

"If my wishes were horses I'd surely ride away from Granby—and everything," she said, sighing faintly as she glanced at Miss Bronson.

Miss Bronson frowned heavily. "I dare say you'd take the road to Owenton," she said pointedly. "Let's have this thing out, Margaret Emmeline. I see no use in beating about the bush. You were well enough content here until Cliffe Gorton proposed to you and that scatter brained young Hyland came to town. Even you must admit that there is no comparison possible between the two men. Cliffe has everything in his favor; Hyland nothing. In spite of that, since you seem to fancy him"—

"Oh, but I don't! You are wrong—all wrong." Emmy interrupted, with, however, a furious blush.

Miss Bronson went on as though she had not spoken: "I should let you have your way but for one thing. Whoever marries you must be told the truth. Cliffe knows it already—besides he understands. I have done and borne much out of love for my father's name. Your father disgraced it"—

"You must not say so. Nobody was ever quite sure," Emmy panted, her cheeks very white. Miss Bronson glanced at her dry eyed, then looked away. Her own lips were ashen, but they laughed bitterly as she said: "You mean everybody was sure—except your poor, foolish mother. She believed her husband—against right and reason—against the whole world. Do you know exactly what happened? I thought judge had just been paid several thousand dollars which he could not bank. The money, indeed, was in a letter tray on his desk, ready to go into the safe. There was a great hurly burly in the office—people coming and going, clerks getting ready to shut up everything. The judge was in and out of the main office a dozen times while your father sat beside the desk and the tray of money. Two men, clerks there, saw him pick it up and finger the bills in it. Two others heard him entreating the judge a little later to lend him even a thousand dollars. The judge refused"—

"Of course. He would refuse money to the dying," Emmy broke in, her eyes flashing.

Miss Bronson frowned. "He is a just man and kind, else where would we be?" she said. "But to go on. My brother kept the judge so late everybody else had gone, and the safe was still to be shut. The money tray and several other trays were upon the desk. Your father helped the judge hustle them inside it, then rushed away from him and took a train for the city. Next day when the judge opened the safe the tray and the money were missing. He was sure he had put in whatever John gave him. He had knelt in front of the safe, setting things on the floor, and then fitting them in place. The lock had not been touched, and the money had been there with just the two of them. The judge didn't have it. The inevitable conclusion was"—

"I won't believe it. I can't. It was wicked in you to believe— Oh, I know what you did—replaced the money and kept everything quiet—on condition that my father should—disappear. He accepted your condition. I would not. I should have fought. It is because of him I hate the race of Gorton. I will never marry Cliffe—not though you turn me in the street."

"You know I shall not do that," Miss Bronson said heavily. "Understand, though, you shall marry nobody else. I gave up my comfort to save my pride. You shall let no stranger know—our secret—perhaps to spurn you when he did know."

"My father was innocent. But until it is proved I shall abide by your will," Emmy said, her color coming back. "Because it is his wish—and my mother's," she added as she walked to the window. Almost instantly she turned from it, saying huskily: "Judge Gorton is coming—running, almost—and without his hat. What can it mean?"

"More trouble," Miss Bronson said, her mouth setting hard. Next minute the judge burst into the room with a face of ashes. He had something in his hand—something flat and square and dusty.

"Look, Margaret!" he cried, holding it out to Miss Bronson. "Here is the money—every dollar. We found it under the safe when it was moved today. There is just a little space—hardly an inch. I must have crowded the tray into it in my fidgeting with the other things. God forgive me that I did not think of the possibility then. But, remember, I never accused that poor boy"—

"But you let him suffer—judgment and punishment," Emmy cried, springing forward. "Now will you atone by helping me find him?"

"Gladly," said the judge. "It was the first thing I thought of. We will find him if he is living."

"You will not need to search far," Miss Bronson said, with quivering lips. "I have never lost track of him or let him suffer for anything—at least not since poor Lena died."

Next fall there was a wedding at the Bronson place—very quiet, but very happy. The groom's name was Hyland, and the bride was given away by her father, who had very white hair and perpetually brooding eyes. Miss Bronson cried a little to see Emmy go away, but after all was over she laid her hand softly upon her brother's shoulder, saying:

"After all, Jack, we have each other left."

Civilization In France A. D. 1617.

Marshal d'Ancre was assassinated in the streets of Vitry on April 24, 1617. The people of France have always been looked upon as fairly well civilized at that time. Yet this is what these civilized Frenchmen did. They dug up the corpse of D'Ancre, dragged it through the streets to the Pont Neuf, where they hung it up by the feet. Then it was dragged through the streets again to the Place de Greve. D'Ancre, or what was left of him, was dismembered and chopped to pieces, the crowds fighting for morsels of the "excommunicated Jew," as they called him. His entrails were thrown into the river, his ears were sold to the best burgher and what was left was burned in front of the statue of Henri IV. Most horrible of all, his heart was torn out, cooked and eaten by these human wolves. The next day the dead marshal's ashes were offered for sale on the streets, while his wife was accused of sorcery, dragged to the Bastille and her head hacked off.

Holmes on Domestic Economy.

The laughable and the pathetic are sometimes strangely mingled in little exhibitions of domestic economy—a plate of apples, for instance, with the defective parts cut out for the children; a small basket of homemade gingerbread, with one or two pieces of pound cake carefully disposed on the surface so as to appear to the best advantage.—"Autocrat of the Breakfast Table."

CAUGHT BY THE LEG

By James Larne

Copyright, 1906, by M. M. Cunningham

Arthur Morrison, bachelor and clubman and, what is more, reputed to be always in funds, had heard his friend Johnson speak of his shore property a score of times without taking any particular interest in the matter. In a dim way he knew that it was down on Long Island; that it was on the shore of a body of water, presumably the sound; that Johnson was always kicking about the taxes and always abusing some one named Copeland, who owned property next to his domain, and that he himself hadn't the remotest idea of buying either shore or mountain property.

This was all before the great game of poker that will be talked about in the club for many years to come. There were but few members who didn't take a hand occasionally, but the play had seldom become exciting. On the occasion in question, when Morrison, Johnson and three others sat down, no one had any idea of what was coming. And what did come was all because of the extraordinary hands which the evening's play brought out. The deck seemed to be bewitched. Pat straights, flushes and full houses were as plentiful as pairs had been on other occasions.

By and by, when every player had a hand he could back for any reasonable sum, there was raising all along the line, and before three of them grudgingly dropped out and left Morrison and Johnson to fight it out between them there was a record pot on the table. When that had been raised to $2,000 Johnson put in his shore property and made it $10,000. He was raised $1,000 more. With that he put down four aces only to be beaten by a straight flush. Within three days the deeds of the property were in Morrison's hands.

In speaking of Dreamland, as Johnson had named his shore property, he had forgotten to mention one thing. The Copeland he had inveighed against was Colonel Copeland, a retired army officer, sixty years old, and a man very jealous of his rights. Having bought to the edge of the water, he fenced to the edge of the water. This raised a quarrel with the property owners on either side, and the fences had been repeatedly torn down and rebuilt, while the colonel had gone so far as to sit up nights with a shotgun to protect his vested rights. This summer, owing to the colonel's wife being in Europe, Dreamland was in the hands of a caretaker.

It was a month before Morrison went down to see his new property. He would not have gone then but for the letters he received from the caretaker. The latter stated that he had become afraid of his life and that he would flee the place if something was not done to protect him. Mr. Arthur Morrison was not a belligerent man, but he refused to be bulldozed. If Colonel Copeland, his neighbor, was carrying things with too high a hand he would drop down and let him understand that other Long Islanders had a few rights too. Morrison had heard of irascible old men with shotguns, and his belief was that all they needed was some one to talk right up to them.

He reached Dreamland one day just in time to prevent the caretaker from carrying out his project of hurried flight. And all this because in accordance with a standing order from Johnson, he had torn down the division fence, and Colonel Copeland had actually fired at him before proceeding to rebuild it. The injured man went on to give the old military hero such a reputation that Morrison was minded at first to return to New York and put the place in the hands of a real estate agent. But the caretaker urged that he assert his rights as a property owner, and, though it was with many misgivings, he started out to see about that shore fence.

The offending obstacle was nothing more or less than a rail fence that ran down through the scrub brush and over the sand to the edge of the water. It was all on the colonel's own property, and just why this old man should not have a dozen fences there if he wanted them was a puzzle to the newcomer. In fact, he thought it might be a good idea to fence his own shore and would have stopped at this but for the caretaker, who insisted that he climb the mooted fence and walk about on the colonel's land just to show him that he did not own the earth.

A man will do foolish things against his better judgment. Mr. Morrison did one on this occasion. He proceeded to climb the fence. As soon as his back was turned the caretaker made a retreat. If there was to be any shooting he did not want to be counted in.

When Mr. Morrison had hoisted himself to the top of the fence he sat there for a few minutes and surveyed the landscape. There was the same old Long Island sound; there were the same sand and brushes; there were the trees, and beyond the trees he knew was the site of the colonel's house. If the colonel had not told the caretaker that he would aim to kill at the next trespasser on his land Mr. Morrison would have continued to sit on the top rail of that fence until his back ached fell forward. The next thing he knew his foot was caught between the rails and he was hanging head downward, with a broken leg.

In firing on the caretaker, getting into a redhot temper and rebuilding the fence the colonel had taken a chill and was laid up in bed. He could no longer prowl along the shore to guard his vested rights. But he had a substitute, and he gave that substitute stern orders, commanding her to take the shotgun along and fire at any moving thing.

The substitute was his daughter Agnes. She was ruler of the colonel's house and the idol of his heart, and she had taken a more than ordinary interest in that shore fence question. She had announced, too, she was ready to perish in defense of her inalienable rights as heir to the property. This feeling was strong upon her as she donned her jaunty hat and walking skirt and headed for the beach that afternoon. If the fence was still erect, well and good. If it had been torn down again—

"Help, help, help!" were the words that reached the girl's ears as she made her way through the bushes, and the sounds startled her. Some one in tearing down that fence had come to grief. Should she play the good Samaritan? flashed through her mind. No, but she would take advantage of the occasion to give the offender a piece of her mind. Hastening forward, she soon came upon the spectacle of a well dressed stranger hanging head downward from the fence. He could touch the ground with his hands, but he had no power to release his leg.

While she was twenty feet away Miss Copeland made up her mind that the victim must be the new owner of Dreamland and that he had come down to make her father more trouble. She was almost sorry to observe that he was well dressed and in appearance a gentleman and that, though the blood had reddened his face until it had the color of a boiled lobster, he was nevertheless good looking. Mr. Morrison had ceased calling for help when he heard and caught sight of her, and as she approached nearer he politely observed:

"I have, as you see, met with an accident, and I hope it may not be asking too much of you to render me a little aid."

"What were you doing there?" demanded the girl, seeing only that his foot was caught.

"Well—I—er—I think I was admiring the landscape."

"I don't believe it. You were here to tear our fence down."

"I can hardly agree with you there. I should have merely taken a few steps on your land and then gone away."

"You wanted to defy us, did you? You wanted to show my father that you were not afraid of him?"

"If Colonel Copeland is your father, then you must be Miss Copeland," replied Mr. Morrison. "Excuse me, please, but if you will pick up my cardcase I will introduce myself. The position is—er—somewhat embarrassing."

"I'm glad of it. You came to tear down the fence and make more trouble for poor old dad. You are caught in your own trap, and you can stay there for all of me. I'm going home."

"Perfectly natural feeling on your part, my dear young lady, and I must bow to the inevitable. I had no business here. If I am suffering it's all my fault."

"But I don't think you are suffering," she said as she turned back. "You've only caught your foot between the rails. If you call loud enough that man of yours will come and release you."

"Exactly. Don't let me detain you."

"But are you really suffering? If you are, why—why"—

"I am sure that I have broken my leg, and as for that man of mine, the coward seems to have deserted me. However"—

"Oh, that's different, of course. I thought, you know—I thought you were some one—not a gentleman—and that it served you right and that if you hung there for two hours it might do you good."

A panel of the fence was soon taken down and the foot released. Then Miss Copeland hurried home and returned with two men servants and a mattress. Mr. Morrison was removed to the Copeland house and a doctor sent for, the doughty colonel vowing and declaring that the patient should not be admitted. But he was, and his stay was prolonged for weeks.

After a few days the colonel could manage to bear with the situation. After a few more he asked after the patient. In a couple of weeks he spent at least two hours a day getting acquainted with the man who intended to trespass on his land. By and by there came a day when he was seized with a sudden idea, and he marched away to find his daughter Agnes.

"These things generally come out one way," was his blunt remark.

"Yes," she replied, with a blush.

"Well, don't let this come out that way," was his terse and only comment.

However, there are reasons for thinking that it did.

Short on Scripture.

Colonel John Cosgrove, afterward congressman, defending a client accused of some crime, in an eloquent climax shouted: "What does the state's attorney expect? Does he expect my client, like Daniel, to command the sun to stand still and have it obey?" Judge James W. Draffen, lawyer for the opposition, interrupted. "May it please your honor," he said, addressing the bench. "I object to Colonel Cosgrove's

HUMOR

THE HOME.

From Adam Till Now as Told by a Funny Man.

The home is supposed to be a place where children can congregate, protected from the allurements of the world and the advice of the neighbors, and where parents can quarrel judiciously without too much interruption. In reality, however, the home is a place where decorators, painters, furniture men and plumbers meet at intervals in order that they may revel in luxury of their own.

Homes have been in vogue for some little time. Adam and Eve started the first one, and it would have been well with them had it not been necessary to send out the washing. Thus the servant question was started, and the ruin of man followed.

A home is what is left after you have paid the taxes, the interest on the mortgage and the installment man. To own more than one home is not to have any.

Homes were at one time popular in this country. When by going out in the back yard to milk the cow one was in danger of being scalped the home was at the height of its popularity. Owing, however, to the decreasing demand for babies and the increasing demand for alimony homes are being looked upon with disfavor.

In the suburbs the home still flickers on, kept alive by certain instincts handed down from a past age.

It is impossible at present to say just how long the home will continue to exist. It is hard to raise children and mortgages at the same time.

It is quite evident that cooks and children are gradually disappearing. This greatly simplifies the problem.

In all probability the race of the future will be divided into two classes—those who, having become worn out looking for servants, are now in sanitariums being taken care of by the government and those who still continue to work for the trusts, unincumbered by babies or bank accounts.—Tom Masson in Judge.

is an honest, tried and true remedy of unquestionable therapeutic value.

During its record of more than thirty years, its long list of actual cures of those serious ills peculiar to women, entitles Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to the respect and confidence of every fair minded person and every thinking woman.

When women are troubled with irregular or painful functions, weakness, displacements, ulceration or inflammation, backache, flatulency, general debility, indigestion or nervous prostration, they should remember there is one tried and true remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

No other remedy in the country has such a record of cures of female ills, and thousands of women residing in every part of the United States bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable compound and what it has done for them.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. For twenty-five years she has been advising sick women free of charge. She is the daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham and as her assistant for years before her decease advised under her immediate direction. Address, Lynn, Mass.

Rust on Nickel.

Rust may be removed from nickel plating by covering the spots with mutton tallow and letting it stand for several days. If this treatment is followed by rubbing with a good metal polisher and then by a thorough washing with strong ammonia, succeeded by clear water and a final polishing with dry whiting, stubborn cases will yield.

A Mixed Family.

A resident of England, who has been three times married, wedded a woman who had been three times a widow. Children were born in all cases, so that children of seven different parentages live under the same roof.

Protect the Teeth.

Every slightest disorder of the teeth or mouth has its inception in the micro organisms carried to the mouth by the air we breathe or in our food and drink. Cracking nuts with the teeth and biting thread are very bad habits and are always likely to mar or destroy the enamel of the teeth. Use a firm toothbrush.

The Pipe Organ.

An organ with ten pipes in Solomon's temple is the first mention of the pipe organ made in history.

An Old Copper Mine.

If not absolutely the oldest, the Stora Kopparberget in Sweden is the oldest copper mine of which we have any official figures. It has been worked continuously for nearly 800 years.

A Parisian Thief.

Probably the meanest thief ever caught was Louis Bourgard of Paris, who while riding in a cab ripped open the cushions, tied the horsehair into a parcel, sold it while the cab waited for him and with the money procured from selling his "plunder" paid the cabman his fare.

The Aleutian Islands.

The Aleutian islands were so called from the river Olutora, in Kamchatka. The people living at the mouth of this stream were called Alutorsky, and a modification of the name was given to the islands.

Pig's Eye.

A chapel in honor of St. Paul gave a new name to the Minnesota city. It was originally called Pig's Eye, from a nickname given to a one eyed Frenchman who kept a drinking shanty at the place.

Louis Napoleon.

Louis Napoleon was taken prisoner by the Prussians Sept. 2, 1870, and imprisoned in a German castle until the close of the war. He was then allowed to depart, and, going to England, took up his residence in Chiselhurst, where he lived quietly until his death, Jan. 9, 1873.

St. Louis.

St. Louis was named from Louis IX. of France. The name was originally given to his depot and trading station by Pierre Laclede Liguest.

Wheat From Grass.

Fabre in 1855 ended a series of experiments by which he concluded that by careful cultivation for twelve years he had produced a species of perfect wheat from a common grass growing in southern Europe.

The Serpent.

The serpent moves by elevating the scales on its abdomen and using them to push the body forward. The windings are always horizontal. The artists who represent the sinuosities as vertical have never observed the animal in motion. It is impossible for it to move in that way.

Typewriter Ink.

Stenographers should remember that the ink on their typewriter ribbons is poisonous and that getting in a cut or scratch it might do great harm.

A Simple Remedy.

A teacher of health culture declares that a simple remedy for removing the blood from a too active brain is to exercise the muscles of the feet. Stand firmly on the ground and then raise the heel and rest on the toe for a second. Do this for a dozen times or so in succession. It will bring a certain degree of relief after a hard day's mental work.

River of Red Stones.

The Indians called the Des Moines river the Inyanshoh-shahwopka, "River of Red Stones."

Battle of the Moat.

The battle of the Moat was a conflict before Medina between Mohammed and Abu Sofian. It was so called because most of the fighting was done in the moat that Mohammed had dug to protect the city from the besiegers.

Putting on a Plaster.

Before having a plaster applied to the back or chest one should take a deep breath and hold it while the plaster is being put on. If this is done the patient will not be annoyed by that drawing of the skin which is so unpleasant a feature when the plaster is ordinarily applied.

New York's Great Blaze.

The great fire of New York took place in 1835. The value of the property destroyed on this occasion was $15,000,000.

Black For Mourning.

Black was first used for mourning in 1498, when Charles VIII. of France died. His widow, it is said, objected to the white mourning customary at that time as not sufficiently suggestive of the depth of her grief. So she dressed herself all in black and draped her coat of arms in the same somber color, thus setting the fashion, which has been followed ever since.

Cheyenne.

Cheyenne is a word of doubtful origin. Some say that it is from the Indian sheyenne, meaning stranger; others that it is French, from chien—dog—and that the town in Wyoming of that name was called so from the prairie dog villages common on the plains.

Agriculture In Paraguay.

Agriculture has been about the sole industry of Paraguay since the establishment of the Jesuit missions in 1555. All the field work is done by women.

Lake Borgne.

Borgne, the name of a Louisiana lake, is a French word meaning "blind of one eye." The name was applied to the lake because of a wonderful monster said to have been seen in its waters.

Pea Coal.

Pea coal is cheaper a ton than nut or stove coal and can be mixed with other coal or used alone in a small stove or with a woven netting in the bottom of a grate. It kindles quickly, is easy to handle, forms no large clinkers and may be used to bank a furnace fire.

Paste.

A recipe for paste that never dries or sours is to add one teaspoonful of powdered alum and ten drops of oil of cloves to a pint of very smooth, thick flour paste.

The Talipot Tree.

The leaves of the talipot tree are used in Ceylon for the leaves of books. The characters are impressed upon the leaf, which is rubbed over with charcoal, and are then strung together between boards. They last for years.

Disease In Carpets.

At the last session of the Paris Academy of Medicine Dr. Vidal called attention to the great danger of contagion from the use of oriental carpets. These carpets come from countries in which dysentery and other diseases prevail.

SCIENTISTS CLAIM CONSUMPTION IS SPREAD BY SPITTING IN PUBLIC.

The bacillus of tuberculosis starts tubercles in the lungs. These slowly soften and are ejected from the lungs in coughing. A dry cough will spray the air full of these germs; a loose cough will deposit the sputum on the sidewalks, where it will dry, be trodden to powder, whirled about in the wind for healthy people to breathe, and so start up new plantations of these bacilli. Dr. Knopf says that an advanced case of consumption will eject about seven billions of these germs every twenty-four hours.

It is a murderous practice to spit where others may bring the infection into the house, on shoes or skirts, where it may dry and become a powder, to be sent into the air and breathed into the lungs. If the lungs are sore from colds or any other cause, these germs settle on the sore spot and set up what is called a "mixed infection." This is the starting point of consumption, and prompt treatment is required.

An eminent authority on lung trouble advises the use of the following simple formula, which can be secured from any good prescription druggist at small cost: Half ounce Virgin Oil of Pine (Pure), two ounces of Glycerine and a half pint of good Whisky. Mix and use in teaspoonful doses every four hours.

It is said that the mixture will break up a cold in twenty-four hours, and cure any cough that is curable. The ingredients should be pure, and to avoid substitutes, they should be purchased separately and mixed in the home of the patient. The Virgin Oil of Pine (Pure) should be purchased in the original half-ounce vials, put up for druggists to dispense. Each vial is securely sealed in a round wooden case, with the name—Virgin Oil of Pine (Pure), prepared only by Leach Chemical Co., Windsor, Ontario, plainly printed thereon. There are many rank imitations of Virgin Oil of Pine (Pure), which are put out under similar names and style of package. Never accept these as a substitute for the Pure Virgin Oil of Pine, as they will invariably produce nausea and never effect the desired result.

HORSEFLESH AS FOOD.

It Is Cheap and Is Rapidly Growing In Favor In Europe.

In Belgium, as in other European countries, the sale of horseflesh is becoming a recognized branch of the butchering business, according to Consul McNally of Liege. Scattered through Liege are many shops selling horse meat exclusively, a horse head attached to the front of the shop or a sign indicating the business within. While it is not forbidden for a meat market to handle both beef and horse meat, it is quite unusual to do so, dealers carrying their separate lines. When the meat is dressed and exposed for sale the only noticeable difference is in the color, which is of a deeper red and has a coarser fiber than the beef. Those accustomed to eating horseflesh are loud in its praise and declare it to be as palatable as beef and that many persons eat horseflesh under the impression that they are eating beef. There is no doubt that horseflesh is growing in favor. It sells for about half the price of beef or mutton.

The dealers in horse meat are most active in proclaiming the prime quality of their article, and a campaign of persuasion is now on. They contend that the horse in ancient times was held in high esteem; that the eating of horseflesh was common before the eighth century and that in China the horse has been eaten for 600 years. The first European people openly practicing hippophagy were those of Denmark in 1807, when Napoleon invaded that country. The Germans also attribute that practice in their country to the same person during the wars of 1815, at which time the food supply was very low. The first hippophagic slaughter house was created in Prussia in 1847, also a year of great famine.

In Belgium the eating of horseflesh dates back to 1870, from which time it has been increasing steadily. In Liege many colts are slaughtered for sale as well as young horses. The animal undergoes the same rigid inspection given to beef, mutton or pork. The number of horses and colts slaughtered for Liege in 1904 was 1,287, and it is estimated at 2,000 head for 1905. The choice cuts of horse meat sell for about 20 cents a pound, while the beef commands about 35 cents.

Jews In the Senate.

Simon Guggenheim will be the sixth Jew to sit as a member in the United States senate. The first Jew chosen to that honor was David Yulee, who represented Florida from March, 1840, to March, 1853. He was born in the West Indies, and his name was David Levy, by which he was known when he was elected as a member of the house of representatives in 1841. The second Jew in the senate was Judah P. Benjamin, who served from 1852 to 1857. He also was born in the West Indies. He represented Louisiana. Benjamin F. Jonas was born in Kentucky and represented Louisiana in the senate. Joseph Simon was a senator from Oregon from 1898 to 1903. Isidor Rayner was chosen as a senator from Maryland in 1904.—New York Tribune.

Finds a Monkey Man.

An interesting discovery has been made by the well known Heidelberg scientist, Professor Klaatsch, who is now pursuing anthropological studies in Australia. The professor says that while examining some Australasian natives arrested for killing a white man in Port Arthur he found that one of the men had feet and hands of exactly the same shape and appearance as those of monkeys. The natives on his inquiries stated that in the hitherto unexplored regions between the rivers Daly and Victoria numerous people have similar hands and feet and otherwise bear a strong resemblance to large monkeys. This is the first time that these characteristics have been discovered in a human being.—London Mail.

Denmark and Its Eels.

Denmark, for reasons partly of gastronomy and partly of trade, is distressed at the aversion shown by the eel for its shores. The fish is now and for some years has been abandoning the Little Belt in great numbers for the Atlantic, never to return. People are beginning to ask themselves if the taste of eel pie is to vanish from Denmark forever. An ichthyologist who has spent some time in observing the creatures has come to the conclusion that they always glide off in dark waters. This has suggested the bright idea of running a deep sea cable along the track most frequented by the emigrants and lighting the water up with electric lights so as to fascinate the fish into remaining where they are.

An Automobile House.

What is asserted to be the only automobile house in the country is now in Chicago. It has a parlor, bedroom and kitchen, a hot water heating system and a gasoline range, along with all the other comforts of home. It is propelled by a three cylinder gasoline motor, set in motion by levers, so that all the owner has to do when he is tired of one set of scenery, climate or neighborhood is to place himself in an easy chair in his parlor, turn on a lever and start for pastures new.

Books and Microbes.

The habit of pampering books is a characteristic vice of the age, and we are glad to find Sir Lauder Brunton, in the Lancet, writing in a way that shows him to harbor no weakness of that kind. Sir Lauder has discovered that dust is often responsible for so called cold in the head. Whenever he turned over the books in his library he found that a cold followed. His remedy is to sponge the top of a book with

HAD HIGHEST SKILL

AND YET THIS WORKMAN STARVED TO DEATH.

A pathetic story of hardship and misfortune was told an Intelligencer representative yesterday. It seems a man not far from this city was exceedingly skilful in a certain line of work, but he was so unclean in his habits that his hands were always soiled. Whenever he did a fine piece of work he would be likely to spoil it by getting it spotted and greasy. So at last no one would hire him and he grew so poor he finally died from insufficient nourishment.

"Now," said Mr. J. S. McKeown, our well-known pharmacist, "there is a parallel case to that one in the field of medicine. It is cod liver oil, which contains medicinal and curative properties to do such splendid work as a body-building, healing, strength-creating tonic medicine, and yet fails because its greasy, indigestible oil upsets the stomach and hinders these excellent curatives from doing their healing work.

"Like the workman, old-fashioned cod liver oil has 'lost its job,' and few people nowadays have any use for it or emulsions, since Vinol is rapidly taking their place. Vinol is delicious and digested with perfected ease, and at the same time contains all the genuine medicinal curatives, taken direct from fresh cods' livers. Vinol will do more than was ever claimed for old-fashioned cod liver oil, yet it is entirely free from oil and agreeable to the weakest stomach. It is guaranteed to give strength to the weak, vitalize the aged and cure stubborn colds and hacking coughs, or money will be paid back." J. S. McKeown, druggist.

A SHORT-SIGHTED POLICY.

It is a short-sighted policy, and an exceedingly expensive policy, for our people to buy Manitoba wheat flours, when we have the best flours in the world right here at home.

It is high time that we all realize that every dollar spent for Manitoba wheat flour means a dollar taken out of the pockets of the Ontario people and put into the pockets of the Manitoba farmers and millers. We, in Ontario, are much to blame for this. Our farmers raise too little wheat, and what little is raised, is sold outside the province in either wheat or flour.

Then they turn around and buy Manitoba wheat flours. They sell at the wholesale price and buy at the retail price, which includes expensive freight charges from the Northwest. And the western farmers make all the profits.

How much better to grow Ontario wheat, sell Ontario wheat, buy Ontario flour, and keep all this money at home among our own people. It means, not only money saved, but it also means giving our wives and mothers and sisters better flour for their baking. It is a fact that a blend of Ontario wheat, with a little Manitoba wheat, makes the best all-round flour that can be milled. In the open markets of the world — in Great Britain, in Europe, in the United States — the blended flours command the highest prices. Down in Nova Scotia, and in fact throughout the Maritime Provinces, blended flours are properly appreciated and used in preference to all others.

Our farmers should get the idea out of their heads that "there is no money in Ontario wheat." There is a steady and increasing demand for prime Ontario wheat, and wheat nets an excellent profit. The demand regulates the supply. With more Ontario flour being used, more wheat will be grown. Our farmers will plant larger crops, and make more money.

The whole Province will share in the benefits. On the prosperity of the farmer, depends the prosperity of the nation. And the prosperous community is the one that is able to live within itself and selling to its neighbors its surplus, and to buy from them only that which they can supply to better advantage.

"Chronicles of Don Q," will begin in The Intelligencer in a few days. Don't miss the first instalment.

SELECTIONS

RELIEF FROM CATARRH.

This Medicine Is Good, Too, For All Forms of Blood Disorders.

This winter, at last, will prove a harvest for the doctors and patent medicine manufacturers unless great care is taken to dress warm and keep the feet dry.

This is the advice of a well known local physician and should be heeded by all who are subject to rheumatism, kidney and bladder troubles and especially catarrh. While the latter is considered by most sufferers an incurable disease, there are few men or women who will fail to experience great relief from the following simple home prescription, and if taken in time it may prevent an attack of catarrh during the entire season.

Here is the prescription, which any one can mix: Fluid extract dandelion, one-half ounce; compound kargon, one ounce; compound sirup sarsaparilla, three ounces. Shake well in a bottle and use in teaspoonful doses after each meal and again at bedtime.

These are all vegetable ingredients and can be obtained from any good prescription pharmacy at small cost.

The compound kargon in this prescription acts directly upon the eliminative tissues of the kidneys to make them filter and strain from the blood the poisons that produce all forms of catarrhal affections. Relief is often felt even after the first few doses, and it is seldom that a sufferer ever experiences a return attack within the year.

This prescription makes a splendid remedy for all forms of blood disorders, and such symptoms as lame back, bladder weaknesses and rheumatic pains are entirely dispelled.

As this valuable prescription comes from a thoroughly reliable source, it should be heeded by every afflicted reader.—New York World.

House Heating In 100 A. D.

An unusual type of Roman villa has been unearthed on the site of the ancient Roman encampment in Britain at Caerwent. The remains have been found to be in an excellent state of preservation. A departure from the conventional practice of the Romans in the designs of their residences, as revealed by previous excavations in that country, is the provision of extra rooms abutting on the four sides of the courtyard. In the basements two completely perfect heating devices or hypocausts were found, together with the peculiar blue tiles utilized by the owners for conducting the heat from the stove in the basement and radiating it through the upper rooms of the dwelling. In the basement some exquisite specimens of Roman paving were unearthed.

Adee's Shoes.

Assistant Secretary of State Adee probably owns more shoes than any other man in Washington, excluding dealers. He keeps about a dozen pairs in his office at the state department and as many more at his home. Mr. Adee has not accumulated his shoes because of any fad, but merely for the comfort that he has learned can only be obtained by having constantly on hand a multiplicity of shoes. It appears that when he arrives at his office in the morning after a brisk walk from his home he immediately changes his shoes and that through the day he makes several other changes whenever his pedal extremities begin to feel uncomfortable. For the most part the shoes are all of the same general pattern.—Boston Transcript.

Pecans In Rio Grande Delta.

Pecan groves are to become a feature of the development of the Rio Grande river country in Texas. Several large orchards have already been planted, and this season several thousand more acres will be put out. The delta of the Rio Grande is said to be the ideal section for the production of pecans. The trees can be made to bear in three years after planting, but the general period there is six or seven years. On the Mexican side of the river pecans have been grown for many years in the little sections that were irrigated. This first attracted attention on the American side. The demand for pecans is always in excess of the supply, and pecan orcharding is certain to be profitable in the south.—St. Louis Republic.

Curious Method of Mining.

The increasing depth to which it is necessary to go in following the vein of kaolin, or potter's clay, mined near the Housatonic river in Connecticut recently caused the introduction of a novel method of mining. Wells from 50 to nearly 200 feet in depth are driven, and two pipes, the outer four inches and the inner two inches in diameter, are introduced. Water at a pressure of forty pounds per square inch is forced down through the smaller pipe and rises through the larger one, bringing with it about 5 per cent of solid matter, of which 75 per cent is pure kaolin.

Weds Armless Patient.

A remarkable romance has just been associated with the Accident hospital at Widnes, Lancashire. A young man met with a terrible accident at the railway station, Widnes, which rendered it necessary for his arms to be amputated at the shoulders. He was tenderly nursed by a pretty young member of the hospital staff, and the feelings of friendship between them gradually ripened into love. The nurse has just married her armless lover.

FAITH.

When I am dead—when I am dead—
Well, won't the same red roses blow
And won't the paths I joy to tread
As glad and lightsome footsteps know?
And won't the birds sing just as clear
And won't the streams sing just as sweet
And won't the days of yesteryear
Still coax the laggard's wayward feet?

Why should I muse—"When I am dead?"
Why give to death a thought or care?
Where blossoms of last year lie dead
This year spreads newer ones, and there
The same birds come to lilt and sing,
And sweethearts tell old tales anew,
And children, too, will come and swing
'Neath trees whose shades knew me and you.

And other men will dare the sea
For other loves, as I have done,
And fight—aye, lie, too—and will be Another me, and they will run
The selfsame course for the same things
My heart holds dear, and love shall be
Their splendid spur, their lifting wings,
As it is mine, to win me thee.

So let the years come down and snuff
Me out from this abiding place;
Beyond all earthly paths and rough
I yet shall win and see your face.
And we shall, poised in our own star,
Whence God's own lights are flung and furled,
Look back to now where we two are
And know this for a good old world.
—Judd Mortimer Lewis.

STATISTICS OF MURDER.

Deductions Drawn By an Eminent British Law Officer.

A remarkable analysis of the crime of murder for the last twenty years by Sir John Macdonnell, Master of the Supreme Court, is the principal feature of the criminal statistics of England and Wales for 1905, which was issued the other day. The number of people sentenced to death for murder from 1886 to 1905 was 488 males and 64 females. In the last decade the actual number of cases in which execution followed the death sentence is shown in the following table:

	Sentenced.	Executed.
1905	32	17
1904	28	16
1903	40	27
1902	33	22
1901	28	15
1900	20	13
1899	29	15
1898	27	11
1897	14	6
1896	33	20

Sir John writes: "The first fact to be noted is that murder, as might be expected is a crime of men. Murder means murder by men in a great majority of cases. Out of 532 sentenced to death since 1886 438 were men. The figures are more remarkable because as regards women they include cases of child murder, to which they are of course much more prone than men.

"The next noticeable point, which is rarely mentioned, is that a great majority of the persons murdered are women. They are as three to one.

"A great majority of the murders are committed by persons between the ages of 21 and 40, that is, during the period of greatest physical vigor.

"A further notable point in regard to murders committed by men is the very large proportion of murders of wives. Out of a total of 488 murders for which men were sentenced to death in the twenty years under consideration, no fewer than 124, or about 1 in 4, were murders of wives by their husbands. Most of the men convicted of murder belonged, like the women, to the laboring classes.

"The principal causes or motives for murders during this period were: Jealousy and intrigues, 93; drink, 90; quarrels or rage, 68; revenge, 77; robbery, 50; extreme poverty, 39; illegal operations, 12, and for insurance money, 3. Saturday is a favorite day for murder, 208 cases having been ascertained to have taken place on that day."

Sir John Macdonnell makes this remarkable declaration of the relation of drink to crime:

"Drunkenness is no doubt the cause of many crimes, and is the accompaniment of many others, but the theory of the close correspondence of crime and drunkenness must be viewed with caution."

Early Celtic Christianity.

Lecturing at the Manchester University recently on "Early Celtic Christianity," Prof. Kuno Meyer spoke of the monastic institutions in Ireland during the seventh and eighth centuries, when the island was the high school of learning of Western Europe. He combated the idea that St. Patrick founded the monastic See at Armagh, principally because the work of the saint did not go beyond the missionary stage. The ancient Irish Church was of a strong national character. The reasons why many of the old Irish manuscripts had not survived were that they were written in Irish, and, for that reason, after the conquest by the Vikings in 795 A.D. they were of little use on the continent, and also many of the Latin works were written in a peculiar angular character difficult to understand on the continent.

His Idea of a Wife.

Discussing with a representative of an Irish paper the qualities a wife should possess, a tramp said the other day that she should be "an all around woman," between forty and fifty years, not handsome, but temperate. "If there is any drinking to be done," he said, "I can see to it. She should be able to walk twenty miles a day and be good at begging bottles and potatoes and also at ballad singing

THE SCHOOL CANTEEN.

Provision of Meals Act In England—Hungry Children Fed—Parents Must Pay If They Can.

Among the useful measures passed by the British Government, and which went into force on New Year's Day, is the education (provision of meals) act, which empowers "local education authorities to assist voluntary efforts for feeding underfed school children by providing buildings, furniture, apparatus, etc.—the food to be provided by voluntary effort.

Where the local education authorities are satisfied that there are children in want of food, and that earnest voluntary effort is not forthcoming, they may, with the consent of the Board of Education, provide the food also, to the extent of a half-penny rate.

Provision is made for requiring payment for the meals from parents able to pay.

Writing to The Chronicle on the working of the act, Dr. Macnamara says:

The scheme is, so far as the really necessitous child is concerned, simply this: The local education authority may, with the consent of the Board of Education, provide meals for it at once, and may spend a half-penny in the pound on the local rates in doing so, if necessary. But immediately it has fed the child it must at once ascertain whether the parent has neglected his duty. If it appears that the parent is honorably unable to pay, nothing more is said. Neither parent nor child suffers any taint or disability of pauperism. If, on the other hand, the necessity of the child is the fault of the parent, then the new law will pursue him for payment of the cost of the meal. Carry that out courageously for five years, and you will be astonished at the extent to which what was originally a mere self-protecting fear of legal consequences has developed into a genuinely self-respecting sense of moral obligation.

Take the compulsory attendance clauses of the education act of 1870. They drove into the schools tens of thousands of children the parents of whom would never, in the absence of legal compulsion, have dreamt of sending them there. Abolish those clauses to-morrow, and ninety per cent. of the same class of children would continue to be sent just as regularly as they are to-day. Why? Because a legal obligation has gradually transformed itself—as it always does in a case like this—into a sense of moral duty.

But our little act does more than provide for the necessitous child. It initiates a scheme of school canteens such as has long been a feature of the French primary school, and of our own secondary day schools. The local education authority may associate itself with any voluntary feeding agency in existence in its area. It "may aid that committee by furnishing such land, buildings, furniture, and apparatus, and such officers and servants as may be necessary for the preparation and service" of meals. The school canteen having been thus set up, the parents should be invited to allow their children to use it at midday. They will have to pay for any meals served; for, except to meet the case of the necessitous child, no public money may be spent on food; and even then only if voluntary funds are not available or are insufficient.

Frankly, I hope to see the school canteen plan widely developed. It is a fine thing to bring the children all together for a midday meal. The meal of good soup and pudding is far better than the little packet of bread and cheese (wrapped in a bit of rough brown paper that the rain as often as not has reduced to a soddened pulp), munched in a corner of one of the class-rooms. Working-class mothers would soon find that the penny or three half-pence spent daily on the school canteen represented to them a great economy of time and labor, and to their youngsters a midday meal far more nourishing and acceptable than could be provided, as a rule, by the little menage of the artisan home.

Britain's Latest Admiral.

To look at him, says M. A. P., no one would imagine that Sir Alfred Wyndham Paget, who has just been promoted to flag rank, had served for over forty years in the navy, but this is so, his first commission being dated December, 1865. Sir Alfred is a younger brother of the popular Gen. Sir Arthur Paget, whom he greatly resembles in many ways. For some time past he has been one of the naval aides-de-camp to the King, with whom he is a great favorite. His last service was as Commodore of the North American Squadron to command the Scylla in protection of the Newfoundland fisheries. He has seen much fighting on land, and was promoted commander for his gallantry at Suakin. All who have ever served with him speak highly of his abilities and his pleasant, genial manner when off duty. He often tells a neat little story of how a more than ordinarily cheeky "middy" once scored off him. He happened to meet the youngster during a house party, and was criticising him in a friendly manner for not having made better progress. "When I was your age I was a sub-lieutenant," he remarked. "Yes, sir," replied the boy with an affectation of simplicity, "but then is it not a fact that the navy was never so efficient as it is to-day?"

A Photo Detective.

A lady with an exceptionally clear complexion sat for her photograph. On receiving the proof she took it back to the artist and complained of a number of small spots on the face which marred an otherwise perfect picture. The photographer was quite at a loss to account for this, an examination of the negative failing to give the slightest clue to the source of trouble. A fortnight later, says a correspondent of The Daily News, an

HUDSON'S HARDWARE

EYE-STRAIN.

May be divided into two distinctive varieties. In one the eye itself is at fault in what we call refractive errors, such as astigmatism, myopia ("near sight"), hypermetropia (the opposite of myopia), etc. People suffering from any of these may have more or less headache, blurring vision for reading, etc., along with reflex strain on the brain and nervous system. The second variety is where the strain is not caused by any refractive error and for this reason is often overlooked, though this kind is productive of by far the most serious results to the brain and nervous system, because it is in connection with the muscles that control the eyes which have a vital connection with the nerve centres of the brain. This kind requires a different kind of glass from that which is required in former cases. We have recently had a large number of complicated cases of the second class with very satisfactory results. SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

HOCKEY.

Last Night's Match Had Many Good Features.

There was only a fair crowd at the hockey match last night, but those who attended, while not seeing a close match, certainly saw some nice hockey—in spots. The local promoters were certainly up against it. The unfortunate affair in Cornwall put a damper on the proceedings, and when people heard that nobody was coming from "Reddy" McMillan's town they at once concluded that things were "on the blink." As our readers know, the management, when they found they couldn't get the Cornwall men, engaged two Cobourg players, and those parties "tin-canned" at the last minute. Luckily the Guelph team had a couple of spare men, and the local management engaged them and got into line with the determination to give their patrons the best they could, anyhow. Who could do more? These few remarks are made simply in explanation, and in justice to the parties in this city who promoted the match.

As to the game itself, it can safely be said that one side, at all events, showed some of the neatest hockey and swiftest combination seen here in many a year. Taking into consideration lack of practice together, indifferent condition, etc., the local team made a good showing — much better than even their best friends thought they would before the match started, and when it became known that the Cobourg stars had sent their regrets. Don't run away with the idea that the Guelph lads had it all their own way, for they did not. Brown and Burrows showed up occasionally in their old-time form, and none of the Guelph men had anything on them when they did; Taylor, at point, cheerfully mixed it up with the visitors from Guelph who came down to see him, and knocked them down right and left with the greatest good nature and impartiality; the little Guelph man in goal made some fine stops, and the rest of the team occasionally played in brilliant form, and the visitors certainly knew they were in a hockey match. Had the Cornwall men turned up according to schedule it would have been anybody's match —but what's the use? They didn't.

Dr. Gilbert, of this city, was referee, and this was the way the line-up was given out, though the Belleville players changed places many times during the play:

Guelph Goal
Johnson
Christman
Irving
Rochon
Mercer Fyfe Deyman
Green Burrows Conlin
Taylor
Brown
Black
Henderson
Belleville Goal

The game began fast, and the Guelph men soon had their combination working. They broke away very fast, and carried the puck right down on top of the enemies' net before shooting. The whole team showed up like sure-enough hockey players, and it began to appear as though Belleville would not have a look-in at all. Guelph scored the first in less than a minute. There was a shake-up in positions on the home team. Taylor went back to point, and little Mercer and his chums now did not get in so close. Taylor was playing for the man, a la Harvey Pulford, and the Guelph forwards were none too eager to mix with him. The locals were checking in a most untadynke way, and, though they could not score themselves, kept the other fellows from scoring for 16 minutes, when the visitors got their second goal. Guelph got two more before half-time, the third by a piece of fine combination, and the fourth from a scrimmage. Half-time score, 4-0.

The question now was, could the locals keep up the pace? If not the Guelph lads, every one in fine condition, were liable to run up a cricket score. Well, to make a long story short, the Bellevilles — most of them, anyhow, did keep up the pace, and fairly held the Guelph men even in the second half. Burrows and Brown in particular scintillated, both making many good rushes, and showing fine stick-handling and their old-time speed, but the Guelph forwards checked back so fast that many well-meant attempts came to naught, and the Guelph defence, too, gave an exhibition never surpassed here. However, Belleville got the 5th goal, which seemed to put heart in the boys, and they wired in harder than ever. Burrows, Brown and Green combined for another, and the crowd didn't do a thing but cheer. The score was now 4-2, and it was clear that the boys though they would be beaten, would not be disgraced. The hockey at this stage was the best of the match, and has not been surpassed here for many a day. Guelph finally got their fifth goal, and the match ended with a score of 5-2. The Belleville had put up a good game, anyhow, and surprised many people.

A FEW PASSES.

Conlin, on the wing, played the best game of his life. His place is on the forward line.

Dr. Gilbert did not allow any bitin'. He was exceedingly strict to spectators. The big fellow, however, took his own bumps without a murmur.

Sandy Burrows was as neat a stick-handler as anybody on the ice, and that's saying something.

"Gee! but they're rough," said a Guelph player who had just been ruled off. The game certainly did not bear the earmarks of ping-pong. But, beyond a little tripping and bodying, there was nothing out of the way.

Brown surprised the visitors with his speed, and his rushes were great.

Black, for Belleville, never played so good a game, while his wind lasted.

There was a Green, Brown and Black on the teams. The management probably was Blue.

The old-time stars got a great reception when they came out. In proper trim, they could hold their own in any company.

Considering their handicaps, the management has no reason to be ashamed of the exhibition they gave their patrons last night. Don't forget, good people, that it's easier to organize a knockers' club than it is to get together a bunch able to hold its own with a team like that of Guelph.

It is possible that, had the management suppressed the fact that no Cornwall men were coming last night, they might have had many more dollars in the rink, but they took the manly and honorable course; even though it meant a financial loss. They should be prouder of that than winning a hockey match.

Thaw Case Has Been Adjourned.

New York, March 8.—(Special.) — When court convened for the Thaw trial to-day, Mr. Delmas announced that the defence had no more evidence to introduce.

Court adjourned until Monday, when Jerome will begin rebuttal.

Considering Harry Thaw's lawyers guilty of a professional breach in that they did not give him warning that they were going to close their case so abruptly, it is declared that the District Attorney will retaliate by calling the Countess of Yarmouth to the stand in rebuttal. His hope would be to prove through her that Evelyn Thaw's story of her European conversation with Stanford White's slayer was full of flaws, and that the narrative was not related as she swore on the witness stand.

AND BRO. C. R. COLE WAS PRESENTED WITH A JEWEL.

The members of Derry Lodge, No. 30, True Blues, last evening held a banquet in their hall, which proved to be an enjoyable and interesting affair. An excellent spread was partaken of.

During the evening the Past Master of the lodge, Bro. Chas. R. Cole was presented with a beautiful Past Master's jewel. An address, complimentary in its character, was read to Bro. Cole by the Secretary, Bro. Chas. Hanna, and the presentation was made by the Worshipful Master, Bro. D. H. Boyce.

Bro. Cole made a most suitable reply.

After the presentation an hour or two was spent in speech-making and social intercourse. The proceedings were brought to a close by the singing of the National Anthem.

Successful Vocalist Is Well-Known Here

The Portage la Prairie Evening Review has an appreciative notice of Miss Edith J. Miller, who has many friends and admirers in this city, and who is a native of the western city referred to. Miss Miller, it appears, has lately been singing in London, and, about three weeks ago, sang at a concert of the Royal Amateur Orchestra Society at the request of the Prince of Wales. King Edward was present, and after the concert Miss Miller was, at His Majesty's request, presented to him. The popular Canadian singer has had many other important engagements, and everywhere the verdict of press and public has been that she is a singer of unusual qualifications, who has a brilliant future.

Dr. Gibson's Lecture

Under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid of St. Andrew's Church, Dr. Gibson last evening gave a lecture on "Tuberculosis." It was held in the basement of the church, and the attendance was by no means what it should have been for so important a subject. The Doctor treated the subject in an able and clear manner, showing the various stages of this terrible disease, and its features. At the close a vote of thanks was tendered the lecturer.

Extend Canadian Northern Railway.

St. Catharines, March 8.—The St. Catharines Board of Trade's annual meeting adopted a resolution that as the Canadian Northern Railway has some 3,000 miles of railway in the west, it was desirable that this system should be extended eastward and into cities and town of Ontario, in order that manufacturers and merchants may more fully participate in the benefits of trade with Western Canada.

MRS. PERKINS FOR TRIAL

Sent to Assizes on Charge of Poisoning.

Medical Evidence Shows Man Was Killed With Strychnine — Evidence as to Thomas Macdonald's Relations With Prisoner—Brother Admits Prejudice Against Mrs. Perkins About Will.

Cayuga, March 8.—That the death of Henry Perkins was due to strychnine poisoning, was evident from the medical testimony given when the preliminary examination of Mrs. Perkins, accused of the murder of her husband, was resumed yesterday morning. Important testimony was given by Dr. Kerr, of Dunnville, who was the family physician. He said that Mrs. Perkins was adverse to having any postmortem or an inquest, and that either she or her sister, Mrs. Romaine Heaslip wanted him to call upon Crown Attorney Murphy and see if such a procedure could not be avoided. He believed it natural for a family to express a wish that no autopsy should be held.

Dr. Kerr had given a certificate of death being due to stomach trouble, but in view of the reports of the doctors and Professor Ellis, he was now satisfied that Perkins had died from strychnine poisoning. He believed that Perkins must have taken the poison at some time between Monday morning and Tuesday morning, Christmas Day, when he died.

Two other medical men, Doctors Bauer and Edgar of Hamilton, both testified that in their opinion the death of Perkins was due to strychnine poisoning.

Prisoner Is Self Possessed.

At 2 o'clock the courtroom was densely packed, fully 200 more than Wednesday. Yesterday the women overcame all restraint and sat perched up above the magisterial desk.

The prisoner came in with her sister, and appeared to be more self-possessed than in the morning.

Miss May Moody of Canfield was the first witness after lunch. Miss Moody keeps a store at Canfield and was well acquainted with the prisoner. She had talked with Mrs. Perkins about the state of her husband's health. She had stated that her husband was very poorly, and it was only a matter of a few months.

Cross-examined, witness stated that she believed Mrs. Perkins at the time, and that she knew that Perkins had been ill for several years. She had heard that his father had died a horrible death from cancer of the stomach.

It had been generally understood that Perkins was a sick man.

No Intention to Kill.

"You did not think from what she said that she intended to kill her husband?" asked the lawyre.

"Oh no."

C. C. Hall, a Welland contractor and Ralph Gadsby, a carpenter, from Welland, had worked with Perkins for some time previous to and on the day he left home. They did not consider Perkins a sick man.

Mrs. Viola Spencer, wife of William Spencer of Welland, who boarded Henry Perkins for a couple of months before he died, stated that Perkins was not sick a day during that time.

To Mr. Johnston, Mrs. Spencer said that she knew nothing of the man's condition. He never complained. Witness did not know Perkins took medicine, nor that he had been doctoring.

Perkins Enjoyed Good Health.

William Spencer of Welland, husband of the last witness, and Arthur Headley, a farmer near Canfield, also gave evidence to the effect that Perkins enjoyed good health generally while working with them.

The Brother's Evidence.

John Perkins of Winnipeg caused quite a stir when he was called to the witness stand. A man of 35 years of age, he was a younger brother of the late Henry Perkins.

He returned to Cayuga on Feb. 3, 1906, and saw the prisoner on Feb. 6. There was something about the will spoken of.

"She said," continued the witness, "that as Henry left no will she hoped there would be an amicable settlement. I said I did not come here for that, I came here to see who poisoned my brother and I hoped she would help me. I asked her if she thought Henry committed suicide, and she said No! Henry would not do such a thing. If he got strychnine, she said, it was Dr. Kerr that gave it to him."

Mr. Johnston took the witness, who admitted that he had been on pretty good terms and had written four or five times to Henry at the time of his father's death.

"You took a general interest in the will and objected to Henry getting all the property."

"I did not."

"Will you swear that you didn't?"

"I did not write to Henry."

"Did you object?"

"I believe I did." (Laughter.)

"Was there feeling between you and Henry over the wife?"

"Yes. There was hard feeling between the family and Mrs. Perkins after the death."

Hunting Up Evidence.

"You have been trying to hunt up evidence to convict Mrs. Perkins of poisoning her husband?"

"Yes."

"Did you ask her what she knew?"

"I asked her if she thought Henry committed suicide. She said if there was poison found it must have been Dr. Kerr who gave it to him."

"What else did you say?"

"I don't remember."

"Did you say that 'I am here to prove poison?'"

"No."

"Did you ask anything else?"

"Yes. I said she ought to help find out who killed him, and she said that she was accused, but that they would have to prove it, and she would spend every dollar in defending herself."

"That is just what you would say if anyone accused you?"

"Yes."

Saw Them Together.

Mrs. John MacDonald. He knew the prisoner well and had seen her with Thomas MacDonald, standing beside the store with their arms around each other. (Hisses.)

"Did you ever see them walking up the hall together?"

"Yes. I thought it was funny for a married woman to act that way with a young man."

To Mr. Johnston witness stated that he would go as far as he dared with a woman, even young girls about 16 or 17.

"If somebody had not been talking to you, you never would have thought anything?"

"No."

"Who first talked to you?"

"John Perkins."

"Oho! The man who had his eye generally on the property."

MacDonald Takes the Stand.

Thomas MacDonald stated that he was a hardware merchant.

"Do you know prisoner?"

"Yes."

"Did she ever speak to you or your mother about Henry's making a will?"

"She never spoke to me."

"Did she ever tell you what her rights would be if Henry died?"

"She never did. She told father, but I don't remember what she said."

Witness had often been to the prisoner's house.

He had been alone with her and stayed at her house as late as 12 o'clock at night. He had had his arms around her at times and been driving with her.

Mr. Murphy asked about a will and Mr. Johnston objected, with the words "mere gossip." Witness stated that Perkins had been sick before Mrs. Perkins had ever stated to him her expectations regarding the length of life of her husband.

Were No Immoral Relations.

To Mr. Johnston witness stated that there never was immoral relations between himself and the prisoner and that there had never been the slightest hint that if Perkins dropped off he would take his place. He contradicted Diet's story emphatically, and said that he had been pressed to say that he had improper relations with Mrs. Perkins.

Mr. Murphy asked that the prisoner be committed for trial.

Mr. Johnston jumped up. "There is not a title of evidence to connect this woman with any poison at all and, granted that he died of poison, and strychnine, there is nothing to connect the prisoner with it. I am surprised that such a thing would take place in this county, and I mean what I say."

"We have considered the matter," said Maginstate Harrison, without looking at Magistrate Cline, his colleague, "and we will send her for trial."

Takes Poison by Mistake.

Detroit, March 8.—John Gray of Aylmer, Ont., took belladonna by mistake Wednesday and narrowly escaped death. He is thought to be out of danger.

Simply Swallow.

MANY EAT AS THOUGH THEY WERE BLIND AND THEIR TONGUES CUT OUT,

Dyspepsia is built on confidence—too much confidence in the ability of your stomach to digest anything and everything you put into it.

In this age we have developed speed in every line of action, and we have also developed speed in mastication.

We don't take time to eat right, and sometimes we do not eat the right kind of food. Sometimes we carry our business to our meals and as a result eat mechanically. We eat as though we were blind and our tongues cut out. We simply swallow.

The result is that the food we eat is half chewed, and lies like a lump of lead on the stomach.

You may deny to yourself that you abuse your stomach, but when you get a bloaty feeling, you can't deny you've got it.

When you get brash, eructations burning sensations, bloating, aversion to food, loss of appetite, belching and other kindred ailments, there is not much use asking yourself, for the time being, why you suffer. The fact is you've got these ailments and the question of the hour is how to get rid of them at once, so that at your next meal you may be able to sit down and look at your meal straight in the face—with a keen appetite and a smile, and enjoy thoroughly everything you eat.

Just one of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest an ordinary meal, without the help of the stomach. One ingredient of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest 3,000 grains of food. The strongest stomach couldn't do the work any better than one of these wonderful little Tablets can do it.

Each tablet contains the strongest digestive agents it is possible to obtain.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are not a patent medicine. We come out and say just what is in them—hydrastis, golden seal, lactose and aseptic pepsin. They are recommended by 40,000 licensed physicians in the United States and Canada.

And they are recommended by everyone who uses them—they can't help it, for they immediately invigorate the stomach by letting it take a rest they strengthen the gastric juice and cause the appetite to become keen and regular.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will surely destroy dyspepsia, brash belching, that "lump of lead" feeling, burning sensations, indigestion, loss of appetite, and aversion to food.

Have Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets handy where you can take one or two after each meal. Then you will know what a blessing it is to have a good appetite and to get all the good possible out of everything you eat. You'll feel rosy and sweet. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at any drug store on earth, 50c.

ROBLIN SWEEPS MANITOBA.

Conservatives Returned by 27 to 10 With Two Seats Doubtful.

Winnipeg, March 8.—After a keen struggle the returns in the elections held yesterday resulted in the return of the Conservatives by 27 to 10 with two seats doubtful.

Elections are to be held in Gimlie and Gilbert Plains later, the date not yet being announced. These are sure to go to the Government.

It is a great victory for Mr. Roblin who made his present appeal for support on the boundary question. The party was well organized. The chief cry of the Opposition was the "time for a change" argument, coupled with some "moral reform" issues.

Polling took place in 29 constituencies, and of these the Government carried 25 and the Liberals 12 with 2 in doubt. These were both Government seats at the last election.

Following are the results:

Conservatives—	Total	25
	Gains	5
	Losses	9
Liberals—	Total	12
	Gains	9
	Losses	5

Doubtful.

Dauphin—Harvey (Con.), Campbell (Lib.).

Gladstone—Wilson (Con.), Armstrong (Lib.).

In the last Legislature both were Conservative.

Quebec Bye-Elections.

Montreal, March 8.—Bye-elections took place yesterday in two counties in this province. In L'Assumption, left vacant by the death of Charlemagne Laurier, M.P., Dr. R. Lanner, Liberal, was returned, defeating Elis Lemere by 250.

In Richelieu, where the vacancy was caused by the elevation of Mr. Bruneau, M.P., to the bench, Lanctot, straight Liberal candidate, was elected over Bondeau, Independent Liberal, by 1,885 majority. The Conservatives did not put up a fight in the last named constituency.

RUSSIA'S EMPRESS IN ENGLAND.

Precautions to Protect Her Majesty From Anarchists.

London, March 8.—The Dowager Empress of Russia, arrived here yesterday morning and was greeted at the railroad station by her sister, Queen Alexandra, the Prince and Princess of Wales, and the staff of the Russian embassy.

The empress reached London half an hour earlier than the time publicly announced, and the foreign Ministers, who had not been apprised of the change, arrived at the station after the departure of the royal party.

The expediting of the empress' arrival was, it is understood, planned by the police, who have taken stringent precautions for her protection.

While the officials of Scotland Yard have little fear that the anarchists in London will jeopardize their chances of obtaining an asylum in England by any attempt on the life of the empress, they are taking no chances, and every possible avenue of attack will be guarded.

COLONIAL RECIPROCITY.

Chambers of Commerce Ask For Favorable Negotiations.

London, March 8.—At yesterday's session of the Associated Chambers of Commerce of the United Kingdom, which are holding their annual meeting here, a resolution was adopted, asking the Government to conduct negotiations at the forthcoming colonial conference with the object of promoting reciprocal trading within the British Empire.

Robert H. Roade of Belfast, ex-president of the Chamber of Commerce of that city, who moved the resolution, contended that the colonies were denied preferential treatment, and that if this was further refused they would look elsewhere for better treatment, and Canada, in particular, would seek for reciprocity with the United States, thus leading to the disintegration of the Empire.

Saskatchewan's University.

Regina, Sask., March 8.—The University act, introduced by the Provincial Government for the purpose of establishing and incorporating a university, which has received its first reading, establishes a body politic and corporate consisting of a chancellor, a convocation, senate, board of governors and council.

Is to have equal power and authority to give such instruction and teaching as may be determined by the senate and to examine candidates for degrees and for certificates of honor and to grant degrees after examination in the manner provided in the act.

No religious tests will be required of either professors or students, though the right is given to any affiliated college to make such provisions in regard to religious instructions and worship for its own students as it may deem proper.

The maintenance of the university is to be provided out of the general revenues of the province, and by a percentage of the net receipts of the province for the current year under the succession duties ordinance and out of the fund collected by the Supplementary Act.

The real and personal property of the university is to be exempted from taxation.

Contest In Carleton.

Ottawa, March 8.—William H. Harten, Independent Conservative of Twin Elms, announces himself in the field to contest against R. H. McElroy, the seat in Ontario Legislature, vacated by the death of G. N. Kidd.

Alberta Surplus $418,388.

Edmonton, Alta., March 8.—Premier Rutherford laid the public accounts on the table last night. They show a total of $1,893,311.65, of which $412,398.06 is surplus. The surplus last year was $473,252.64.

Effort To Overthrow Movement For Public Ownership.

Beck Power Policy Said To Be In Danger—Premier Whitney Says Hydro-Electric Commission Is Proper Tribunal to Deal With the Matter--Mr. McGarry Gives Explanation of His Action.

Toronto, March 9.—Somewhat of a sensation was created in the Legislature yesterday by the publication of rumors concerning a corporation effort to overthrow the Beck power policy and check the movement for public ownership of public utilities as encouraged by the progressive Whitney Government.

The rumors were the outcome of opposition in the Private Bills Committee to the clause in the Ottawa bill enabling the city to have its power matters under the control of the Government Hydro-Electric Commission. This clause was fought by Mr. G. F. Henderson, counsel for the Ottawa Electric Light Co., who is a legal partner of Mr. D. J. McDougal, the Liberal member for Ottawa. It was charged that Mr. McDougal backed up the corporate pleading of his partner by his words and vote.

Mr. McDougal brought the matter up in the House and gave his assurance that no improper motives had inspired his action in the matter.

Best and Proper Tribunal.

Hon. J. P. Whitney, the Prime Minister, said he recognized that under any proper system of responsible Government it could not be expected that all the members of a legislative committee would see eye to eye with the Government. However, in this case, had he (the Prime Minister) been present he certainly would have voted with the majority. In his opinion the Hydro-Electric Commission was the best and proper tribunal to deal with the matter in the interests of the public at large. The Hydro Electric Commission consisted of gentlemen who had made a special study of the power problems in the interests of the people. It was a part of the Government, an integral portion of the executive council. Rates had best be governed and settled by them if public rights were to be protected.

The Prime Minister hoped no improper motives had prompted the course of any member in the matter,—he did not believe there had been. But members should always be guarded. It was easy to place themselves in an unfortunate light. He had once been unjustly blamed for getting involved with corporate influences himself, for no one cared less for the corporations than he.

Mr. McGarry Explains.

Mr. McGarry said the consideration of the Ottawa bill was the first occasion on which he had taken part in the Private Bills work this session. He had not seen or been interviewed by anyone. Some one had told him that the reason the Ottawa Electric Co. opposed the Hydro Power Commission was a personal one, because the solicitor was related to one of the Commissioners. He supported the Government and approved of the Hydro-Electric Commission but he thought this was a valid reason, coupled with the fact that the Ottawa City Council had by a vote of 13 to 11 voted to take out the proviso. Mr. McGarry challenged anyone to show he had been tampered with or his vote in any way influenced. He was not bound to any party policy in the matter. He would resign rather than be driven in and forced to vote any particular way. He had moved the resolution to take control from the Hydro-Electric Commission himself. The vote was a tie and Chairman Lucas gave the casting vote against it. It was a non-party vote. He felt sure that neither Mr. McDougal, Mr. Ferguson or himself had retainers for any corporate concern in the matter. He had no interest beyond that of doing his duty as a member of the House.

Maintenance of Asylums.

The proceedings in the House were comparatively brief. Mr. Hislop (Huron) moved for a return showing the amounts credited to the cities, towns, villages and organized townships in the Province of Ontario, under the Supplementary Revenue Act, 1899, and also the amount charged for the maintenance of inmates of lunatic or other asylums in the Province.

In speaking to the motion Mr. Hislop questioned whether the present act was working out satisfactorily. By holding back from the municipal returns from railway taxation the maintenance of non-paying inmates of asylums Mr. Hislop claimed municipalities were encouraged to improperly send their insane to the Houses of Refuge instead of to the asylum. In one of the townships in Huron the railway taxation return had amounted to scarcely four cents per head. The farmers required an even greater rate of railway taxation. The railways earned over $13,000,000 per annum in Ontario and he suggested to the Government the advisability of taxing them on their gross earnings in a similar way to which mining profits were to be taxed. Mr. Hislop also urged a percentage tax on capital stock which would prevent some of the water stock and over-capitalization dangers.

May Check Railway Construction.

Hon. Col. Matheson complimented Mr. Hislop on his address which was worthy of consideration. He was almost certain, however, that the Province had no power to tax the earnings of the railways. Any tax Ontario imposed must be a direct tax. The Minister supported Mr. Hislop's motion, which carried, but pointed out that the Government must be on its guard lest by forcing the railway tax up too high they stop railway construction in the Province.

A WARNING TO LAURIER.

Premier Roblin Sums Up Significance of the Elections.

Winnipeg, March 9.—The latest results from the province show that the Conservatives have swept the constituencies.

The revised figures yesterday give 26 Conservative and 13 Liberals, with delayed elections in two ridings, Gilbert Plains and Gimli.

In the case of Arthur, Williams (Liberal) is elected over Lyle (Con.) by a majority of 3. Dauphin has gone Liberal.

Premier Roblin says: "The issue before the electors was: 'Shall Manitoba have equality among the provinces that go to make up the Dominion or shall she be the "postage stamp province," as people in Eastern Canada sneeringly call us?' The people of Manitoba has answered emphatically in favor of equity and justice. I trust that the pronouncement has been made loud and clear enough so that Sir Wilfrid Laurier will have heard what the people of Manitoba want in this connection.

"I also accept the vote as an endorsement of the general policy of Government.

"I hope that Sir Wilfrid Laurier will see the necessity of enlarging the boundaries of Manitoba before the present session of Parliament is prorogued. I will not take or accept of any territory less than what is ours in law, and in taking that view I am doing no injustice either to Ontario on the one hand or Saskatchewan on the other."

Edward Brown said that the Opposition had a good fighting force, and this was not the time to give up the fight. Only weak-kneed men would do this. They must go on and expose the rascality of the present administration, and they would be able to do it, he thought, so that the Government themselves would run away from the exposures.

At any rate they had succeeded in arousing the conscience of the people, and he would continue to do his duty as a citizen regardless of results.

SOCIALISTS SNUB KING.

Refuse to Rise While Representative of His Majesty Is Present.

Victoria, B. C., March 9.—The first sensation of the session of British Columbia's new Parliament, which opened Thursday, has been provided by some members of the Socialist party, who deliberately, after consultation, declined to rise in accordance with the custom during the presence of Lieut.-Governor Dunsmuir, as the representative of King Edward.

Leader Hawthornethwaite subsequently defended the course of his party as consistent with the declaration during the campaign, that they recognized no flag but the red banner of Socialism.

He said they had remained seated because they did not propose longer to participate in "the mere mummies of Parliament."

They had not risen in courtesy to the King's representative, nor would they do so hereafter when prayers were read by the bishop or any of the clergy.

Speaker Eberts yesterday made careful examinations of the rules and authorities, but could find nothing to prescribe a penalty for the implied discourtesy to the crown, although a spoken slight is duly dealt with.

TAXATION IN ALBERTA.

Street Railway, Insurance and All Public Utilities Must Pay Tribute.

Edmonton, Alba., March 9.—The Alberta Legislature Thursday passed exterporaneously Premier Rutherford's bill providing for the taxation of practically all conceivable public utility and financial concerns.

Street railways will pay $200 per annum and $10 per mile for everything over twenty miles.

Telegraph companies pay $1 a mile for every mile of line.

Telephone companies pay 50 cents per instrument in cities of 10,000 and 75 cents in cities over.

Gas companies pay $500 annually; electric lightning companies $500 in cities of 10,000, $100 in towns and $25 in villages.

Express companies pay $500; corporations taking money on deposit, $200; banks, $400 for head office and $200 per branch; private banks $200, and $25 for branch.

Insurance companies pay a percentage on gross premiums; trust and loan companies $100 on $100,000 capital.

The bill has passed through all committee stages and becoming law is now only a matter of formality.

REAL BAYONET CHARGE.

Honduras Defeat Nicaraguans With Heavy Loss in Men and Arms.

Puerto Cortez, Honduras, March 9.—Advices received here yesterday confirm the reports that President Bonilla of Honduras defeated the Nicaraguans at Namasiquo, Honduras, March 6, and again defeated them March 7 at Tuguare.

In the fight at Namasiquo, the Honduran forces delivered a bayonet charge against the Nicaraguan trenches, dislodged the enemy, and, besides a number of rifles, captured one cannon.

McGee Gets Eight Years.

Montreal, March 9.—William J. McGee, the ex-secretary-treasurer of the People's Mutual Building Society, who pleaded guilty to the embezzlement of the society's funds and to charges of forgery in transferring shares of the society, was yesterday sentenced to eight years in the penitentiary—five years for forgery and three years for theft.

In assigning for the benefit of his creditors, McGee, who is only thirty years of age, states his liabilities are $101,000 and his assets about $58,000.

TIMELY TOPICS.

Mr. William Johnson, in moving that the Legislature be appealed to to alter the composition of School boards so that they be less cumbersome in number, probably took the easiest and best way to accomplish a result which nine out of every ten people are in favor of. The Board of Education as at present constituted is too large in number, and many times we have had the ridiculous spectacle of ten members being present and still no meeting could be held because the eleventh man — who would make the quorum — was lacking. The logical way of bringing about the desired result, some people thought would have been for the Board itself to take the necessary action looking to a reduction in the size of its membership. But a motion to that effect was introduced once, and promptly killed. Irreverent people said the grave and reverend seigniors did not feel like voting themselves out of a job. The notice of motion introduced by Mr. Johnson last night shows that, to use a homely old proverb, "there are more ways than one of killing a cat."

Certain members of the Board of Trade appear to think that the resolution re the Canadian Northern Railway, passed at a special meeting of the Board the other night, could hardly be called expressive of the sentiments of the Board as a whole. They think that such an important resolution, which, they say, was not even unanimous with the small number present, might well be submitted at a future meeting, after the members have all been notified. The idea appears to be fair. The matter is certainly an important one, and a full and free discussion of it would do no harm.

"Brain storm" promises to take a popular place as a permanent excuse for doing things which ought not to be done. If a man can successfully plead a temporary drop in his mental barometer as an excuse for murder, why not also for theft or bigamy or embezzlement, or western land deals? As the Montreal Witness plaintively remarks, "The old idea of sin has gone, according to the new theology: stealing has largely become kleptomania for those who can afford it: incompatibility of temper is the daily excuse for the severing of what should be most sacred ties; drink is no longer an appetite but a 'disease'; and now we have 'mental explosion' and 'brain storm' for murder, as we have long had 'brain

Funeral Of Dr. Oronhyatekha.

Deseronto, March 8. — The funeral of the late Dr. Oronhyatekha took place here this afternoon. The procession to Deseronto cemetery was the largest ever seen in this section. When Foresters' Hall was reached the Foresters' Courts of the town and the Deseronto Council, headed by the Citizens' Band, took the lead. Mr. Victor Morin conducted the Forester service at the vault. He referred to the great monument built up by the deceased, and solemnly pledged the 250,000 members of the order to maintain this monument by loyal support of the I.O.F.

The casket was opened, and a great many persons took a last look at the face of the departed Chief before the body was consigned to the vault. The bearers were: Messrs. Albert Maracle, ex-Chief D. W. Claus, I. W. Chief D. H. Maracle, D. J. Brant, ex-Chief Joseph S. Brant and Nelson Maracle, relatives of Dr. Oronhyatekha, and residents of the reserve.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When the tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

Bribery.

Here is a sample of the way in which the present Laurier Government tries to bribe provinces. Every attempt in the past which has been made to secure an extension of the Manitoba boundaries has been violently resisted and opposed by the present Government and its supporters. On the eve of the recent election in Manitoba the Globe, no doubt on instructions from Ottawa held out the following bribe:

"Sir Wilfrid Laurier, by creating two great new provinces to the west of Manitoba, has made it imperative that the area of the latter should be enormously enlarged. A vast territory adjoins it to the north and east, and there can be little doubt that the Dominion Premier could with a good grace confer the whole of it upon Manitoba. But the Conservative Premier of Ontario comes to the fore and lays claim to a portion of the unawarded territory. Sir Wilfrid appears to be quite willing to give his consent to any agreement which the provincial Premiers may arrive at.

"Mr. Roblin will have quite a task to convince the people of Manitoba that it is the Liberal party either in the Dominion or in the Province that is standing in the way of Manitoba's aspirations. Mr. Brown has produced correspondence with the Federal Premier in which he makes it manifest that should he be entrusted with the administration of the affairs of Manitoba he will insist in the strongest manner on the just claims of Manitoba to a vastly increased provincial area. Mr. Roblin may be assured that that cock will not fight."

This is the old trick. It will be remembered that during a late campaign in West Hastings, when the Trent Valley Canal was a subject of discussion, Mr. W. H. Biggar produced and read a telegram from the late Minister of Railways and Canals, promising large appropriations to prosecute the work. The election being over, the promise was never carried out. The fact is, it was a bare-faced attempt to bribe the constituency.

* * *

Just the same policy was pursued in Toronto. When the North Toronto contest was in full blast Sir Wilfrid was not above resorting to the same tactics. He wired the Grit candidate to the effect that the Government would see that the Grand Trunk Railway constructed the Yonge street bridge. The election resulted in favor of the Opposition, and the promise proved of the same character as that of Blair's. The electors proved themselves more honest than the bribers. In any other country than Canada such bare-faced attempts at deception and falsehood would hurl the bribers from office. Tammany is constantly being discounted by what is called Liberalism in this Dominion.

Your Doctor

Can cure your Cough or Cold, no question about that, but—why go to all the trouble and inconvenience of looking him up, and then of having his prescription filled, when you can step into any drug store in Canada and obtain a bottle of SHILOH'S CURE for a quarter.

Why pay two to five dollars when a twenty-five cent bottle of SHILOH will cure you as quickly?

Why not do as hundreds of thousands of Canadians have done for the past thirty-four years: let SHILOH be your doctor whenever a Cough or Cold appears.

SHILOH will cure you, and all druggists back up this statement with a positive guarantee.

The next time you have a Cough or Cold cure it with

The Lord's Day Act.

(6 Edw. VII., Cap. 27.)

The Lord's Day Act passed by Parliament in 1906 is in force from March 1st.

The following summary of its provisions will be read with interest:

1. All buying and selling is prohibited except drugs and medicines, meals and travellers' tickets.— Sections 2 and 3 (b) and (g).

2. All labor, business and work of one's ordinary calling or for which he is paid, is prohibited.—Section 2.

3. Exceptions (Section 3)—In general, "works of necessity or mercy," and in particular:

(1) Work in connection with divine worship.—(a.)

(2) Work for the relief of sickness and suffering.—(b.)

(3) Receiving, transmitting and delivering telegraph and telephone messages.—(c).

(4) Unavoidable work in connection with necessarily continuous industrial processes.—(d).

(5) Starting or maintaining fires and ventilating, pumping and inspecting mines, when any such work is essential to the protection of life, health or property.—(e).

(6) Supplying for lawful purposes light, heat, cold air, water or gas.—(f).

(7) Conveying travellers or His Majesty's mails.—(g and q).

(8) Continuing to their destination of freight trains and vessels, but not making up or starting out such, nor way freight work nor gathering or distributing cars.—(h.)

(9) Loading and unloading merchandise at intermediate points on or from passenger boats or passenger trains not at terminals, nor on or from freight boats or trains.—(i).

(10) Work necessary to keep railway lines and tracks open.—(j.)

(11) Work before 6 a.m. and after 8 p.m. of yard crews in handling cars, but not between these hours.—(k).

(12) Loading and unloading vessels:—

(a) Ocean going vessels if necessary to avoid undue delay beyond scheduled time.

(b) Any vessel if necessary to avoid being tied up by the closing of navigation.

(c) Before 7 a.m. and after 8 p.m. of grain, coal or ore carrying vessels after the 15th September each year.—(l.)

(13) Caring for milk, cheese and live animals and the delivery of milk for domestic use, and the work of domestic servants and of watchmen.—(m and r.)

(14) Liveries—Hiring horses, carriages or small boats for personal use if not intended for labor, business or conveying pleasure excursions for hire.—(o).

(15) Unavoidable work after 6 p. m. in preparing the regular Monday edition of a morning daily paper, btu not the publication, sale or distribution of papers on Sunday.—(p).

(16) Work by fishermen after 6 p.m. in taking fish.—(u).

(17) Making maple sugar or syrup if done in the woods.—(v.)

(18) Unavoidable work in saving property in imminent danger of destruction, e.g., by fire or flood.—(w.)

(19) Operation of ferries where authorized by competent authority.—(n.)

(20) Work authorized by the Railway Commission in special circumstances in handling freight on railways.—(x)

4. Those compelled to work on Sunday are allowed a full day's rest during the week, if on railway, telegraph, telephone, or industrial work.—Section 4.

5. The business of amusements, etc., is absolutely prohibited.—Section 5.

In Ontario, all noisy amusements, etc., and in New Brunswick and P. E. I. all amusements are prohibited by the old Provincial laws, which are still valid.

6. It is unlawful to run, conduct or convey any excursion for hire and with the object of pleasure by any mode of conveyance.—Section 6.

7. Advertising in Canada anything to be done in any other country, which if done in Canada would be unlawful, is prohibited.—Section 7.

8. Shooting for gain or so as to disturb others.—Section 8.

It is to be noted that the game laws of almost all the provinces prohibit all shooting at or hunting of game on Sunday.

9. The importation on Sunday for sale or distribution, or the sale or distribution in Canada on Sunday, of Foreign newspapers, and publications classified as such, is absolutely prohibited.—Section 9.

10. Sections 10, 11, and 12 fix the penalties. These are: (1) For the employee who violates the law—from $1 to $40. (2) For the employer who causes its violation—from $20 to $100. (3) For a corporation that causes or even permits its violation—from $50 to $500.

11. Electric and other provincial railways are left to be controlled by the Provincial laws.—Section 13.

12. All valid Provincial Sunday laws continue in force. This includes the game, liquor, shops' regulation and railway laws of the provinces, also the ante-Confederation laws.—Section 14.

Whether any particular provincial law affecting Sunday observance is valid or not depends not on anything in the Lord's Day but on the British North America Act as interpreted by the courts. The Privy Council's famous decision of July 14th, 1903, seems clearly to show that the ante-Confederation Provincial Sunday laws are now valid, and that the Provinces cannot since Confederation pass general Sunday laws. But it does not follow from this that they cannot pass game or electric railway legislation including Sunday sections.

13. Section 15 requires the consent of the Provincial Attorney-General before "any action or prosecution is commenced," and says that such action must be begun within 60 days.

Old Map of Maryland and Virginia.

At the Peabody library is an old map of Maryland and Virginia which is believed to date back to the seventeenth century. The map has a description of Maryland on one leaf of the back and a description of Virginia on the other leaf. It is bound with a few blank pages to give it stability and was evidently part of a larger work describing the American colonies, as the pages are numbered. "Baltimore town" is situated between the "Susquesahanough" and Bush rivers. No especial mention is made of it in the description of the colony, in which "St. Maries" figures as the chief place. In addition to the Susquehanna, with its queer spelling, the principal rivers are named as the Patowmee, Patuxent, Ann Arundel, alias Severn, Choptank, Nanticoke and Pocomoke. Tobacco raising is named as the principal source of revenue in the colony, and it is stated that trade was carried on chiefly by barter and exchange. The map was published in London.—Baltimore Sun.

Britain's Great Wealth.

Calculations of the total wealth of a nation are always estimates more or less accurate, but when well done they are both instructive and interesting. Mr. W. J. Harris and Rev. K. A. Lake have just made a calculation of the wealth of the United Kingdom based mainly on the Estate Duty Returns.

Allowing for the deduction of certain Government property which could not be reckoned if the national debt were included, the total wealth of the United Kingdom is given as £8,950,000,000, which sum, if distributed amongst the population, would allow £207 for each person, producing, if invested, £7 per head per annum, or say 2s 8d per week, or about fourpence per day.

Taking into account all the sources of wealth the total valuation works out as follows:

Estates liable to death duty	£7,637,992,684
Property undervalued or escaping valuation ...	120,000,000
Gifts made before death escaping duty	117,000,000
Property of the poor ...	827,000,000
Tithes and glebes	62,000,000
Coin in postoffice and other institutions	5,000,000
Insurance companies reserves against running policies	76,000,000
Suez Canal shares	31,000,000
Property on which corporation duty is levied	968,880
Property held by public bodies exempted from corporation duty	72,000,000
Imperial property:
Dockyards and navy..	50,000,000
Army material	20,000,000
Parks, offices, etc	100,000,000
Private property of the Crown	10,000,000
Duchies of Cornwall and Lancaster	3,000,000
Office of Woods and Forests property	12,000,000
Total	£9,188,589,561

Asking After His Parents.

Archbishop Temple has long been a fruitful source of stories. An old one is so good that it must be repeated. After the archbishop's eyesight had failed, he was greeting his guests at a garden party at Lambeth. He said to one who approached him, "How do you do? How is your father?" The guest looked somewhat surprised, and said, "My father is dead, your Grace." "And the widow, your mother, how is she?" said the archbishop. "Thank you, she is quite well," somewhat stiffly. SELECTIONS

AMERICAN VIOLINISTS.

New Methods in an Art That is Old, A Pittsburg Romance.

One of the musical instruments whose popularity never seems to diminish is the violin, alias the fiddle. There is a story to the effect that one of the pioneer settlers of western Pennsylvania gave 1,500 acres of land in exchange for a beautiful instrument made by Steiner, the successor of the renowned Stradivarius, and the land thus given is the site of Pittsburg. Then there is the story of the violin maker in New York who bought up old rafters to turn into instruments, some of his choicest productions being carved out of the wood taken from St. Matthew's, a downtown church razed about half a century ago.

In the country districts the fiddler who presides at dances in barns or town halls is as prominent a figure as ever, and in the schools of music the student of the violin is in a fair way to become the nucleus of the future American orchestra, which today is largely made up of Europeans. In Boston George W. Chadwick, the well known composer, has introduced the practice of using members of the big Symphony Orchestra to sit alongside the pupils composing the Conservatory orchestra and "speed up" the performances. All advanced pupils are required to attend the rehearsals regularly, and the performances are under the direction of Mr. Chadwick himself. There is a good deal of public spirit behind this undertaking, for as the Symphony Orchestra has the support of a banker, Major Henry L. Higginson, so the Conservatory, where this amateur orchestra is training, has a magnificent concert hall, the gift of a Boston merchant, Eben D. Jordan.

Every player in this amateur organization is provided with a fine instrument, if not his own, then one loaned to him. One of the leading manufacturers of violins is authority for the statement that the instruments made in this country are worthy of comparison with any ever made of old and that it is a mistake to assume that the art of manufacturing fine violins passed away with the school of Cremona; hence the assurance that music students in the United States have as many if not more advantages at their disposal than those who study abroad.

In some parts of the country expertness with the violin is a feature of home training, but nowadays American music schools, particularly schools in cities where there are first class professional orchestras, are devoting more attention than ever to the development of players gifted with an aptitude for the art of Paganini.

Iron Production.

The leading technical paper of Germany points out that the United States is striding forward so fast in the production of iron that now it not only leads all the other nations individually, but comes near to surpassing them all combined. In 1905 Germany produced 11,000,000 tons, England 9,500,000, the others smaller amounts down to 47,000 tons produced by India, while the total product of the world outside the United States was 31,000,000. Yet in that same year we produced 23,000,000 tons, more than half the outside world's total product. Figured by percentages, the gains of Canada and Japan are more remarkable than ours. As compared with 1904, Canada very nearly doubled and so did Japan.

Charleston's 3 o'Clock Dinner.

Most of the people in Washington dine between 5 and 7 o'clock. This is called an early dinner, but the Washington people always were a slow set. The usual hour of dining in Charleston is 3 o'clock. It is an old English custom, we believe. At any rate, we fancy it is something of that sort because we cling to it so tenaciously. It is a very inconvenient hour to most people who are engaged in business, but it is the habit and very hard to break. We have the advantage of from two to four hours over the people of Washington, at any rate, because we are just that much ahead of them on the principal feast of the day.—Charleston News and Courier.

Horsehair.

The raw horsehair used in the manufacture of haircloth for upholstering purposes is just now high priced in this country because of the situation which during and since the Russo-Japanese war has prevailed in Russia, whence most of the hair comes. The best of such cloth must have a certain width of weave, which depends upon the length of the hairs, and in this respect the Russian horses are superior, having tails which sweep the ground. Much of the weaving is done in this country. For the narrower weaves of the cloth, used by tailors in lining coats, the hair from American horses on the western plains is used.

Pompous Policemen.

Herr Muerbe, a Dresden schoolmaster, on visiting Halle lately went up to a policeman and, touching his hat, begged in a courteous tone to be directed to his destination. The policeman stared at him and told him that if he desired a reply he must speak more respectfully and take off his hat. This was too much for Herr Muerbe, who asked the policeman not to be insolent. Legal proceedings followed, and the court decided that, while Herr Muerbe was not obliged to take off his hat when addressing a policeman, he must pay a fine for using the word "insolent."

Calling a water "pure" does not certify it safe for you to drink. Water can be pure and yet be harmful. Boiled water is pure, in one sense, because heat destroyed the bacteria it contained, but heat does not remove harmful salts from water, nor the organic matter. ¶ Distilled water, used so much on shipboard, is chemically pure; but seafaring men will warn you against drinking too much "condenser" (distilled) water. It brings on bowel trouble, because the salts it should contain have been distilled out of it. ¶ Some spring water is fairly pure; but even the purest spring water contains dissolved mineral matter—sulphate of lime, carbonate of lime, magnesia, common salt, potash, iron. ¶ Even pure water, if it contains too much of some of these salts, does you harm. ¶ So what are you to do? You shouldn't drink boiled water because the salts are not boiled out of it. You musn't drink distilled water because the salts are boiled out of it. Most spring waters have too much of the wrong kind of salts. What are you to drink? ¶ Why not drink a water that is not only ideally pure, but in which are naturally present exactly the salts that are good for anybody, in exactly the proportion that is right for everybody? ¶ Why not drink a water that is zestful, sparkling, limpid, with no excess of mineral, no trace of harmful salts? THE MAPLE LEAF AND BEAVER.

The bright Maple Leaf and the Beaver
Are emblems we love to display,
Then watch we the trail of the spoiler,
And stand for the rights of the toiler,
While the Beaver keeps working away.

We're proud of this land of the Maple,
Our country's behests we obey,
We think of her greatness progressing,
We ask for each effort a blessing,
While the Beaver keeps working away.

We thrill to the beauties of nature,
So sweet in their varied array,
We boast of our storehouse of treasure,
We sing of our wealth and our pleasure,
While the Beaver keeps working away.

But here's to our hope of the future—
The boys and the girls at their play—
Who'll stand at their post in their station,
And build up the strength of the nation,
While the Beaver keeps working away.

And to her who must earn her own living,
Each lassie so brave and so gay,
Who sings at her work and, while humming,
Builds hopes for the home that is coming,
While the Beaver keeps working away.

To the women and men who are toiling
From morning till eve of the day,
In cheerful acceptance of duty,
Regardless of pleasure or beauty,
While the Beaver keeps working away.

And here's to the man who is giving
The wage that is righteous to pay,
Whose wealth is not scrimped out of others,
Who thinks of employes as brothers,
While the Beaver keeps working away.

And to artist, and writer, and teacher,
Who feel and who think and who say
The Truth as they see it and know it,
Who care for their fellows and show it,
While the Beaver keeps working away.

And here's to the man in the Senate,
Giving bond unto honor each day,
To watch for the Wrong and expose it,
And fight till the Right overthrows it,
While the Beaver keeps working away.

Yes, honor each work and each worker,
For beauty and wealth may decay,
But the seed of each honest endeavor
Will grow into fruitage forever,
While the Beaver keeps working away.

Ontario is going to fight the great white plague. The ravages of consumption are appalling. As Mr. J. P. Downey, M.P.P., so aptly expressed it, "The disease seeks life at the period of greatest happiness to the individual and greatest value to the community." The Provincial Board of Health will take the matter up and report on the whole problem at the next session of the Legislature. It is probable county sanitoria may be adopted and that there must be compulsory notification to county boards of health of all cases of tuberculosis.

The Ontario Municipal Union has submitted to the Ontario Legislature a bill giving cities the option of holding municipal elections on the last Monday in November and polling the first Monday in December. This would be a decided improvement on the present system, and would enable the newly-elected councils to assume office, on the first day of January. Why should election strife and bickering, the jealousy and rivalry of candidates, the disturbing elements and various cries raised at election time be experienced during the Christmas season, when all is generally peace and good-will. Why should such a period be broken in upon by municipal politics? The change of date cannot be brought about too soon.

not be disturbed by the community being divided into rival camps. Let the contest be held earlier and all will be peaceful and serene in the larger centres during the Yuletide period. Mr. Preston, M. L. A., of Brantford, has consented to take charge of the bill for the Ontario Municipal Union. It is hoped that the measure, which has much to commend it, will be adopted by the Ontario Legislature.

South Carolina, which had taken power to not only govern, but control the sale of liquor within the state, has finally voted to go out of the liquor selling business, in which it has been engaged since 1893, the date at which Senator Tillman brought the state dispensary law into existence. Under that law the state retained for itself the right of selling intoxicants. The astounding feature of the situation is that the law endured so long, for from the very first it had against it the combined forces of the prohibitionists and the liquor dealers. The prohibitionists objected to the law as a matter of principle, the evils arising from the sale of intoxicants being even greater in their eyes when the state was a party to the transaction than under former conditions. Logically their position was unassailable. The liquor dealers naturally objected to being deprived of the profits of the business. But the majority of the people were with Senator Tillman. They have not been with him for some years, however. All the claims made for the state dispensary system have long ago been proven to be false. There is as much drunkenness in South Carolina as there ever was, and the crimes and poverty arising from the abuse of intoxicants are as much in evidence as they ever were. The people of the state would long ago have returned to the license system but for the fact that it was found that Senator Tillman had converted the dispensary system into a political machine which held them tight within its grip. The repeal of the law by the Legislature means that the people have finally beaten the machine.

To Owners Of Bad Breath—

FOUL ODOR OF INDIGESTION, SMOKING, EATING OR DRINKING STOPPED AT ONCE WITH STUART'S CHARCOAL LOZENGES

TRIAL PACKAGE TO PROVE IT SENT FREE.

Bilious breathers, onion eaters, indigestion victims, cabbage consumers, smokers, drinkers and those with gas on the stomach are in a class all by themselves, distinguished by a powerful bad breath.

They all breathe, and as they breathe they whiff out odors which makes those standing near turn their heads away in disgust. The pitiable part of it is that these victims do not realize what a sickening thing a bad, offensive breath is to others.

Charcoal is a wonderful absorber of gases and odors. It absorbs 100 times its own volume of gas.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges will put a stop to your bad, offensive breath, and to your belchings, whatever the cause or source, because the charcoal quickly absorbs all noxious, unnatural odors and gases.

If you suffer from indigestion and belch gas as a result, Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges will absorb all the gas and make you stop belching.

If on getting up in the morning you have such a bad, bilious breath that you can almost smell it yourself, Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges will get rid of it for you quickly.

If you have been smoking or chewing, or have been eating onions or other odorous things, Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges will make your breath pure and sweet.

Charcoal is also the best laxative known. You can take a whole boxful and no harm will result. It is a wonderfully easy regulator.

And then, too, it filters your blood—every particle of poison and impurity in your blood is destroyed, and you begin to notice the difference in your face first thing—your clear complexion.

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are made from pure willow charcoal, and just a little honey is put in to make them palatable, but not too sweet.

They will work wonders in your stomach, and make you feel fine and fresh. Your blood and breath will be purified. You will feel clean inside.

We want to prove all this to you, so just send for a free sample today. Then after you get it and use it, you will like them so well that you will go to your druggist and get a 25c box of these Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges.

Send us your name and address to-day and we will at once send you by mail a sample package free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 93 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

RAID IN ELGIN COUNTY.

Proprietor Arrested But Escapes From Pursuing Officer.

St. Thomas, March 9.—Provincial License Inspector Ayearst of Toronto made a successful raid on the hotel at Yarmouth Centre Thursday morning. He, with High Constable Hopkins and a score of officers, visited the resort and found a supply of liquor and some women of alleged questionable character.

The proprietor, John Wilcox, was arrested. There was a big dance in progress, and over one hundred people were having a high old time.

Constable Prowse of Port Stanley was placed in charge of the prisoner, but he, seeing an opportune opening, bolted for liberty, followed by the officer, who emptied his revolver after the fleeing man.

Wilcox was one of the men wanted to give important evidence in the celebrated Orwell hotel case, but fled the country.

WHAT MR. FOWLER SAID

He Made No Charges Says Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

Premier Declares Fowler Left Nothing to Investigate, and Says Incident Is Closed—Mr. Bourassa Asks For An Enquiry New Insurance Report Is Down—Duty On German Silver and Nickel Taken Off.

Ottawa, March 9.—Canadians far away from the capital will have some difficulty in figuring in their mind's eye the scene in the Commons yesterday afternoon. With it went the last vestige of self respect that the popular chamber is supposed to have been possessed of. It declared by its action, or want of action, that the reputation of the House, the reputation of the Government, the reputations of Ministers, were each and all of them of no concern to any one in it.

The feature evident was the treatment of the House of the Fowler charges involving the "wine, women and graft" connections of Ministers of the Crown.

Incidental, was the conduct of Sir Wilfrid Laurier in regard to the inforcement of the charter rights of the people along the Grank Trunk to be given a penny-a-mile service. By his indifference Sir Wilfrid showed his contempt for public rights and his friendship for Charles M. Hays in his defiance of the sacred undertaking of a great railway, franchise and an immense national subsidy in the early days of the Grand Trunk.

Came Out With Credit.

The man who came out of the afternoon with credit was Henri Bourassa. Few outside of the political arena can imagine the courage necessary to go into a fight of this kind and, standing in his place, call upon the head of the Government to clear his Cabinet of charges, even of insinuations, leveled against them. Mr. Bourassa did his work courageously and put it right up to Sir Wilfrid, and, for that matter, up to the Opposition, and having done his work, sat down, amid a cold resentful silence.

Mr. Bennett also showed courage by standing up and asking Mr. Carvell, who had thrown charges at him, to make them good. True, Mr. Carvell was away, but he should have been there. Mr. Bennett was there, and he was ready, and he wound up by telling the Premier that not only had Mr. Fowler not withdrawn his charges of "Wine, women and graft," but Mr. Bennett repeated them in substance as against at least one Minister.

Bourassa Stirs.

Mr. Bourassa recalled the statement made some days ago by the first Minister. He then had said that the session could not close without the charges made by Mr. Fowler, either being withdrawn or thoroughly investigated. He had only stipulated for delay until the report of the insurance commission should be received.

This report of the insurance commission contains matter of the highest importance, and that newspapers are charging members of this House with conduct improper for members of Parliament. In this House innuendoes and charges have been made respecting a certain land deal against Messrs. Foster, Fowler, Lefurgey and Bennett. On the other hand, Mr. Fowler has said in the House that if he were attacked on account of anything connected with the insurance investigation, that he would show improper conduct on the part of Ministers and members involving women, wine and graft. If not attacked he would conceal his knowledge; if he was attacked he would expose them.

Both the first Minister and the leader of the Opposition had promised that the session would not be allowed to close without Mr. Fowler's charges being investigated. He called upon them to make their statements good.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier said there were no charges. Mr. Fowler had used some strong language, but no charges were made, no names were mentioned. There was at present nothing to investigate. He was not aware that anything contained in the report of the insurance commission so concerned any member of the House as to call for action by Parliament.

R. L. Borden emphatically denied that there was any deal between himself and the Premier involving any saw-off. There was no understanding and there would be none.

"If any charges are made," said Mr. Borden, "against any member of the Opposition, then as leader of the Opposition we will brook no delay in demanding an investigation. I am ready this afternoon to go ahead if any charges are filed."

New Member Introduced.

Mr. Michaud, the new member for Victoria, N.B., who succeeds Hon. John Costigan, was introduced yesterday in the House by Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Mr. Emmerson.

The remainder of the sitting was devoted to the tariff in Committee of Ways and Means, nearly all the items being passed.

Mr. Fielding announced that it had been decided to take off the duty on German silver and nickel. Mr. Foster suggested that the Finance Minister reconsider the duty on newspaper matrices. Mr. Fielding promised to look into the matter, and said that if he found there was an injustice it would be remedied.

At the close of the discussion on the tariff the Finance Minister announced that where there had been an increase in the duty since the budget announcement they would not go back and collect, and that, on the other hand, when there had been a decrease, the parties concerned would get the benefit of it.

The House adjourned at 11.30 p.m.

A Specialist's Prescription for women

Who Feel Tired and Run Down.

A Remedy that Gives New Life and Vigor and makes Women Feel Good.

Dr. Hugo's Health Tablets for Women are the prescription of a specialist.

We don't say that no other living physician could prescribe so good a remedy for women. But we do say this. The ordinary practising physician cannot prescribe so good a one, and no living physician can prescribe a better one.

Dr. Hugo put into the prescription all the knowledge, experience and skill which he had acquired in forty years' practice as a specialist in women's diseases, and included as well the discoveries of all other great physicians.

All that is latest in medicine—all that has been found useful to women, is contained in them. Nothing useless has been included. Nothing useful has been left out.

The result is, that every requirement of the female system in any possible condition is met by them.

And this fact has been certified to by leading physicians and chemists on this continent, to whom Dr. Hugo's prescription was submitted.

If you are in a run-down condition and don't feel as well as you would like to, or suffer from any menstruation difficulty, or weakness peculiar to your sex, avail yourself at once of the prescription of this great and good physician.

The cost of 72 tablets, enough for an extended treatment, is only 50c.

INTENSIFIED FRUIT JUICES
AN IMPROVEMENT ON NATURE

A Discovery that is Revolutionizing Medicine.

Remarkable Success Attends the Finding of a New Medicinal Compound by Combining the Juices of Apples, Oranges, Figs and Prunes.

Fruit helps to keep one healthy. Fruit, in itself, will not cure disease. The medicinal principle—or that part of fruit which has a curative effect—is in such infinitesimal quantities, that it is unable to overcome a diseased condition of the stomach, liver, bowels, kidneys or skin.

Just here is where science stepped in. An Ottawa physician did what nature could not do. He first found that some fruits were stronger medicinally than others—and that apples, oranges, figs and prunes contained all the healing properties of other fruits. There are two principles in fruit juices—bitter and sweet. After extracting the juices of the four fruits mentioned, this physician succeeded in replacing one atom of the sweet principle by one of the bitter. This resulted in an entirely new combination being formed. This new compound was many times more active medicinally than the fruit juices. Where eating fruit only helped to keep one well, this compound actually cured disease.

To make it more valuable still, this physician added the finest tonics and antiseptics, and then, by evaporating the entire compound to a powder, made it into tablets.

This, in short, is the method of making "Fruit-a-tives"—these wonderful tablets — the most reliable cure for Constipation, Billousness, Stomach Troubles, Kidney and Bladder Disease and Skin Affections. Being made from fruit, "Fruit-a-tives" may be taken by women and children without fear of ill-effect.

Don't take a substitute. If your druggist does not handle them, send 50c for a box to Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Chronicles of Don Q.

BY K. AND HESKETH PRITCHARD.

(Copyright by Pearson Publishing Company.)

THE PAROLE OF GEVIL-HAY.

If you take a map of Spain and follow the Mediterranean coast, where, across the narrow seas, the mountains of Europe and the mountains of Africa stand up forever one against the other, you will find on the Spanish side the broad line of the Andalusian highlands stretching from Jeres to Almeria and beyond. Here is a wild, houseless country of silent forest and evergreen thicket climbing up toward barren, sun-tortured heights. It is patched with surfaces of smooth rock, and ravines strewn with tumbled bowlders; lined by almost untrodden mule tracks, and sparsely dotted with the bottle-shaped chozas of the charcoal burners and the herdsmen.

The lord of this magnificent desolation was locally, though not officially, acknowledged to be a certain brigand chief, known far and wide as Don Q., an abbreviation of the nickname Quebranta-Huesos, which is, being interpreted, the bone-smasher, a name by which the neophron or bone-breaking vulture goes in those parts. In answer to any question as to where the bandit came from or when he began to harry the countryside, one was told that he had been there always, which, though manifestly untrue, was, nevertheless, as near an approach to historical accuracy as may be found on many a printed page.

For Don Q., though perhaps not endowed with the sempiternal quality, had many other attributes of mysterious greatness. Few had seen him, but all knew him and feared him, and most had felt his power; he had cognizance of what was said or done, or, indeed, even thought of, throughout the length and the breadth of the wild region over which he held sway. He dealt out reward and punishment with the same unsparing hand. If a goatherd pleased him, the fellow was made rich for life, but no man lived to bring him false information twice.

From his hidden abiding place in the black rock, 100 feet above the general camp of his followers, he was to the surrounding country as a poised hawk to a covey of partridges.

The stories of his savageries were brought down to the plains by leather-clad mountaineers, and occasional expeditions were sent up against him by those in authority in the towns. But every attempt failed, and the parties of guardias civiles came back fewer in numbers, having built cairns over their dead, leaving them near lonely shrines among the ravens and the big ragged birds of the sierra.

From all this it will be seen that the brigand chief was not a common brand of cutthroat; in fact, he belonged to that highest class known as sequestradores, or robbers who hold to ransom; and though his methods were considered unpleasant, he carried through most of his affairs with satisfaction to himself, for he was an exceptionally good man of business.

Gevil-Hay's obstinacy sprang from a variety of causes. He was in bad health and worse spirits, and he had for the whole period of his manhood governed a small kingdom of wild and treacherous hillmen in the interests of the British government, backed only by a handful of native police, and, what is more, had governed it with conspicuous success.

A party of civiles had just returned from a particularly unlucky excursion into the mountains, and there was, therefore, the less excuse for the foolhardiness of Gevil-Hay, who declined to pay any heed to the warnings of H.B.M.S. consul on the seaboard or the deep hints of his host at the little inn under the mountains, but continued to pursue his journey across the sierra.

He carried a revolver, it is true, but he found no use for it on a dim evening when something gripped his neck from behind. Indeed it was only after an interval that he understood vaguely how he came to be the centre of a hustling crowd of silent men who smelled offensively of garlic and leather. They tied him upon his horse and the party set their faces northeast toward the towering bulk of the higher sierra.

But for once in a way the spiders of Don Q. had taken a captive in their net of whom they could make nothing. In the dawn, when they got him out of the cane-built hut in which they had passed the latter part of the night, they saw that he was tall and thin and rather stooped, with a statuesque face of extreme pallor. So far he was not so altogether uncommon. But the brigands were accustomed to see character come out strongly in similar circumstances, yet Gevil-Hay asked no questions, he evinced no trace of curiosity as to where they were taking him. He showed nothing but a cold indifference. A man in his position who asked no questions was a man of mark. He puzzled them.

The truth was that Gevil-Hay deer, and his country retired him on a narrow income. He was unemotionally heart-broken. There was a woman somewhere in the past, a woman to whom the man's lonely heart had clung steadfastly through the years while health slowly and surely deserted him. "Love me little, love me long" has its corresponding lines set deep throughout the character, and if Gevil-Hay was incapable of a passion of love or sorrow, he was not ignorant of the pang of a long renunciation and an enduring regret.

Late in the afternoon a halt was called, the prisoner was blindfolded and led through the scrub; then the wind blew more sharply in his face and Gevil-Hay knew that he trod on wiry grass, which in turn changed to a surface of bare echoing rock. Passing out of this tunnel he was secured by having his hands tied, and, when his eyes were uncovered, he found himself in a small enclosed valley with sheer precipitous sides.

A couple of men hurried him up a winding pathway cut out of the cliff-face to the mouth of a cave, fronting which was a little natural terrace.

There they found Don Q., sitting in the sunshine, with a wide hat of felt drawn over his brows. Gevil-Hay saw nothing vulture-like but one lean hand like a delicate yellow claw that held the cloak about his neck.

"To whom have I the pleasure to address myself," asked the brigand, with extreme and unexpected politeness.

Gevil-Hay's hands being loosed, he fixed his single eye-glass and glanced round the glen before he replied.

"Perhaps you will be good enough to give me some idea of your career, and we can go into the question of the ransom at the end of it," resumed Don Q. in his courteous manner, as the other finished speaking.

Gevil-Hay answered briefly in good Spanish, for an Indian civilian is supposed to start in life equipped with a knowledge of every language under the sun.

"Ah, then, you have retired—well, been forced to retire—but with a pension? Yes!"

"Yes."

"How much?" he asked.

"Three hundred pounds a year."

"Ah," the brigand hesitates, while he made a mental calculation. "Your ransom, senor—" he stopped; he understood how to make a judicious use of suspense—"you are a poor man, you say, and you are lucky in that I believe you. I will name but a moderate sum, and after this conversation there will be no more about it. We will omit the subject while you remain my guest." The soft speech grew softer.

"There is no need to give my position a false name," answered Gevil-Hay; "I am your prisoner. Misfortune introduced us."

Above all things created, a man who defied him was abhorrent to the brigand, but now he saw one who looked him in the eyes without either fear or curiosity. Gevil-Hay interested him, but rather as a frog interests an vivisector.

"On one thing I pride myself, senor," he said presently. "When I speak, the thing which I say is unalterable. I am about to tell you the amount of your ransom. I will contrive to send down your message."

"You will have to give me time if you wish to get the money," said the other. "I have only my pension, and I must see if they will commute that."

"Your government will pay," asserted Don Q. suavely. "They will not lose so valuable a servant."

"Do you care for a worn-out coat?" asked Gevil-Hay with a mirthless laugh. "Beside, I came here in spite of warnings that the roads were unsafe. I must bear the consequences."

Don Q.'s wrinkled eyelids quivered.

"Shall we say $20,000?" he asked, as if deferring to his prisoner's opinion.

"You have said it, and that's the end," returned Gevil-Hay; "though," he added, "I don't think you are ever likely to see it. They will commute my pension on the scale of the probable duration of my life, and that will give no satisfactory average, I am afraid. I hope you may get $15,000. I doubt if you will get more."

"I trust for your sake I may get $20,000," replied the Spaniard, "otherwise a disappointment might lead to consequences—regrettable consequences."

Meanwhile Gevil-Hay wrote out his appeal and a request to Ingham, the consul at the seaport under the mountains, that he would urge the matter forward.

In the gloom, when the fire was lit outside the cave, Don Q. returned. He took the sealed letter that Gevil-Hay held ready for dispatch.

"And now, senor, I regard you as my guest," said he; "and in all things but one you may command me. I assure you I will do my best to play the host well and to make your stay among us pleasant to you. I have your parole, senor?"

Gevil-Hay hesitated. The fever had striven hard for his position and won it—won more than that. He had tasted much of life's sweetness and the joy of power and growing success, yet to-day—

"Yes," he answered.

As the days went on Gevil-Hay found he had a good deal in common with the chief, who proved himself an attentive host. There was something kindred between the two men, and yet Gevil-Hay was alternately attracted and repelled.

Yielding to the charm of Don Q.'s fine courtesy he was led on to talk of many things, and he talked well, while the chilly thin-framed hearer, crouching in his cloak over the fire, listened with interest to a later view of the great world than lay within his own remembrance. Also, the Englishman had been a wanderer in far countries; he was a man who spoke with authority, who understood the craft of administration and high affairs, so that he could converse on the level of actual knowledge and experience with one who held himself to be also a ruler and a lawgiver to no contemptible portion of mankind.

To Gevil-Hay—Don Q. was a study. He watched him as a snake might be watched by an imaginative rabbit. He was always following the livid-lidded eyes, always speculating on the thoughts which worked in that ill-balanced brain. For Don Q. was a Spaniard of the Spaniards, having the qualities of his race in excess. He was quite fearless, proud to distraction, unsurpassed in the kindly courtesy of a nation of aristocrats, and cruel beyond belief. Gevil-Hay, like many another man who has thought himself tired of life, clung to his chances of escape as they hourly grew less before his eyes. For one thing was apparent—Don Q.'s peculiarities did not lean to the side of mercy.

A couple of days after his arrival in the glen he asked the brigand chief what had been done with the two young brawlers who had drawn knives upon each other under the terrace.

Don Q. removed his cigarette to answer.

"They will annoy you no more, senor," he said with the anxiety of hospitality, "no more."

"What? Have you sent them away to some of your outlying detachments?" asked Gevil-Hay, for he had learned by this time that the robbers were posted at many points in the mountains.

Don Q. laughed, a venomous, sibilant laugh.

"They are gone—yes, with the other carrion—the vultures alone know where!"

The chief was in one of his black moods of intense and brooding melancholy. They were common with him, but this was the first which Gevil-Hay had seen.

It suddenly struck him that some leaven of insanity might lurk behind the fierce, bird-like aspect. No wonder his followers obeyed him at the run. His generosity and vengeance were out of all proportion to the deserving.

"Some day," said Gevil-Hay abruptly, "they will resent this kind of thing. There are many ways; they might betray you, and then—"

Don Q. gave him a poisonous glance.

"I have made provision for that also; but, no, senor, when I die, it shall be in my own manner and of my own will," and he relapsed again into musing.

It was then that Gevil-Hay found himself wishing his ransom might arrive in full, and wishing it with fervor. In a few minutes Don Q. spoke again.

"If you own a dog, he may love you; but a pack of wolves are kept in order with the lash. These," he waived his hand toward the gleaming campfires in the hollow, "are wolves. Also many men desire to join us—many more than I care to take. So you perceive, senor, I can afford to lose a few who offend me."

So the days wore on, but one evening there was a new development.

Gevil-Hay was allowed to wander at large about the glen, and on this occasion, after an ugly climb, he arrived at the head of a deep and narrow cleft in the higher rocks, along the bottom of which a faint track was visible. As he surveyed it with an involuntary thought of escape, he heard his name mentioned. Of course it was some hidden sentinel, but he was surprised when the man repeated his call in the same low voice, for Don Q.'s men were usually sullen.

"What do you want?" asked Gevil-Hay after a little hesitation.

"The thing I say must be forever between us two alone. You can help us; we can help you. That is the reason I speak. No, senor, stay where you are. If you promise I will show you my face."

"I promise nothing."

"Ah, that is because you have not heard. Is it not true that my lord of the sierra is taking from you all your riches?"

"Yes."

"And you, like the rest of us, would do something to save them? Is not that also so?"

"It may be."

"Then do it. It is but a little thing, and in the doing should taste sweet. You will not betray me?"

"As I have not seen you I cannot."

"But you will not?"

"No."

"Then take it, senor. Here, look up toward the lentisco."

In the warm gloom of the lentisco shrub something cold and ominous passed from hand to hand, and Gevil-Hay's fingers closed on the butt of a revolver.

"You mean me to kill him?" he said slowly.

A laugh was the answer, and words followed the laugh.

"Yes, for you have opportunity. Then you shall go free, for we hate him."

"And you?"

There was another laugh.

"A pardon, and the blood money between us. Now go."

And it cannot be denied that in the soft southern dusk Charles Gerald Gevil-Hay was horribly tempted. He stood there in the silence and wrestled with the temptation. Arguments came to him freely. By firing that shot he would be serving his kind as well as himself. Tormented with thoughts, he slid back into the glen and walked across the short, hard grass toward the terrace. He passed by the fires round which the men were gambling. Lean columns of smoke rose slowly into the higher air, strange cries filled the glen, for the sequestradores played high, and each voice rose and fell with its possessor's luck.

Presently he went in. Don Q. scowled at him and threw him an English newspaper. It was 14 days old, and not one which Gevil-Hay was wont to buy when at home; but in the whirl of his thoughts he fled to it as to a refuge. He was about to open it, holding it at arm's length for the purpose, when his glance lit upon a notice in the obituary column.

"Hertford.—On March 10, suddenly, at Frano hall, Franobridge, George Chigwell Aberstone Hertford, eldest son of the late—"

He folded the paper with mathematical precision and read two columns of advertisements without seeing a word of what he read.

that El Palido, as the men called him, was sitting there more white and more statuesque than ever. His eyes were blank and set. By his tense attitude Don Q. knew that some struggle was going on within the Englishman's mind, and his own face filled with an ominous light as he glanced at one of his letters.

"Senor," he said aloud, in a changed voice, "news of your ransom has come.

Eighteen thousand dollars. I said $20,000."

Gevil-Hay started slightly, controlled himself and said unconcernedly:

"And so?"

"And so, senor. I am prepared to stand by my side of the bargain," replied the chief with a poisonous politeness. "At the rising of the moon nine-tenths of you shall go free from the head of our glen!"

There was a silence, broken only by the noises in the camp.

"Am I to be grateful?" he asked frigidly.

Don Q. smiled with a suave acquiescence.

"And because your conversation has interested me, senor, you shall have the privilege of choosing which tenth of yourself you will leave behind."

"In fact, not content with making me a beggar, you will take from me all chance of regaining my losses."

Don Q. bowed again and spoke with exceeding gentleness.

"It comes to that. I am very much afraid it comes to that," he said "it is terribly unfortunate, I admit, but I do not see how it can be avoided. But you are a comparatively heavy man, senor; I think I should advise you to leave a limb behind you. One can live without a limb."

The brigand's callousness startled Gevil-Hay, well as he fancied he knew him. And in the breast of the slow-moving, phlegmatic man the temptation arose again with accumulated strength. A loaded revolver was under his hand, practical impunity waited upon the deed, and beyond that life—and Helen!

But he had passed his word, given his parole, and a man occasionally finds his honor an inconvenient possession.

Through it all the bandit sat and watched him with blinking eyelids in the lamplight. Don Q.'s sight seemed not very good, but it served to show him what he wanted to see. He had broken down the indifference of Gevil-Hay.

"I should certainly advise you to leave a limb," repeated Don Q., at last.

"You villain! You unutterable villain!"

Don Q.'s hand fell to his knife as he sprang to his feet and faced his captive.

"The one fact for which I am really sorry at this moment," went on Gevil-Hay, "is that I should have allowed such a thing as you to associate with me on equal terms! If I had guessed to what genus you belonged I would never have talked with you or remained near you except I had been held there by force! Now you know what I think of you, and I assure you, although I can guess the price I shall have to pay for the pleasure of saying so, it is cheap!"

Don Q.'s angled face was yellow. His figure shook.

"Senor, you have spoken as no man has ever spoken to me before," said Don Q., at last. "There are many ways of conducting those little scenes which lie between this moment and your departure. By the time the moon has risen it will be hard to recognize El Palido!"

There was a fierce significance in the last few words that any other time might well have made Gevil-Hay's heart turn cold. But now with his blood up and the hopelessness of his position apparent, he merely turned his back with a stinging gesture of repulsion.

"You evil beast!" he repeated, "as long as I am not annoyed by the sight of you I can bear anything!"

So Gevil-Hay turned his back and stared into the night. The noises below were hushed. The encampment was waiting for him—waiting—and for a third time temptation leaped upon him. And that was the worst spasm of all. When it left him it left him exhausted. His mouth felt dry, his brow clammy.

He was still standing facing the opening of the cave, and after a pause a voice broke the silence.

"As you have a loaded revolver in your pocket, why do you not use it. Why do you not shoot me down, senor."

"You know I could not," replied Gevil-Hay comprehensively.

"And are you not afraid of what is coming?"

Gevil-Hay turned and held out the revolver. Don Q.'s face was a study. He took no notice of the other's action, but asked:

"Because of your parole?"

He was answered by another question.

"How did you know about the revolver?"

"I instructed the man who gave it to you. I wished to see whether I had read you aright. Yet your inability to shoot me hurt you. Is not that so?"

"I wish I could do it now! At least there is no necessity for more talk between us. Maim me and let me go or kill me! Only take away this revolver from me before I—"

Don Q. took the pistol and laid it with deliberation upon the table beside him, then he spoke.

"Senor," said he, "when I find one like you I do not spoil the good God's work in him. You are not the type of man who comes to harm at my hands. A man who can keep his honor as you have done is worthy of life. Had you shot me, or rather had you attempted to do so—for I bear the charmed life of him who cares not whether he lives or dies—then the story of your death would have been related in the posadas of Andalusia for generations. But now, take your life, yes, take it from my hands.

"After to-night we shall see each other no more; but when you look back over your life, senor, you will always remember one man, who, like yourself, was afraid of nothing; a man worthy to stand beside you. Don Q., once of the noblest blood in Spain. A man—" The brigand checked himself in his flood of florid rhapsody and Spanish feeling. "Adios, senor."

To be continued.

HEALTHY BABIES.

Healthy babies are good babies—it is only the sick child that cries all the time. Mothers, if you want to see your little ones smiling and happy give them Baby's Own Tablets—there is a smile in every dose. The Tablets cure all the little ailments of childhood arising out of a disordered condition of the stomach or bowels. They are good for all babies and are sold under the guarantee of a Government analyst to contain no opiates or harmful drugs. Mrs. F. D. Kirk, Dumfries, N. We Offer as EVIDENCE to show that Silver Bird is a purchase at 15c per share the following facts:

One day last week the superintendent of one of the best known mines at Cobalt, the shares of which are traded in largely every day on the New York and Toronto Exchanges, came into our office and purchased a large block of Silver Bird at 15c. per share. He said he believed it the best investment offered in Cobalt shares. He backed his opinion with his money.

A Mining Engineer and Mineralogist came to our office some days ago and purchased a large block of at 15c. per share for himself and friends. He said he had just come from Cobalt, where he had made a visit to and examined Silver Bird Mine, and had made his own assays. He said the property was even better than we represented, and that in his opinion Silver Bird would be one of the greatest and most profitable mines in the Camp. He having backed his opinion with his money needs no argument and speaks for itself.

The miners employed upon the near-by mines surrounding Silver Bird are placing their faith and their money in these shares. These men are miners and are on the ground where they can see Silver Bird every day. They know a good thing when they see it, and are backing it up with what money they have for investment.

Bankers, brokers and conservative business men throughout the whole country are now buying Silver Bird for investment.

We strongly advise the investing public to place their money in Silver Bird at the prevailing price to-day, 15 cents per share—the best buy ever offered in

COBALT

We say to you that Silver Bird will make you money. We say to you with every degree of confidence that the dividends alone on each share of Silver Bird within this year will equal the amount for which you can now purchase it. We advise that you buy Silver Bird, and that you hold it tight, and do not be induced to part with it at less than par. Within the year 1907 everybody will be trying to buy Silver Bird at from $1.00 to $1.50 per share.

Silver Bird will make a jump one of these days, and then it will be too late to buy it at its first issue price

15 CENTS PER SHARE.

FREE TO YOU—MY SISTER

FREE TO YOU AND EVERY SISTER SUFFERING FROM WOMEN'S AILMENTS.

I am a woman.
I know woman's sufferings.
I have found the cure.
I will mail, free of any charge, my home treatment with full instructions to any sufferer from women's ailments. I want to tell all women about this cure—you, my reader, for yourself, your daughter, your mother, or your sister. I want to tell you how to cure yourselves at home without the help of a doctor. Men cannot understand women's sufferings. What we women know from experience, we know better than any doctor. I know that my home treatment is a safe and sure cure for Leucorrhoea or Whitish discharges, Ulceration, Displacement or Falling of the Womb, Profuse, Scanty or Painful Periods, Uterine or Ovarian Tumors or Growths, also pains in the head, back and bowels, bearing down feelings, nervousness, creeping feeling up the spine, melancholy, desire to cry, hot flashes, weariness, kidney and bladder troubles where caused by weaknesses peculiar to our sex.

I want to send you a complete 10 days' treatment entirely free to prove to you that you can cure yourself at home, easily, quickly and surely. Remember, that it will cost you nothing to give the treatment a complete trial; and if you should wish to continue, it will cost you only about 12 cents a week, or less than two cents a day. It will not interfere with your work or occupation. Just send me your name and address, tell me how you suffer, if you wish, and I will send you the treatment for your case, entirely free, in plain wrapper, by return mail. I will also send you free of cost, my book—"WOMAN'S OWN MEDICAL ADVISER" with explanatory illustrations showing why women suffer, and how they can easily cure themselves at home. Every woman should have it, and learn to think for herself. Then when the doctor says—"You must have an operation," you can decide for yourself. Thousands of women have cured themselves with my home remedy. It cures all, old or young. To Mothers of Daughters, I will explain a simple home treatment which speedily and effectually cures Leucorrhoea, Green Sickness and Painful or Irregular Menstruation in Young Ladies. Plumpness and health always result from its use.

Wherever you live, I can refer you to ladies of your own locality who know and will gladly tell any sufferer that this Home Treatment really cures all woman's diseases and makes women well, strong, plump and robust. Just send me your address, and the free ten days' treatment is yours, also the book. Write to-day, as you may not see this offer again. Address:

A LOVER OF PEACE — GOLDEN TEXT; "BLESSED ARE THE PEACEMAKERS, FOR THEY SHALL BE CALLED THE CHILDREN OF GOD."

Historical Setting.

Time. — According to our Bible margins Isaac was born about 1896 B.C., and died 1716 B.C., aged 180 years.

Place. — He was born in Beersheba, and spent most of his life in "The South," including Hebron, Beersheba, Berar, Beer-Lahai-Roi.

Isaac means laughter. The cheerful or "Friendly One." Three similar explanations are given of the origin of the name, each, according to some of the higher critics, derived from a different original author and tradition, but there is no reason why all should not be true, being from three different points of view. In Gen. 17: 17, "Abraham laughed" at the idea of a son being born to those so old. In Gen. 18: 12, "Sarah laughed" incredulously at the idea of having a son in her old age. In Gen. 21: 6, Sarah laughed in joy and gratitude at the birth of her son.

Isaac was born at Beersheba, B.C. 1896. His father, Abraham, was 100 years old and his mother, Sarah, 90 years. His half-brother, Ishmael, the son of Hagar, was 13 or 14 years old at this time. Isaac was the heir of the promises made to Abraham in the line of blessings which were to bless all nations.

Isaac, as the son of old age, was naturally of weakly constitution, without great physical vigor and that overflow of animal spirits which characterizes a healthy, vigorous youth. He was of a grave and contemplative character, rather than of active initiative, living a peaceful and simple rather than a strenuous life.

When Ishmael, his half-brother, was 16 or 18 years old, strong, energetic, full of animal spirits, he made fun of his small, weakly, retiring little brother, Isaac. There were several reasons for this in addition to the natural tendency of a strong, energetic youth to tyrannize over his younger, contemplative, and shrinking companions. The newcomer had taken the older boy's place as heir of Abraham's wealth and position. The elder was thrust aside as an inferior, the son of an inferior. It was a downfall for Hagar, too, from the mother of the heir of a wealthy chief to a servant again. Gen. 16, 4 states that Hagar had despised Sarah, and implies that she would join with her son in his intense feelings against Isaac.

The feeling grew so strong that Hagar and Ishmael were sent away to make their own way in the world. Ishmael was old enough to do it if he would. This was the way of peace. It was also the best for both boys.

Genesis 22. The last and supreme test of Abraham's faith, by which it blossomed into an eternal example of the strongest faith and obedience, was when the patriarch was commanded to sacrifice his son, the only hope by which the promises to him could be fulfilled.

The spirit of the test was perfect consecration, perfect faith, perfect obedience: "the spirit which offers precious things simply because they are precious." This is the essence of patriotism, of love to God, and of love to man. It is not the pains, the losses, the sufferings, the death of the hero, or martyr, or patriot that we love to see, but the spirit that was willing to endure them for a noble purpose.

Abraham lived among idolaters who sacrificed to their idols their choicest treasures, their most beloved, their first-born sons.

But these were unwilling victims. In Abraham's case Isaac showed the same spirit of consecration and faith as his father did. It was as when parents consecrate their children to missionary work, to patriotism, where the life is offered freely and gladly by the children for the sake of their country and the kingdom of God. It was as when our heavenly Father gave His Son, who offered himself gladly and freely for the saving of mankind.

Isaac was not married till he was 40 years old.

12-25. Isaac lived with his father in the great encampment of "The Oaks," near Hebron, till Abraham's death, B.C. 1821. He inherited his father's property and position, and continued the same kind of life as a farmer chieftain.

Moving towards the Well of Lahai-roi, "The well of the Living One that Seeth Me." Here it was that Ishmael's mother Hagar found a resting-place and a fountain of water after her hopeless wanderings in the desert. Isaac could never walk round that well, or sit down beside it, or drink out of it, but his tears would come fast for poor, ill-used Hagar and poor, outcast Ishmael, till he wished again that he had never been born rather than that they should both be outcast from their proper home on his account"; and "here God visited Isaac also."

The region where Isaac was now living was on the borders of the great Arabian desert, and was subject to drought. In a time of famine Isaac took his flocks and herds and moved northwesterly 50 or 60 miles to the rich lowlands of the Philistines at Gerar, near the Mediterranean Sea. Gerar is 25 miles a little north of west from Beersheba.

Here Isaac fell into the same sin of falsehood under the same temptation as his father. It is so easy to imitate the faults of good men and soothe the conscience by recalling the same fault as ours in some great and holy man.

12. After this Isaac was greatly prospered in that fertile region. He received . . . an hundredfold, "a very unusual yield." Isaac and his Philistine neighbors realized that the cause of his prosperity was because the Lord blessed him. His worship of God and his separation from all idol worship made him as "a city set upon a hill."

13. And the man waxed (grew) great till (v. 14) the Philistines envied him, and they showed their ill-will (v. 15) by filling up his wells with earth.

16. And Abimelech. A Philistine king at Gerar. Go from us. Because there was likely to be trouble from the Philistines, whose temper was against prosperous foreigners growing rich in their country, he found that "the meek shall inherit the earth." Pitched his tent. "Encamped,"—referring sometimes to military encampment and to a more settled habitation than the common term for nomadic tenting.

Then he moved up the valley of Gerar into less fertile regions, but nearer to his old Beersheba home. The peacemaking cost him something.

18. Digged . . . wells . . . called their names after the names by which his father had called them. They were the good old names of blessed memories. His father had chosen wisely the best places. The memory of Abraham was potent with Isaac. He loved to give his father credit. "Still was he offering himself to a parent's service."

It is always wise to choose the best even if it is old, rather than an inferior, new simply because it is new. The ageless truths are the best, though we may have to restore them from accumulations of foreign material with which the Philistines have encumbered them.

19. Digged in the valley. A new well was now dug by Isaac's servants. This was Isaac's right. Of springing water, Hebrew, of living waters, i.e., of running water, rare and usually precious for its cool freshness, and for being perennial.

20. The herdmen of Gerar did strive, etc. The Philistines claimed the well because it was in their country, and Isaac's herdmen claimed it because they discovered and dug the well. Called the name of the well Esek. That is, contention or strife.

21. Another well . . . Sitnah. Hatred, spitefulness. From the same root with Sitnah is derived, Satan, an adversary, or hater.

22. Another well . . . . they strove not. "Isaac left the valley." All these were in the valley of the stream that flows by Gerar into the Mediterranean. Isaac followed up the stream till he came to the source of one of its branches at Rehoboth, 30 miles to the southeast.

23. He went up from thence to Beersheba, 18 miles northeast of Rehoboth. This was the old paternal home. Many memories of his father and mother, his brother, his marriage and his own early life clustered around the old homestead and hallowed it.

24. The Lord appeared unto him. In what way we know not, but probably as in other appearances to his people. The God of Abraham. "God is not the God of the dead, but of the living." "Therefore he is assured that Abraham is not lost by death, nor God's covenant with him lost." Fear not. As a man of peace, unwilling to strive or fight, he may have feared that his enemies would take advantage of his good disposition, and injure him. God bids him to have no fear so long as he is serving God and doing right. He is assured against any doubts or fears he may have had, or any feeling of unworthiness from his having so different a career from his father, that the covenant with Abraham, with all its blessings, is continued to him the son and heir.

25. He builded an altar there. For sacrifice and worship. He had the permanent institutions of religion, with the thought of forgiveness, consecration, prayer and worship. And pitched his tent there. Made a permanent abode for his household. Digged a well. A perennial supply. It was in addition to the one Abraham dug. "Two wells still exist at this place, attesting the correctness of the record." Here Abimelech came, led on, doubtless, by the admirable character of Isaac, and proposed a covenant between them, which was sealed by an oath. Hence the place renewed its name "Shebah," an oath, of "Beersheba," well of the oath, a sign of permanent peace with his neighbors.

Now, Isaac was an example of daily living such as belongs to us, filled with the spirit which should pervade, inspire, and elevate our daily lives. His life was uneventful, almost monotonous. He has been called "the Wordsworth of the Old Testament." We find in him "those refined, sensitive, pleasant, passive virtues which make tender and helpful the home relations, and which are the grace of all social intercourse." "Eventful lives are large, commonplace, taking, but rough, elements of character." "The uneventful lives are the spheres in which are trained the fine, delicate, gentle, divinest elements of character."

WEAK AND WORN OUT

DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS GIVE NEW STRENGTH TO OVERWORKED WOMEN.

The life of a domestic is a hard one. She toils from early morning till late at night; her work is never done. Often she is too busy to get out of doors for a breath of fresh air. Unless her blood is kept rich and pure this close confinement wears on her health. Her strength will fail; she may lose her appetite, become pale and dyspeptic. In fact she is in danger of a general breakdown. Such was the condition of Miss Marie Anna Fleury, of Ste. Anne de la Parade, Que., before she used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. She says: "For a number of years I have been a servant. Up to a year ago I always enjoyed the best of health, but suddenly I was seized with pains in my side, my appetite left me, I became dyspeptic and lost all strength. I consulted a doctor who told me I was suffering from general debility. I was forced to stop work and for three months I followed the doctor's treatment, but without benefit. I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and as I had often read of the cases they cured. I decided to do so. I only took eight boxes before I was cured and to-day I am stronger that I ever was. My digestion is good and I can now go about my work without fatigue. I owe my thanks to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for what they have done for me and I strongly advise other weak sickly girls to give them a trial."

Miss Fleury's case is one of many that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have cured after doctors' help had failed. The success of these pills lies in the fact that they strike right at the root of the trouble—the blood. Other medicines simply act on the symptoms of a trouble—and may relieve, but they do not cure. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills make new rich blood—that is why they cure dyspepsia, rheumatism, anaemia, heart palpita-

THE GIRL AND THE BEE.

A Story of the Ignorance of a City Girl.

The city girl coming down to breakfast at the farm house and observing a plate of honey on the table said, "Oh, I see you keep a bee."

That's about the way some people talk about the blight of baldness—just as if a bald head was something one got all at once instead of being the result of long depletion by an insidious germ which thrives upon the roots of the hair and succumbs to only one known remedy Newbro's Herpicide.

Newbro's Herpicide is not a tonic any more than electricity is a fluid. It is an exterminator, pure and simple.

TRUTH ABOUT CANCER.

This Deadly Disease is a Puzzle to the Medical World.

About cancer we must admit that we know next to nothing. We don't know the cause of the disease. Except in a small proportion of very early cases, we don't know how to cure it. We don't know whether it is hereditary. We don't know if it is induced by peculiarities of diet. We don't know to what extent it depends upon climate. We don't know whether it is contagious or infectious. We don't know why it reserves its attacks for oldish people. We don't know why it is increasing. All we may do at present is to keep a sharp lookout for incipient cancers and cut them out ruthlessly.

In brief, we must try to kill the cancer before it really exists. The preliminary spot or pea-like growth must be removed at once. We must keep a weather eye upon inflamed places and have them looked after without delay. No one fears the removal of such tiny growths these days. Not even children are scared by small operations.

It is not sufficient that a family physician remove the suspected growth with lancet or caustic. He has done his share if he merely sounds the warning in time. The cutting out should be done by a thoroughly competent surgeon, one who has served an apprenticeship under a master of the art and not one who has merely dabbled in surgery while attending cases of pneumonia, typhoid and measles.

A good surgeon of this sort does not temporize with a cancer. He knows that the operation must be performed immediately and that there must be no fatuous endeavor to conserve healthy tissue. It is far better to remove two inches of sound flesh than to err on the cautious side and leave behind one microscopic cancer cell. It is only by such radical and merciless surgery that we may combat cancer. We must take it in time, and we must cut deep and wide.

And even then we are never sure.

Nature indeed is the only doctor whose skill is capable of combating cancer. Ehrlich and others have observed that of a given number of mice displaying symptoms of cancer a certain portion recover. The same thing is true of human beings.

Luckily there is no disease, no matter how virulent, that nature herself cannot cure, and so even in the worst cases of cancer it is well not to abandon hope. I have myself seen several cases of such spontaneous cures. One patient was a wealthy Baltimorean, whose malady was diagnosed by an operation as cancer of the stomach.

Three prominent American surgeons saw the cancer, which was inoperable because of its location. He submitted to a serum treatment, and three years later a second operation revealed the fact that his cancer had entirely disappeared, leaving a scar. Here was an undoubted case of cure. But did the serum do the work? Its advocates maintain that it did, but a great many very learned and scientific physicians hold that it did not. One cure, it is obvious, by no means establishes a specific's efficacy.—Dr. Hirshberg of Johns Hopkins in American Magazine.

Horses.

A shrewd trainer once remarked that he had often seen a $10,000 horse intrusted to a groom whom the owner of the horse would not have trusted with a ten dollar bill, says the Boston Transcript. Draft horses are now very costly, a good pair costing from $500 to $700 and even more, according to their weight, beauty and so forth, and yet we often see them driven by a man who is not fit to handle a mule. A school for driving has lately been started in Paris, especially for the benefit of cab drivers, and in Chicago a firm using some hundreds of horses is giving a series of lectures or instructions to its teamsters. The truckmen and contractors of Boston would find it to their advantage to adopt some similar plan. Even the carelessness about blanketing horses in the street is probably due as much to ignorance and thoughtlessness as to downright indifference.

Bermuda's Government.

The Bermudans govern themselves under a veto power which is practically never exerted, says World's Work. Their constitution is almost ideal. Here is a little world of its own with a population of 17,000 souls. The good citizens elect their representatives to a house of assembly, and they administer the affairs of the colony with economy, justice and success. Here, as in every English colony, one is impressed with the great respect for the law. Like many of the West Indian islands, the Bermudas have almost no crime. The two jails at St. George and Hamilton look like summer boarding houses, and Charles Dudley Warner tried to become a "paying guest" with the jailer at St. George, to share his pleasant tropical home and relieve his lonesomeness and ennui.

Pea Soup and Electric Baths.

Two savants have just announced the discovery of a means of prolonging life indefinitely. A Frenchman says a certain sort of electric bath solves the problem, and a Massachusetts man declares that pea soup is the elixir so long searched for. The French physician is a comparatively young man, who employs the bright vocabulary of youth, in which, it is said, there is no such word as "can't." The New Englander is ninety-three years old and has been growing young, so he asserts, qualities of pea soup and eschewed all other meat and drink with a view to turning back the hands of the clock.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Fire Near Marmora.

[illegible] afternoon last the home of [illegible] on the [illegible] wood Road, west of Marmora, was destroyed by fire with all its contents, says the Marmora Herald. HUDSON'S HARDWARE

FALSE.

Myopia is something parents need to be warned against in this age of so much close work both at school and at home, and I find it is frequently corrected with minus glasses, which will cause it to develop into real myopia and prove a life-long source of trouble, whereas by treatment with proper glasses in the beginning, it may be invariably cured. Two cases, for example. Just recently a young lad came to me to have his eyes tested, suffering from headache, etc. I found he had false or functional myopia, caused by muscular spasm, and nothing but a minus glass would give clear vision I explained conditions to him and told him that in order to make a cure it would be necessary for him to wear glasses for a time, that would blur for distance. He took the glasses, but next day brought them back, saying he "could see better without them." This after I had taken an hour in explaining the reasons why they would blur and why it was necessary to wear them for a time. He went away. I presume he will consult some one who will give him glasses that will give him "clear vision" and thus make him a confirmed myope for life. Continued with No. 2 example.

The Proposed Railway Creates Some Talk

The proposed electric or steam railway, for which application has been made to Parliament, which is to run through Ameliasburg by way of Roblin's Mills, Melville and Wellington, thence to Picton, has created quite a stir among the yeomen across the bay. The thought of having their farms cut up by a railway is not favorably received by all of them, so a correspondent informs us.

Mr. Russel's Funeral

The funeral of the late Wellington Russell, of Ameliasburg, took place yesterday at Albury, and was largely attended. The service was conducted by Rev. F. Howard, who preached a very impressive sermon from the text "Be ye also ready, for in such a time as ye think not the Son of Man cometh." The bearers were Wesley Sager, John G. Weese, Geo. W. Weese, Wellington Loveless, W. R. Weese and J. W. Brickman.

The Irish Evangelist

The evangelistic services in Holloway St. Church were concluded last evening, and the results, while gratifying to all the workers, will not be tabulated, as the seed or leaven of the gospel moves more slowly in some than others. The labors of Mr. McCombe have been appreciated, and the Irish evangelist will be welcomed to Belleville at any time and accorded deserved respect, and a good hearing. Mr. McCombe and Mr. Devitt left this forenoon

City Public Schools To Have New Seats.

BOARD OF EDUCATION TOOK STEPS LOOKING TO THAT END LAST NIGHT — NOTICE OF MOTION TO REDUCE THE SIZE OF THE BOARD — AN IMPORTANT SESSION.

A regular meeting of the Board of Education was held last night, at which the following members were in attendance; Messrs. G. A. Bennett, chairman; J. H. Anderson, P. Harrison, W. Johnson, B. Mallory, W. S. Morden, H. Naylor, F. E. O'Flynn, C. M. Reid, A. A. Roberts, W. R. Taylor, H. Walker, J. Wallace, Dr. Sprague and Rev. A. L. Geen.

The session was one of considerable interest and many matters of importance were dealt with.

COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

A letter was read from Ald. Marsh, Chairman of the Executive Committee of the City Council, requesting that the Board present their estimates as early as possible and also to keep them as low as possible owing to the prospect of the rate of taxation being higher this year.—Referred to Finance committee.

From the city Teachers' Association, requesting a grant of $25 from the Board, the Government giving a like amount.—Laid upon the table.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES.

The Sites, Building and Repairs committee presented two reports, namely, one as to additions being made to Grier street school in order to accommodate the increase of scholars, and secondly, that the usual necessary repairs be made to the rooms in the various schools of the city, during the vacation.

The Finance committee recommended the payment of the following accounts;

J. Lewis & Co.	$ 2.05
A. McCrodan	1.60
Cherry Press	3.85
W. McGie	30.73
A. McFee	5.00
C. P. R. Telegraph Co.	.28
Jos. Biggs	15.00

The committee recommended that Daniel Stapley receive $16 monthly instead of $14.16, owing to the representations made in his application for an increase.

Principal Milburn, of the High School, presented his report for the month of February. It showed that the average attendance was good; there was improvement in cases of punctuality, and the order and deportment was all that could be desired.

COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

On motion the Board went into Committee of the whole on reports, etc., Rev. A. L. Geen in the chair.

The Sites, Buildings and Repairs committee's report, re improvement to Grier street school, was considered. The report recommended that, if the walls are of sufficient strength, the roof be raised and rooms provided upstairs.

Mr. Anderson was not in favor of raising the roof of the building but would rather have an addition made in the rear. There was in his opinion sufficient room to do so.

Mr. O'Flynn spoke in support of the committee's report. He thought all the members of the committee were unanimous in making that recommendation.

Mr. Morden thought that an architect should be employed and an estimate made of the cost before any definite action was taken in the matter.

Mr. Bennett was in favor of a two-storey building and not making additions in the rear of the school.

It was decided to adopt the committee's report, unless the architect decides that the walls are not of sufficient strength to carry another storey.

Mr. Bennett moved that a clause be inserted in the report employing Mr. Walter Alford as the architect.

Mr. Anderson moved in amendment that Mr. Fred Gillen be employed as the architect.

Upon a vote being taken Mr. Alford was selected.

The report as a whole was adopted.

The report of the Sites, Buildings and Repairs Committee, re necessary repairs and improvements to the various school rooms, was discussed.

Mr. Roberts thought the committee, or some other committee, should have recommended reseating of the school rooms. He characterized the seats in the great majority of the rooms as disgraceful and unfit for the children to sit upon.

Mr. Morden was in favor of having all the school rooms provided with single seats.

Mr. Walker suggested that each chairman of the various committees of the Board call their committee together and make recommendations as to what is needed in the schools.

This was agreed to and the discussion ended.

The committee rose and reported. The report was adopted.

MOTIONS.

Moved by Rev. A. L. Geen, seconded by Mr. Anderson, that a medal given to the youngest pupil for passing the entrance examination be procured for Master Lavoie, as he was entitled to the same and had not received it.

The motion was unanimously adopted.

Moved by Rev. A. L. Geen, seconded by P. Harrison, that Mr. J. Biggs be engaged as caretaker of No. 2 School, at a salary of $16 per month.—Carried.

Mr. Morden moved, seconded by Mr. Roberts, that in the opinion of this Board immediate steps should be taken to improve the seating and equipment of the city schools, and that the Committee of Finance do include in their estimates for the current year such an amount for the above purpose, as the joint committees on Printing and Supplies and School Management may request at a joint meeting to be held within two weeks from this date.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. O'Flynn, seconded by Mr. Roberts, that a grant of $25 be made to the Belleville Teachers' Association.—Carried.

NOTICE OF MOTION.

Mr. Johnson gave notice that, at the next meeting of the Board, it will be moved that the Legislature of the province be requested to so alter the composition of Boards of Education that they be composed of not more than 12 members, and that those who represent the Public School section shall be elected by ballot by the Public School ratepayers of the city and in the same manner and at the same time as the Mayor and Aldermen are elected.

Mr. Johnson moved that the Committee on School Management and the Finance Committee be appointed a special committee to enquire into the plans adopted by other Boards of Education or School Boards for arranging the scales of teachers' salaries.

Board adjourned.

The Price Of Gas In Small Ontario Cities

The prices paid for gas in the smaller cities of Ontario are as follows:—

Peterboro pays $1.25 for either fuel or lighting gas.

Belleville pays $1.50 for lighting and $1.25 for fuel.

Berlin has a flat rate of $1.25, but the consumers pay a meter rental in addition.

Brantford uses natural gas for fuel, but the lighting rate is $1.50.

Chatham has a sliding scale, running from $1.25 to $1.75 for lighting, and $1 for fuel. There is a combination rate of $1.25. Consumers pay a monthly meter rental, which is graded according to the consumption.

Guelph has a rate of $1.40 for lighting and $1 for fuel.

Kingston pays $1.50 for lighting, and $1.00 for fuel.

Owen Sound has a rate of $1.25 for either lighting or fuel, but the consumers are assessed a meter rental.

St. Catharines pays $1.50 for lighting and $1.00 for fuel. There is a combination rate of $1.25.

Stratford pays $1.20 for both classifications, but there is a meter rental.

St. Thomas pays $1.15 for both, but the consumers settle for meter rental in six months when less than 100 feet is used.

Windsor has gas at $1.15 for either fuel or lighting, and no meter rent.

Dowie Is Dead.

Chicago, Ill., March 9. — (Special.)—John Alexander Dowie died this morning at Shiloh House, Zion City, from a complication of diseases.

A Driver's Troubles

Napanee Beaver; Mr. Chas. E. File, North Fredericksburgh, had a rather singular experience on Wednesday morning. He was driving down [illegible]lin's Hill and when near the covered bridge, he was knocked out of his seat by a couple of horses, which had partly climbed into his sleigh. The team belonged to Mr. Seldon Denison, and becoming unmanagable broke away from the rig, and dashed wildly down the steep hill. Mr. File had some trouble in controlling his own horse, but escaped with a few severe bruises on his back and shoulders, caused by the horses' hoofs.

"23" FOR ALLEGED FORTUNE TELLER.

WILLIAM DOHERTY, WHO CLAIMED TO BE ABLE TO TELL FORTUNES, DID NOT ANSWER HIS SUMMONS.

A man named Wm. Doherty, who lived on Commercial street, near the city limits, has of late been making a little coin by pretending to tell fortunes and stating where lost articles might be found. Complaints was made to the authorities in reference to the party, with the result that he was summoned to appear before the Magistrate on the following charge;

"That Wm. Doherty, on the 5th day of March, 1907, did unlawfully pretend, from his skill or knowledge in an occult or crafty science, to discover where or in what manner certain goods or chattels supposed to have been lost might be found, contrary to the provision of section 396 of the Criminal Code."

Doherty was to have appeared this morning at court, but he failed to do so. A warrant was issued for his arrest, and when the officer went to the house to execute the warrant he was informed that Doherty left the city on Thursday, immediately after being served with the summons, and had not been seen since.

Two ladies, who were summoned to give evidence, and also a young man were present, but the case had to be dropped for the present.

A Jolly Evening

After practice last night the choir of Bridge St. Church were entertained by Mrs. Percy Allen at her home on Victoria Ave., and a jollier time could hardly be imagined, for a happier crowd than Bridge St. choir, when not on dress parade, could not be found. To witness these people in their funny moments gives one an idea of the wonderful self-control they possess to be able to sit through an hour and a half church service so demurely. Games and music made up the evening programme, accom- [illegible] Miss Higgs, the latest acquisition to Belleville's musical circle, delighted the company with selections on the violin. The manager of the "lace" department in one of our Front street shoe stores added much to the evening's enjoyment, and was voted funny enough to be on the stage. It was after midnight when good-nights were said, everybody being satisfied that the Allens know how to give people a good time, and ready to repeat the visit at some future

Was Justified In Keeping The Letter.

PECULIAR CASE DECIDED BY JUDGE DEROCHE YESTERDAY.

A. Leblanc, of Crookston, was yesterday afternoon placed on trial before Judge Deroche, charged with retaining a letter not his property. It appears that some time ago the accused, from a county post office, obtained a letter addressed to his sister, a Mrs. Leclair, which was written by her husband. The letter was opened and the contents were such that Leblanc did not give the letter to his sister. After some evidence had been submitted the accused was acquitted, His Honor ruling that the contents of the letter were such that he was justified in retaining it. The County Attorney made some strong observations in reference to the letter's contents, and there may possibly be further action taken. Mr. Anderson represented the Crown, and Mr. E. J. Butler, the accused.

ELLIOTT G. STEPHENSON, OF DETROIT, IS THE MAN—HE WAS CHOSEN TO-DAY.

Toronto, March 9. — (Special.)—As had been expected, Elliott G. Stephenson, of Detroit, Supreme Councillor of the I. O. F., was to-day unanimously elected Supreme Chief Ranger of the order, in succession to the late Dr. Oronhyatekha.

The election was made at a meeting of the executive of the I. O. F., held in this city this morning.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

SPORTING NOTES.

Toronto Star: "Look at the Belleville line-up. Do you recognize any good ones?"

We did, old man. You can't see anything good, except through your own spectacles.

By a typographical error the Stratford Beacon has Leon Koyl, the Lindsay point, down for weighing 710 pounds.

Ottawa Citizen: If hockey players became impressed with the fact that every time they hit an opponent over the head they run the chance of committing homicide perhaps they would conclude that the risk is too great, even if no finer feelings deter them.

Kingston beat Stratford 3-1 last night, but the latter won the round by 8 to 6, and are now senior champions of the O.H.A.

Guelph pros. beat Berlin 4-3 last night, and the Guelph men will tackle the Montreal Wanderers next Wednesday night, on Guelph ice. It should be a good game.

Albert College beat Y.M.C.A. at basket-ball last night. Score 28-25. The match took place at Albert gym.

The Toronto Globe jumps on Belleville in four places to-day, and among other things says that the recent match with Guelph was a frost. This, like many other things that appear in the Globe, is an untruth. The match was good, and the gate more than paid expenses, after paying a heavy guarantee to the visiting team. The sporting editor of the Globe has been sore on Belleville ever since the O.H.A. was found out in a deliberate untruth in regard to Marks, who, after being in February suspended for playing on a semi-professional baseball team, was, the next fall, declared to be perfectly eligible, "as there had been nothing against him but violation of the residence rule." As a matter of fact, the Globe man always played favorites, and can see no good in anything which does not bow the knee to him.

The Globe further says that amateur hockey players in the E.H.L. cannot play with pros. without losing their amateur standing according to the ruling of the C.A.A.U. Does the C.A.A.U. call the Montreal Victorias professionals? If so, then that erratic body has changed its rules very recently. Perhaps, however, it has different rules to fit different cases, like the O.H.A.

As a matter of fact, the O.H.A. and its mouthpiece, the Globe, shuts its eyes to things as they are and tries to imagine it can sweep back the tide with a broom. The Toronto News and other influential papers see what is coming, and take a rational view of things, but the Globe keeps right on saying that black is white. There are none so blind as those who will not see.

To-day's Market

There was an excellent market to-day, and much produce was offered for sale. The only product in which there was important change in price was eggs, which took a decided drop, selling at 18 to 20 cents per dozen. Butter was rather scarce, and 28c and 30c per pound was the ruling price.

Dressed fowls commanded a good price, chickens selling as high as $1.40 per pair.

Our quotations are as follows;

Eggs—18c to 20c per doz.
Butter—28 to 30c lb.
Hay—$9 to $10 ton.
Fall Wheat—70c bus.
Spring Wheat—75c bus.
Barley—48c bus.
Oats—38 to 40c.
Rye—65c bus.
Peas—75c.
Buckwheat—55c.
Timothy—$1.50.
Clover, red—$6 to $7.
Alsike—$4 to $6.
Live hogs—$5.40 to $5.50.
Dressed hogs—$8.50 to $9.00.
Dressed beef, fore—$4 to $4.50.
Dressed beef, hind—$5.50 to $6.
Chickens—$1 to $1.35 pair.
Butchers' trimmed hides—9 to 10c.
Rough hides—9c to 9 1-2c.
Spring Lamb—16c to 18c lb.

Ducks—$1 to $1.75 pair.

They Surely Handed It Up To Michael

Bancroft Times; Michael Gannon, of Maynooth, about the wildest specimen of the genus homo that has struck this village for some time, was in the lockup Tuesday afternoon and night. Mick was howling like a hyena and pulling his hair out in handfuls when Constable Steenburg loaded him into a sleigh, and with the assistance of a bystander landed him in the coop. This happened at noon, and about six o'clock, when the magistrate and constable went to the hall to hear what Gannon had to say for himself they found he had made his escape. He had used a stick of wood to pry the bars of his cell apart and crawled through the opening. However, he was loath to leave town, and about an hour afterwards was in custody again. The magistrate imposed a fine of $10 and costs or 60 days in jail on the charge of being drunk and disorderly, and for using profane language he was assessed $5 and costs or 30 days. He was also given a suspended sentence of one year in the county jail for escaping from custody.

WEIRD AUCTION SALES.

Rummage Sales at Old London Docks Are Intensely Interesting.

Anyone desirous of beholding the closest association of the sublime and the ridiculous, the comic and the melancholy, the queer and the commonplace, should hie him to the London docks rummage sales, which befall, roughly speaking, about every quarter.

Truly, there is nothing like these collections on earth. When the great London dock companies come to clean out their warehouse sheds, about every quarter of a year, they find a vast horde of unconsidered, forgotten unclaimed stuff that some might call trash, and with which nothing can be done but sell to the highest bidder at those funny rummage auctions. So bills are printed and sent throughout the likely quarters—Wapping, Ratcliff, Stepney, Limehouse, Poplar, and Bermondsey—they are eagerly scanned in every detail by the dealers, and on the date appointed the latter are to the fore in force, each with his eye on the particular piece of jetsam for which he has found a customer by much solicitation somewhere up in the junkshop quarter.

Once a coffined corpse, the remains of a man who died at sea or abroad, came to the docks. The consignee was notified to come for the gruesome parcel. He never responded; perhaps because he thought the burial would cost more than he cared to pay. The company anxiously waited, but in the end had to bury the unwelcome corpse at their own expense. As one of the dockmen grimly remarked: "It'd a puzzled the dealers to find a customer for yonder pretty package. 'Twouldn't a fetched much at the sale I guess."

One of the strangest "left-overs" on record at the docks consisted of 600 sacks of Canadian peas, which came over from Montreal some years ago, consigned to a well-known confactor in the city. They were dully warehoused in one of the sheds—and forgotten. A careless clerk in the merchant's office turned over two leaves of his book together, and the peas were lost sight of, the order scored off as non-arrived. One day the merchant was down at the docks looking after some goods when he noticed on the wall the name of a ship. That name started a train of ideas; he remembered the consignment of Canadian peas.

"Why, bless me," he said, "what's this?" and very soon the great pile of sacks was shown to contain none other than the long-lost peas. The merchant had not been notified all those years because the peas had not eaten up their value in dock dues, but the dock rats had eaten up an immense quantity of the peas in the interim. What the rats had left was removed to the merchant's premises.

Among the marvellous assortment of goods can be found gems in the rough from India, plants and vegetables from the fecund valley of the Amazon, with names known only to scientific men, and used for the queerest of purposes, rich dye stuffs from Java, hides and horns of animals that look like freaks of nature, sharks' jaws, elephant tusks from Mandalay, clothing from oilskins to baby linen, umbrellas, Zulu assegais, and stuffed monkeys.

Somebody is always found who wants the stuff, no matter how odd it may be.

RORY M'LENNAN DEAD.

Conspicuous Figure In Canadian Life Succumbs After An Operation.

Cornwall, March 9.—Col. R. R. McLennan (Rory), who represented Glengarry in the Conservative interest in the House of Commons for many years, died yesterday morning. He underwent an operation on Saturday last, but he had been in excellent spirits until a few hours before his death, when he had a talk with an old friend, Major Beattie of London.

The late Col. McLennan was born at Glen Donald, Jan. 1, 1842, and received his education there. He gained distinction as an athlete, particularly as a thrower of weights. Once his hammer killed a boy, and he never again participated in the sport. He became an extensive railway contractor, and subsequently went into business as a private banker. At the time of his death he was honorary president of the Farmers' Bank of Canada, a director of the Manufacturers Life Insurance Co. and the Toronto General Trusts Corporation.

Death of E. Cochrane, M.P.

Ottawa, March 9.—The death occurred yesterday morning at the Protestant Hospital of Edward Cochrane, Conservative member for East Northumberland, in the House of Commons. He was operated on several weeks ago for cancer of the throat, and although he regained strength sufficient to permit him to leave his bed, there was little prospect at any time of a complete recovrey.

Mr. Cochrane has been a member of the House since 1882, with one break of four years, from 1887 to 1891. He was familiarly known by all the members as Uncle Ned. He was a native of Northumberland and was born in 1826. His second wife, who survives him, was Miss Lillie E. O'Dell of Ottawa.

Senator Casgrain Dead.

Windsor, March 9.—Charles E. Casgrain, member of the Dominion Senate, died yesterday at 1.30 p.m., at the Hotel Dieu. Only the immediate members of the family and their relatives were at the bedside.

The Senator's illness extended over a year. He submitted to an operation on Jan. 20, and for a brief period he appeared to be recovering. A relapse followed and he gradually sank. His brother died a week ago in Quebec.

IN SYMPATHY WITH NATURE.

Dame Nature in the winter night
Sits brooding over all.
She sighs, she stirs, and, lo, the white,
Soft snow begins to fall.
A heart attuned to Nature's moods
The poet hath, and so
He, too, wears down the night and broods,
And what he writes is "Snow."

Dame Nature rouses from her sleep.
Her mood has changed again.
She bids the leaden skies to weep,
Diluting snow with rain.
The poet takes the ode on "Snow"
He wrote the night before;
He reads it o'er again, and, lo,
It's slush and nothing more!

Growth of Western Cities.

Apropos of the mushroom growth of new towns on the western frontier a locomotive engineer relates the following:

"One day I was driving my engine across the prairie when suddenly a considerable town loomed up ahead where nothing had showed up the day before.

"'What town's this?' says I to my fireman.

"'Blamed if I know,' says Bill. 'It wasn't here when we went over the road yesterday.'

"Well, I slowed down, and directly we pulled into the station, where over 500 people were waiting on the platform to see the first train come in.

"The conductor came along up front and says to me:

"'Jim, first we know we'll be running by some important place. Get this town down on your list, and I'll put a brakeman on the rear platform to watch out for towns that spring up after the train gets by!'"—Minneapolis Journal.

A Momentous Question.

"What's all that noise in the corridor?"

"That's the family of the accused man trying to decide what the plea in his defense will be. Some of them favor insanity, others temporary aberration, a few prefer justifiable provocation, several insist upon self defense, two clamor for the unwritten law and one wants a composite plea that will include all the other pleas."

"What does the prisoner say?"

"He says he's in the hands of his friends and lets it go at that."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Pimples Off In 5 Days.

THE NEW CALCIUM SULPHIDE TREATMENT DOES WONDERS TO EVERY KIND OF SKIN ERUPTION.

Trial Package Sent Free to Prove It.

You don't want to wait forever and a day to get rid of your pimples or other skin eruptions. You want to get rid of them right now. Next week you may want to go somewhere where you wouldn't like to have to take the pimples along.

You can get rid of them just in time by taking Stuart's Calcium Wafers.

These wonderful little workers have cured bad boils in three days, and some of the worst cases of skin disease in a week.

They contain as their main ingredient, the most thorough, quick and effective blood cleanser known, calcium sulphide.

Remember this, too, that most pimple treatments reek with poison. And they are miserably slow besides.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers have not a particle of poison in them. They are free from mercury, biting drugs or venomous opiates. This is absolutely guaranteed. They cannot do any harm, but they always do good,—good that you can see in the mirror before your own eyes a few days after.

Don't be any longer humiliated by having a splotchy face. Don't have strangers stare at you, or allow your friends to be ashamed of you because of your face.

Your blood makes you what you are. The men and women who forge ahead are those with pure blood and pure faces.

Stuart's Calcium Wafers will make you happy because your face will be a welcome sight not only to yourself when you look into the glass, but to everybody else who knows you and talks with you.

We want to prove to you that Stuart's Calcium Wafers are beyond doubt the best and quickest blood and skin purifier in the world—so we will send you a free sample as soon as we get your name and address. Send for it to-day, and then when you have tried the sample you will not rest contented until you have bought a 50c box at your druggists.

Send us your name and address today and we will at once send you by mail a sample package, free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 95 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

WOMEN WILL NOT VOTE.

The Suffragettes Bill Killed For This Session.

London, March 9.—The debate in the Commons was a repetition of the familiar arguments for and against female suffrage and there was a complete divergence from the usual party lines, the rejection of the bill being moved by Mr. Whitehead, Liberal, another opponent being Mr. Cremer, also a Liberal, while both Conservatives and members of the Labor party were found among its supporters. An attempt was made to closure the decision, but the Speaker declined to accept the motion and the opponents of the bill held the floor until 5 p. m., when the sitting was closed automatically. They thus won the day as this practically kills the bill for the present session.

"Undesirable" Shipped.

London, March 9.—(C. A. P.)—Recently magistrates at Carlisle, Cumberland, discharged a prisoner, suggesting that his friends send him to Canada. Bruce Walker wrote the magistrates protesting against making Canada a dumping ground for such people. The magistrates replied expressing regret at this suggestion and promised the man would not be sent. Yesterday, however, Walker discovered the same man under a different name as a passenger on the Empress of Ireland, and had him stopped. The Salvation Army have taken charge of the man.

YESTERDAY'S WRECKS.

G. T. R. Engine Derailed and C. P. R. Train Also In An Accident.

Toronto, March 9.—Yesterday morning Grand Trunk express No. 4, leaving Toronto at 9 a.m. for Montreal, came to grief while passing Oshawa, through the flange on one of the drive wheels breaking. This derailed the engine and baggage car and damaged the track for some little distance. The coaches and sleepers kept the rails and beyond a severe shock no one was injured. The train was obliged to wait until another engine was sent from York.

A similar misfortune befell the C.P.R. train about the same time, east of Havelock, but the sudden use of the emergency brake prevented the engine being derailed. The accident delayed the Montreal train for Toronto three hours.

DRIVER JUMPED IN TIME.

Grand Trunk Express Strikes Sleigh at Cataraqui.

Kingston, March 9.—Geo. Haffner, a poultry dealer, made a flying plunge from his sleigh in the early grey of yesterday morning and saved his life from collision with a Grand Trunk express. He was returning to the city, and at Cataraqui drove on the crossing, and in a moment found the train upon him. He plunged from his sleigh and fell on the road. The sleigh was shivered to splinters.

Won't Tax Patent Medicine.

Ottawa, March 9.—A large deputation representing the Ontario and Quebec druggists waited on the Minister of Inland Revenue and renewed the protest against the feature of the patent medicine bill that imposes a Government tax on all these preparations.

As a result of their representations, the tax proposal will be eliminated from the bill, and it is very questionable, in view of the advanced stage of the session that has now been reached, if the whole measure may not have a stand over till next session.

Urges Railroad Construction.

Quebec, March 9.—A large and influential deputation, interested in the extension of the Lake St. John Railway from Roberval to Chibogamon and James Bay, waited upon the Government yesterday to urge the importance and necessity of beginning the construction of the proposed extension without further delay.

THAW TRIAL ADJOURNED

Sudden Termination of Evidence For the Defence.

Move Finds Jerome Unprepared to Proceed—Jury Are Warned Not to Read the Newspapers—No More Experts to Be Called—Witnesses to Be Called to Give Rebuttal Testimony.

New York, March 9.—The trial of Harry K. Thaw yesterday was adjourned until Monday morning at 10.30. After Delphin M. Delmas had announced upon the opening of the court that the defence had concluded its testimony, District Attorney Jerome stated that he had no witnesses ready to proceed with in rebuttal, and at his request an adjournment was taken.

This action was unexpected, for Mr. Delmas served notice late yesterday upon the District Attorney that the defence had abandoned its plan of calling two more experts. Mr. Jerome did not consider the notification as official, and so came into court yesterday morning prepared to listen to more testimony as to Thaw's unsound condition of mind.

The Defence Rests.

When Justice Fitzgerald had ascended the bench and Clerk Peny had called the jury roll, Mr. Delmas arose and said:—

"The defence rests."

Mr. Jerome then said he would have to ask for an adjournment of the case until Monday morning.

"When court adjourned last Wednesday evening," he said, "I had no reason to expect that I would not be confronted this morning by experts called upon to answer a hypothetical question which Mr. Delmas was to frame extemporaneously. Thursday evening, Mr. McPike called upon me with a letter from Mr. Delmas, saying the defence had changed its plans, and would call no more witnesses.

"Under the circumstances I must ask for an adjournment, as I have no witnesses available to-day. My experience with hypothetical questions, framed extemporaneously, has been that they require a long time in the asking, and are subject to more or less discussion. I had expected the putting of these questions would require all of to-day session."

Justice Fitzgerald turned to Mr. Delmas, who said:

"There is not the slightest objection on our part."

Adjourned Till Monday.

Justice Fitzgerald then ordered the adjournment until Monday, admonishing the jurors not to discuss the case with anyone, or among themselves, and, above all, not to read the newspapers.

District Attorney Jerome said he was not prepared to add anything further to his statement of last night, that the evidence he will have to offer in rebuttal will be before the jury by Wednesday evening.

He added that the case should go to the jury by Friday next.

Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw was in the witness room yesterday, and when court adjourned she immediately went to the Tombs to visit her husband.

Mrs. Wm. Thaw was reported to be dissatisfied that she was not allowed on Wednesday to testify on the question of hereditary insanity in the Thaw family. She wished to explain the statements made during the trial that members of the Thaw family have been in insane asylums. Mrs. Thaw, it was stated, felt that a great injustice had been done the Thaw family by these statements, hence her desire to publicly deny them.

MONTREAL SCHOOL FIRE.

Jury Places Blame On Lack of Drill and Escapes.

Montreal, March 9.—The following finding was reached yesterday by the coroner's jury in the Hochelaga school fatality:

(1) That the children who lost their lives were asphyxiated as the result of Mr. Hand having left certain doors open, thus having allowed smoke to reach and pass through the halls of the building.

(2) That the fire drill, of which the school had boasted, had been omitted, besides which the Protestant school commissioners should have ordered more frequent practice.

(3) That Miss Maxwell, the teacher who lost her life, waited too long in notifying the children of the upper storeys of their danger.

(4) That the fire apparatus, namely, exterior fire escapes, were missing from the building.

None of the grounds given above constitute a crime. The Protestant school commissioners cannot therefore be held criminally responsible.

We suggest that in each school a marshall or caretaker shall be employed, who shall watch for such exigencies.

A Big Fire In Toronto.

Plate Glass Company's Premises Entirely Destroyed.

Damage Estimated At $185,000—Loss Covered Up To $145,000 By Insurance Divided Among A Score Of Companies—Capt. Crawford Severely Injured By Falling Ladder—Roof of Hospital Caught Fire.

Toronto, March 11.—The most destructive fire in a long time totally wrecked the premises of the Toronto Plate Glass Importing Co., 135 to 143 Victoria street, early Saturday afternoon. The building was of four storeys, going back 117 feet to a lane. The loss is estimated at $185,000, with insurance of $145,000.

Falling walls and flying glass were a menace to the firemen and several were more or less hurt. Capt. Wm. Crawford of Hose 4, Berkeley street, had his collar-bone broken. He was struck by a ladder, which was thrown over by the collapse of a wall.

Delay in sending in an alarm doomed the building before the firemen arrived. It is stated that when a boy, an employe of the building, ran to the corner of Queen and Yonge streets to send in an alarm a policemen refused to credit that there was a fire, and would not let him pull the box. One man says he stood in the lane in rear of the building for over 10 minutes watching the fire spread. He took it for granted that somebody else was calling the fire department.

Was Full of Fire.

Anyway, when the firemen did arrive on a telephone alarm about 2.15, the building was full of fire and when 5 minutes later the alarm box at St. Michael's Hospital, across the lane to the rear, was struck. Deputy Chief Noble says that the flames were distinctly visible from Queen and Portland streets, a mile and a half away, the flames having gotten through the roof.

Thousands of people out for Saturday afternoon amusement were attracted by the pall of smoke and the billows of flame and seemed to enjoy the two hours of excitement that was furnished. The conflagration was one of the most spectacular for the general public in a long while, for the pyrotechnics were within plain view while the full fighting force of the fire department labored heroically with extension ladders, aerial trucks and throbbing engines. The tumbling walls added the necessary evident spice o danger to satisfy the most fastidiou taste.

Hospital In Danger.

Tenants in nearby buildings had vacate, and St. Michael's Hosp il and the new six-storey building at Queen and Victoria streets were or a time in danger. Once the hosp al roof ignited, but the blaze as promptly quenched.

The loss as estimated by S. J. therford, manager of the compan is $185,000, divided $40,000 on bu ing, $20,000 on plant and $125,000 of tock. There is an insurance of $145,0 scattered among a score of the ading companies.

The following officers and men of the fire brigade were also h during the fire: Capt. W. J. Smith ruck 1, hand badly cut, and Lieut eans of truck 2, back and arm inj . Firemen Armstrong, Spence Waterman received minor inju

Ottawa, March 11.— e financial returns of the Domini or the eight months ending with uary shows a revenue of $57,986 an increase of over eight million lars, as compared with the sa time in the previous year. The penditure was $37,620,000, an inc of about a half million dolla o. that there was a betterment he finances of over seven and alf millions. In the capital expe re there was an increase of one a quarter million. This leav total increase in revenue of five lions. The figures for the month ebruary show an increase in th enue of nearly two millions and crease in the expenditure of one million.

NOT EDUCE NAVY.

First Lord e Admiralty Denies Peac ference Rumors.

London h 11.—The Lord of the Admiralt ron Tweedmouth, in a speech xford Saturday night, referred e fact that the Government eiving considerable obliquy ntruthful statements regardin ction in the matter of the Hague conference.

The rnment, he said, did not inten eaken its naval power, believ British navy must be kept suff for its purposes, whatever the ould go to The Hague," he ly desirous of reduction, and, sa her powers do not meet us, if st take the responsibility."

Alleged Curious Fraud.

ston, March 11.—An angry hus living apart from his wife, has ened law against parties for in attempting to palm another woman's baby upon him as his own. It is said that a married woman connived with a young woman from the country to assume her child at birth. The two entered the maternity ward of the hospital on the same day, but a nurse soon found out the deception of the married woman and exposed the fraud. The husband, when he went to the hospital, was told by his wife that the baby was dead and taken away. Later he learned the real facts, and there is trouble.

Iroquois Fire Case Dropped.

Danville, Ill., March 11.—Judge Kimbrough has decided that the Chicago ordinance, on which was based the trial of Manager William J. Davis, charged with manslaughter, in the Iroquois Theatre fire case, is invalid, thus putting an end to the trial.

TO PROTECT PERSIA.

Great Britain and Russia Make a Deal to Settle Differences.

London, March 11.—The internal affairs of Persia, which, according to official information, are far from satisfactory, are being closely watched by the officials of the Foreign Office.

Great Britain and Russia have already agreed on the steps to be taken by them. Great Britain anticipates that, should the condition of the country reach a critical stage, the Shah who frequently called on Russia before he ascended the throne for financial assistance and sought the advice of the representatives of that country in other emergencies, will ask for Russia's help to restore order.

The Russian Government could comply with the request with the full knowledge that no objection would be made by Great Britain. Russia may even offer assistance without the invitation of the Shah, an offer which Great Britain would advise the Persian ruler to accept.

Great Britain would do her part by sending war ships to the Persian Gulf ports, but she would not go further unless the landing of a force became necessary to protect foreigners in Southern Persia, which by agreement would be recognized as Great Britain's sphere of influence.

This condition is a result of negotiations that have been going on twelve months for the settlement of all outstanding differences between the two powers, which continue to progress satisfactorily, and which shortly may be brought to a successful close.

This better understanding between Russia and Great Britain has made smoother the negotiations between Russia and Japan.

PROPHET DOWIE DEAD.

Founder of Zion City Passes Away Unexpectedly In Delirium.

Chicago, March 11.—John Alexander Dowie died at 7.40 Saturday morning at Shiloh House, Zion City. There were present with him when he died only Judge D. N. Barnes and two personal attendants. It had been Dowie's custom to hold religious services every Sunday afternoon in the parlor of Shiloh House. About 350 of his original followers attended these services. Dowie always wore his apostolic robes and made a characteristic address. Seven weeks ago these meetings ceased and Dowie appeared no longer in public. The Sunday meetings, however, were still held by his adherents.

Since that time Dowie has gardually been failing. Friday afternoon, however, there was no indication of approaching death. He receives a few followers, and prayed for some people.

His Last Words.

His condition seemed to be about the same as for the last two or three weeks. One of the attendants remained with him until midnight and was relieved by the other attendant.

Shortly before one o'clock Saturday morning Dowie became delirious and his talk was the same as at a religious meeting in the days of his prime. He denounced with the old-time vigor, ordered the guards to throw out disturbers, and acted just as he had on many previous occasions. He gradually became weaker and weaker, and the attendant telephoned for Judge Barnes, who reached Shiloh House at 7 a. m. Forty minutes later Dowie died.

Bomb Throwers Get $7,500.

Kutais, Transcaucasus, March 11.—Three bombs were thrown at the treasurer of the local revenue, two policemen and several local officers, while they were driving through the streets with $7,500 on Friday.

This attack was followed by a volley of revolver shots. The policemen, the driver of the carriage and one of the officials were killed, and the treasurer and four other officials wounded.

The robbers seized the money and escaped.

The Galt School Board has decided to engage an extra teacher whose duty it shall be to give individual instruction to backward pupils. The plan is to have a small room at present available, to which all pupils needing special instruction may be sent at stated hours. The duty of the extra teacher will be to take up with the pupils so sent the various subjects in which they are deficient. The idea is one that might be adopted elsewhere. Backward pupils have a tendency to retard the progress of other pupils in their classes.

Many friends in this city and county received with regret news of the death of Mr. Edward Cochrane, M. P. for East Northumberland, which took place in Ottawa recently. Mr. Cochrane passed away from stomach trouble. He was a strong Conservative, a fair fighter, and possessed a saving sense of humor. He represented East Northumberland in the Commons continuously for a quarter of a century, with the exception of one parliamentary term. Mr. Cochrane was a gentleman who was highly esteemed and enjoyed the confidence of his constituents to a marked degree. He was genial in manner, earnest in purpose and faithful in the discharge of duty. He was one of the most familiar figures on the Conservative side, and in his passing away one of the old guard is removed from the public life of Canada.

Under the caption, "The Curse of Sport," the Toronto Telegram strikes a true chord when it points out that Canadian spectators, as a rule, demand that the home team shall win, no matter what methods are used. The Telegram does not claim, like the hypocritical Globe, that amateurism is the cure for the evil, but puts the blame where it justly belongs—on the public in these terse and striking words:

"Human hearts and heads were never built to resist the strain of rough-and-tumble football and hockey.

"It is not a question of professionalism or amateurism. Amateur football is at least as full of tragedies as any variety of hockey.

"A determination to win at all costs must sooner or later ruin games that should be Canada's glory. The player who will not endanger his own life to score a goal is of little value to his team. The player who will not endanger an opponent's life rather than see that opponent score a goal, is a mere cumberer of the ground.

"Local patriotism deplores rough play that impairs the chances of the home team. Local patriotism excuses any sort of play that improves the chances of the home team Sport, falsely so called, is becoming so excessively important that "it's all in the game" for a player to lose the sight of an eye or even his life. Public sentiment pretends to deplore, but really demands, this rough work. Murderous recklessness in sport is a real and growing evil. The cure for that evil is not yet in sight."

The suggestion is being made that all the schoolchildren in Canada should contribute to a penny subscription towards a memorial in honor of Miss Maxwell, the Hochelaga teacher who sacrificed her life in endeavoring to save the little ones placed in her charge. The idea is a good one. The Ottawa Citizen thinks the act was one to make all Canadians proud of their womenkind and the recognition of it should not be confined to one locality but should be national in its character.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

SPORTING NOTES.

They say the carnival on Wednesday night will be productive of even better costumes than the first one. It will have to go some to beat the first!

Wanderers are on their way west after the Stanley Cup. And they'll probably get it.

The famous Wanderers of Montreal who are on their way west to play Kenora for the Stanley Cup, will meet the Toronto professional team to-night at the Mutual St. rink.

Charles Towns, a younger brother of George Towns, the sculling champion of the world, has challenged George for the title. It is anticipated that George Towns will retire from competition within three months, and that the championship will pass to the younger man.

The attendance at the eight games in the third round of the English Association Cup totalled 219,000, and the gates $40,000, an average of 27,000 spectators and $5,000 per match. The record for the round was 51,000 at the Everton-Bolton Wanderers' game.

In the international Rugby series Wales beat Ireland 32 to 0 at Cardiff on Saturday. Scotland will play England next Saturday. Scotland and Wales have each won two internationals and Ireland one.

Results on Saturday night: Quebec 17, Shamrocks 5; Montreal 8, Ottawa 6; Varsity 25, All-Toronto 6.

Berlin and Collingwood play the second game of the intermediate O. H. A. finals at Collingwood to-night, and Lindsay and Stratford do likewise at Lindsay in the junior series. Berlin won the first game from Collingwood by 9 to 3, and Stratford defeated Lindsay in their initial contest by 10 to 5.

Eye Strain CAUSES Eye Diseases

Eye STRAIN is the cause of most eye diseases. It produces irritation and congestion and a consequent weakness of all the nerves and muscles of the eye. In this way Glaucoma, Optic Nerve Paralysis, Granular Lids, Ulcers, Cataract, etc., are induced. These diseases are not only painful, but if neglected, result in blindness.

The best time to treat eye diseases is in the "eye STRAIN stage," and the most capable and experienced is the man to consult.

If your eyes, or head, or nerves trouble you you may rely upon our Optician for useful and competent advice, whether or not glasses are the medium of relief.

Daily Intelligencer.

The Three-Fifths Clause.

The three-fifths clause in the local option measure is not opposed by all the prohibition advocates.

The late Principal Caven, an eminent member of the Presbyterian Church, once gave his opinion thus: "It is essential that legislation of "the character in question should be "sustained by such strength of public opinion as to render its enforcement both possible and morally "salutary. I should greatly doubt "the wisdom of making less than "three-fifths of the votes polled necessary to the adoption of the "measure."

The Rev. Dr. Potts, a Methodist of distinction, has given his view in these terms: "I would regard prohibitory legislation on a bare majority vote as demoralizing to the "temperance cause of Ontario. In "the event of a referendum the "highest interests of temperance "would, in my judgment, be best "served by requiring from 60 to 70 "per cent. of the votes polled as a "condition of such legislation being "made law."

The Rev. Dr. Warden and Rev. Dr. Burwash have spoken in somewhat similar terms. If these prominent Presbyterians and Methodists could conscientiously maintain that something more than a majority of the votes cast at a plebiscite on prohibition is necessary in order to get an expression of public opinion upon which action can be safely taken, it is surely unfair to describe the acceptance of this view by Mr. Whitney as "an un-British act," or as "a movement in the interests of the bar."

The fact is, it is only the political temperance men who are objecting. This they would do no matter what proposition was made.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

J. D. Rockefeller has presented the Y. M. C. A. of San Francisco with $250,000 toward the new building to cost $500,000, the cost of the one destroyed by earthquake.

There was a splendid attendance of Juniors on Saturday. They decided to open a Drawing contest. The contest is open to all boys of the city. The subject of the contest this week is to be a black cat. The subject may be drawn in whatever attitude as best suits the fancy of the boy. Drawings must be at least 12 inches high. The cats should mew around the Y.M.C.A. not later than Saturday.

Rev. V. H. Cowsert, of Toronto, addressed a large number of men at the Y.M.C.A. yesterday. He gave a splendid talk on elements of success.

Rev. R. S. Laidlaw takes the next two Sundays and deals with "Flaws in Friendship."

The directors meet Tuesday at 7 o'clock.

Presented With Gold-Headed Umbrella.

Mr. A. E. Birchard, who has been connected with the Ritchie Company for some time, has left the city for Toronto, where he has secured a lucrative position. Before leaving Mr. Birchard was presented with a beautiful gold-headed umbrella by the employees of the Ritchie Company.

Tetter, Salt Rheum and Eczema.

These are diseases for which Chamberlain's Salve is especially valuable. It quickly allays the itching and smarting and soon effects a cure. Price, 25 cents. For sale by all Druggists.

The White Plague.

Regarding the prevention and cure of tuberculosis, which is occupying the attention of the public so largely just now, Mrs. T. C. Duncan, a former resident of Belleville, while living in Ottawa, where this movement originated, became convinced of the great need of enlightenment among the poorer classes, and with this end in view has been lecturing to the women of London, urging proper sanitary methods in the home and the great danger of neglect among children. Mrs. Duncan is now at work securing subscriptions for the erection of a tubercular hospital and with a deputation from the County Council, the clergy, the physicians and the nurses, waited on the City Council a few weeks ago. The tubercular hospital for London and County of Middlesex seems now assured.

Cause of Stomach Troubles

When a man has trouble with his stomach you may know that he is eating more than he should or of some article of food or drink not suited to his age or occupation, or that his bowels are habitually constipated. Take Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets to regulate the bowels and improve the digestion and see if the trouble does not disappear. Ask for a free sample. Sold by all Druggists.

AN OPEN LETTER.

TO THE PEOPLE OF BELLEVILLE FROM J. S. McKEOWN, OUR WELL KNOWN DRUGGIST.

To whom it may concern:

Of late there has been a good deal of discussion in Belleville in regard to advertised medicines and their value—the papers are full of them.

We want to say to every man, woman and child in Belleville that we believe the most valuable preparation of cod liver oil—the best tonic reconstructor, health restorer and strength creator—we have ever sold in our store is Vinol.

Vinol is not a patent medicine, it contains no injurious drugs, and it actually does contain all of the medicinal curative elements taken from fresh cods' livers, but without a drop of oil to upset the stomach and retard its work, and, moreover, it is delicious to the taste.

Vinol acts first upon the stomach, tones up the digestive organs, creates an appetite, purifies and enriches the blood and strengthens every organ in the body to do its work as nature intended.

Vinol is recognized throughout the world as the greatest strength creater for old people, weak, sickly women and children, nursing mothers and after a severe sickness.

Vinol cures hacking coughs, chronic colds, bronchitis and all throat and lung troubles. Unequalled to create an appetite and to make those who are too thin fat, rosy and healthy.

Vinol is sold everywhere on a positive guarantee that, if it does not give satisfaction, the entire purchase money will be refunded. J. S. McKeown, druggist.

Thinks Bond Verbose.

London, March 11.—(C. A. P.)—Sir Robert Bond has sent the Birmingham Post a verbatim report of his speech protesting against the fisheries agreement with the United States. The Post says it is a verbose, contentious production, and does not think the circulation of the protest in this country will result in the enlistment of English opinion in his favor.

Mrs. Girnett, a member of Charlton Board of Guardians, in protesting against the proposal to send several children to Canada, characterized Canadian farmers as no better than slave drivers. A. Skivington declared the consent of children a mere farce, as they were misled by unreliable pictures of the country and its possibilities, drawn up by paid agents of a Canadian railway. The Board decided to send the children. The Guardian regrets the strong protest did not meet with the success it merited.

Raisuli Escapes Again.

Tangier, March 11.—The news that Raisuli has escaped again is confirmed. Kaid Mehalla, the representative of the Minister of War, dislodged the Beniarus tribesmen, burned seven villages, killed twenty of the tribesmen and took a number of prisoners, but Raisuli got away.

BLACK FOX KILLED

MESSRS. B. WAILEY AND FRED YOUNG, OF LINDSAY, THE LUCKY HUNTERS.

A black fox, one of the most valuable of the species, was recently killed in Byron's swamp near Cambray station. For two days Messrs. B. B. Wailey and Fred Young had been on the animal's trail. It was finally shot with the aid of hounds belonging to Mr. George Wellington, of town. Mr. Wellington claimed the fox on the ground that it was through the exertions of his dogs that the animal was captured. The matter was finally settled by a division of the purchase price.

The fur of the black fox is in great demand, and a good skin is valued at $150.—Lindsay Post.

Death of Chas. Pretty.

New Westminster Weekly News: Charles Pretty died at his residence, Eighth avenue, February 20, aged 78 years. Mr. Pretty was born at Winfield College, Suffolk, England, May 1st, 1829. In 1850, in company with his cousin, the late Senator Read, of Belleville, Ont., they came to Canada. In 1852, he was married to Ann, the daughter of Joseph Heuyck and granddaughter of Col. Bell, after whom Belleville was named. In 1875, he moved to Goderich, Ont., where he resided until 1891, when he came to New Westminster. He had nine children, two of whom are dead. The others are C. F. Pretty, of Harrison River; B. W. Pretty, of Rossland; F. R. Pretty, of Penticton; Arthur Pretty, of Lakelse hatchery, Skeena; and three daughters, Mrs. J. W. Mallory, Vancouver; Mrs. M. W. Minthorne, of this city, and Miss Pretty, of Vancouver. His widow, aged 76, still survives him. He was a member of the Church of England, and in politics a Conservative.

The Green of English Lawns.

The human soul is so made that green is one of its most delectable aesthetic experiences. The color is not exciting, like red, nor stimulating, like yellow, nor exalting and inspiring, like blue; it is simply soothing, satisfying, reviving, delicious. It is the human color. If there be planets on whose surface green is a color as rare as is blue on ours, our race would speedily languish and die out there. But I speak, of course, of the perfect green, the green of English lawns. Other greens there are, cold or trivial or muddy or crude, which do but irritate or depress us, and there are blue greens and gray greens, well enough in their places, and in the caves of icebergs spiritual greens that exercise a weird enchantment. But for the garment of the mighty, round earth no other green is more worthy than this of England; none other touches so inwardly the heart of man. No wonder that Falstaff on his deathbed babbled of green fields. For my dying eyes I could desire no happier vision than the gracious levels of an English lawn steeped in the gentle sunshine of a summer afternoon.—Julian Hawthorne in Atlantic.

"The Conduct of Life."

Under this head Ralph Waldo Emerson wrote: "'Tis an estimable hint I owe to a few persons of fine manners that they make behavior the very first sign of force—behavior, not performance or talent, or, much less, wealth. While almost anybody has a supplicating eye turned on events and things and other persons, a few natures are central and forever unfold, and these alone charm us. He whose word or deed you cannot predict, who answers you without any supplication in his eye, who draws his determination from within, that man rules."

HUMOR

COMMON SENSE VIEW.

Why Viola Decided to Marry Young Harry Wilkins.

"Father, I would like to see you in the library on a matter of business."

"Very well, Viola; come along. Now, then, what is it?"

"Father, you are aware that Harry Wilkins has been paying me his attentions the last year?"

"Yes, and I've felt like kicking him! The idea of a Wilkins daring to aspire to the hand of a Grafton!"

"He has asked me to be his wife."

"The scoundrel! Why, I'll"—

"And I've almost promised," she placidly continued.

"What, what! My daughter marry a Wilkins on $25 a week? Never! Go to your room while I seek out this base adven"—

"Father, I want to talk real business to you," she interrupted. "Have you seen the marriage statistics of London for the last year?"

"No, of course not! The idea of Harry Wilkins skulking around after my"—

"Wait! According to the statistics, this city has 871,240 more females than males. There are 226,890 more marriageable girls than can find husbands, to say nothing of 182,321 widows who are very anxious for a No. 2. The number of young men in London earning over $15 a week and in the market is only 22,107. There are after these young men exactly 220,000 young women and 150,000 widows. Three out of every five children born are girls. Death removes two young men to one married man or old bachelor."

The old man turned pale and grasped a chair for support. After a pause she continued:

"From June to October over 80,000 marriageable young women visit fashionable watering places, and it is estimated that 31,442 of them catch husbands, thus further reducing the chances of a resident cockney. Father, take this pencil and figure out your Viola's chances of catching another man if she lets Harry Wilkins canter away."

"Great Jimminy!" he gasped, figuring for a moment. "Why, your chances are only one in 21,875,947!"

"Just as I figure it out. What shall I say to him this evening?"

"Say! Say! Why, tell him you'll have him and be mighty glad of the chance! And don't let him draw a long breath before you add that the ceremony can take place right after breakfast tomorrow morning and that I'm to give you a wedding present of $500 in cash!"—Tit-Bits.

Two Muffs In One.

She sat between her two lovers in the trap. George was driving, and Edward was pressed closely against the rail. The night was dark, but the horse was old and knew his way. This gave George an opportunity to hold the reins in one hand and also to slip the other into the lady's unoccupied muff. Presently—well, two hands were tenderly pressing each other.

The end of the drive came at last, and a sweet, small voice whispered:

"When you two gentlemen have quite done with my muff perhaps you will be kind enough to let me have it."

Then did two sworn enemies alight from the trap with thoughts that could scarcely be expressed coherently in presentable language.—Judge.

The Elm Incident.

Washington was taking formal command of the Continental army at Cambridge. He crooked his arm, placed his elbow against the historic elm and rested his head on his hand. Then he addressed the ill assorted gathering of patriots. In the midst of his remarks his elbow suddenly glided from the tree and Washington completely lost his equilibrium.

"Why didn't you inform me," said the great general, with dignity, "that this tree was a slippery elm?"—Woman's Home Companion.

SELECTIONS

THE HUMAN BODY.

It Is a Mass of Tiny Soapy Globules Called "Myelins."

Man is made of soap and not of dust, according to a statement recently delivered before the Harvey society at the Academy of Medicine in New York city by Professor J. G. Adami.

Man is not entirely made of soap, of course, but there are scattered through his body an unknown number of tiny globules called "myelins," which are now believed to be a primitive form of true soap. It is the only pure type of soap on earth, and scientists say it may be that man was originally constructed on a self cleansing principle. All he had to do was to exercise his will power—think hard—and set his myriads of soap globules in motion.

The soapy nature of human beings has been discovered by means of the polarizing microscope. Professor Adami gave a history of the curious researches which led up to the great "find." Fifty years ago Virchow stumbled on the presence of myelin globules in nearly every tissue of the body. They were plentiful in the brain. They dissolved in hot alcohol. Strong alkalis caused them to shrink. Virchow thought the myelins were albumens.

It was not until 1898 it was discovered they possessed peculiar refractive power. Finally Professor Loblein of Carlsruhe made an elaborate study of the globules and showed under the polarizing microscope they had queer cross markings and were in reality "liquid crystals," showing precisely the same markings as soap globules. This was considered sufficient to demonstrate their identity with soap.

The myelins, or soap globules, seem to contain a remarkable substance intermediate between fluids and crystals.—New York World.

The Three Peanut States.

Virginia, Tennessee and Georgia are the leading peanut states. In Virginia the white peanut and the small red peanut are the varieties chiefly produced, while Georgia also largely produces this small red nut. In Tennessee the white nut, which is larger than the red, and the larger variety of the red nut are raised. The chief peanut counties are Humphreys, Perry, Hickman and Dickson, but the area of peanut cultivation has been enlarged in more recent years. Few peanuts are produced in east or west Tennessee, but in the counties named they are the chief money crop of a large per cent of the farmers. The peanut has many names—goober, pindar, earth nut, ground nut, ground pea. Northern soldiers called them goobers, and there was a well known song entitled "Grabbing Goober Peas," which was a favorite with troops "marching through Georgia."—Nashville American.

Windows of Celluloid.

One of the many uses to which celluloid is put is in supplying window lights for the curtains of automobile tops. Celluloid is made in sheets of extreme thinness down to a thickness of only five-one thousandths of an inch, and such sheets of celluloid can be rolled up as readily and closely as sheets of paper. From sheets of transparent celluloid pieces are cut of the sizes required for the windows, and when these have been set in place they can be rolled up with the curtain, like any other part of it. While the window of celluloid can thus be readily rolled up it is liable to be dented or crumpled, as a roll of paper would be if crushed, and so celluloid is not a perfect material for this use, but it appears to be the best that has yet been found.

Lord Rothschild and Jay Gould.

Lord Rothschild, who is taking a prominent part in the commission which is considering as to the best territory for Jewish colonization, is the wealthiest member of the wealthiest and most famous banking house in the world. His monetary and social influence suggests the monarch rather than the financier. There is a story that Jay Gould once called upon him on business. Lord Rothschild sent out word that he was too busy to see the caller. Mr. Gould, not accustomed to being denied audience by any one, sent back rather a tart repetition of his request. After an interval the attendant returned with this reply from Lord Rothschild: "Tell Mr. Gould that Europe is not for sale."

New Diamond Field.

At Christiana, a little town in the Transvaal about seventy miles above Kimberley, an alluvial deposit has been discovered bearing diamonds, and the entire area has been staked out in claims, which are granted by the government, each fifty yards square. The "digging" for diamonds, which are found in the surface deposits, is somewhat similar to placer gold mining. There some 3,000 diamond miners, representing every nationality, are living in huts and tents with their families.

Horses Cry For It.

Thirty horses per hour is the average work per currying machine done in many stables. Furthermore, the animals thoroughly enjoy the massage, for this is virtually what the operation is, and when released from their stalls will often run over to the machine of their own accord. The look of perfect peace and contentment depicted on the face of the animal is an excellent testimonial in behalf of the grooming machine.—Scientific American.

THE FRONT DOOR.

How to Dress It Artistically When It Has a Glass Panel.

Perhaps no greater change has been made in any feature of house building than in the entrance or front door. Instead of the solid oaken door or a near imitation to it the modern front door is a solid panel of plate glass in a narrow frame of wood, which is necessary for hinges and locks. This glass door opens into a small vestibule, and the inner or secondary door has also a glass panel forming the upper half. This panel gives opportunity for taste to show itself in various lace and silk arrangements.

A panel of lace net ornamented with a medallion is almost invariably used, and one may pay anywhere from 50 cents for a coarse woven pattern in the center to $5 or $10 for a handmade lace medallion. The net panel is laid flat on the glass on the inner side of a rod at top and bottom. Sometimes after the panel is fastened two breadths of soft thin silk are shirred over rods to completely cover the back side of the lace. These breadths are then drawn partially to each side and tied with narrow ribbon, leaving the lace exposed in diamond form. The color shows through pleasantly in the daytime, and artificial light brings out a good effect at night.

While in the city one cannot leave the house door open or even unlocked, so much glass at the entrance partially takes away the imprisoned feeling that sometimes oppresses one who must almost literally unbolt and unbar every time she goes out or in.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

SWEDISH FRUIT SOUP.

It Is an Appetizing and Nourishing Dish For Invalids.

I was in a Swedish hospital with fever that might prove typhoid. "Keep her on a milk diet," said the doctor to the nurse.

I loathed milk, yet the next day, "Keep her on a milk diet," said the learned man. I besought the nurse for baked potatoes, and she firmly repeated the doctor's words, "Keep her on a milk diet."

But one day that blessed nurse from Sweden brought me a bowl of fruit soup.

The Mohammedan paradise holds no joy equal to the taste of it. I cajoled that Swede woman into giving me the recipe.

Fruit Soup.—Stew together a handful each of dried apples, pears, cherries, raisins, prunes and currants. When done add water to make a gallon, sweeten to taste and add two tablespoonfuls of vinegar. Thicken with potato flour or with oatmeal.

Potato flour, to be used for thickening and for puddings, is made as follows: Grate potatoes, soak in cold water, strain out all the potatoes first with a coarse sieve, then with a fine one, leaving the potato starch in the water. Rinse this in water after water, pouring off each one as long as there is any color in the water. Finally, having poured off the last water, let the starch cake and take out and dry on cloths.—Kansas City Star.

CULINARY CONCEITS.

Pumpkins are much better when steamed than when boiled.

Potato salad is much more savory if mixed with the salad dressing while hot and before serving.

Breadcrumbs should always be used for covering articles for frying, as cracker crumbs absorb the grease.

When making mustard add a tiny drop of salad oil to it while it is being mixed. It will greatly improve the flavor.

Carrots should be cut in slices instead of cubes, because the outside darker part is richer and better, and if cut in slices it is more equally distributed.

It's an excellent idea to pass grated American or Parmesan cheese with tomato sauce which is to be used on rice or macaroni or with such dishes cooked with tomatoes. Not every one likes the cheese mixture, but many do. By serving the cheese separately all are suited.

Helping the Face.

When using the complexion brush, when drying the face with a towel, when applying the cosmetic, all the general movements must be upward and outward. These upward motions give life and vivacity to the face, while downward ones bring doleful droops and appearances of despondency. It is a good thing to learn to keep the face brightened and cheerful, for this habit will keep lines from forming. The complexion brush used every night with warm water and a pure soap will remove the blackheads and by stimulating the circulation and putting the tissue in healthy condition will gradually refine the texture and cause the enlarged pores to shrink to smaller proportions. After using the brush a good skin food must be rubbed in.

Starch Spoils Lace.

One common fault with lace curtains which are done up at home is that they are too stiff for their texture. Lace should never be stiff. It is contrary to its essential delicacy, and starch is only permissible when it is quite subservient to the softness and grace of the fabric. Only lace of a coarse mesh can stand much stiffening, and a little starch in the rinsing water is usually as much as can possibly be needed by the average net curtain. Gum arabic may be used instead of starch, and some advise gelatin for very choice lace. If an old appearance is desired, the liquid may be tinted with saffron, which is better than coffee, because it has no odor and will not attract flies, as the latter is apt to do.

TIMELY TOPICS.

THE THAW TRAGEDY.

(W. J. Lampton.)

What is the lesson to our young men and misses
Taught by a story so shocking as this is?
All over this broad land of ours
Young men and women yearn
They come by thousands to the goal,
And to the city turn,
Where they may share
The fortunes there
That wait for them to earn.
The narrow ways of country folk
They constantly condemn,
And not a rural avenue
Is wide enough for them,
And not a rural avenue
Is wide enough for them.'
The broader scope
Is where they hope
To win their diadem
To quit the simple country life
Of their unwise desires;
They revel in the city's glare
And blister in its fires;
They struggle on
Till all is gone
And hope at last expires,
Not all
May fall:
The stronger few may stand,
But at what cost!
Their gain at last is nothing to
The good that they have lost
Now listen, young men and young women,
And make this a star in your crown;
IT IS BETTER TO RUST IN THE COUNTRY
THAN IT IS TO ROT IN THE TOWN
That is the lesson to our young men and misses
Taught by a story so shocking as this is,

It is to be hoped that when we come to Old Age Pensions the fair sex (they are always fair even when qualifying for Old Age) will not be forgotten. If pensions are ever provided by the state there will be but one proper qualification, and that is that the pensioner shall have done his or her duty in that station of life in which it has pleased God to call him or her. Many women who earn no salaries and would be utterly unable to declare just how many days they had worked in their lives (for the excellent reason that a woman's work is never done) will then present a better right to State maintenance than some men who have drawn fat salaries.

A pretty story about the Queen is told in Paris. While Her Majesty was lunching with some personal friends she happened to congratulate her hostess on the excellence of the cooking, and was told that the cook was a Danish woman. "I should so like to see her," said the Queen, and word was sent down to the kitchen to summon the cook to the drawing-room. The woman entered, greatly agitated, in her cap and apron. The Queen at once began a long conversation with her in Danish. "I hear you are a fellow-countrywoman," she said, "and I want to congratulate you on the excellence of your cooking." Her Majesty then asked the woman a number of questions, conversing with her for about a quarter of an hour. At the end of the conversation the Queen shook hands with the cook, who was so overcome that she burst into tears.

MR. E. G. STEVENSON CHOSEN.

Elected to Succeed Late Dr. Oronhyatekha As Supreme Chief Ranger.

Toronto, March 11.—On Saturday the Supreme Executive of the Independent Order of Foresters met in the Temple Building to appoint a successor to the late Dr. Oronhyatekha, Supreme Chief Ranger, and Mr. E. G. Stevenson, Supreme Counsellor was unanimously elected.

Mr. Stevenson's promotion in the order leaves one vacancy, and may cause still another. Should Mr. J. D. Clark of Dayton, Ohio, Supreme Vice-Chief Ranger, succeed Mr. Stevenson as Supreme Counsellor, Mr. Clark's position would be vacant.

Mr. Stevenson's salary is to be settled later. The late Dr. Oronhyatekha's stipend was $15,000. Mr. Stevenson's income last year, private and I. O. F., was $30,000, it is said.

Memorial resolutions were passed to-day.

Elliott G. Stevenson was born in Middlesex County, Ontario. The family moved to Port Huron when he was 16, and he studied law with O'Brien and Atkinson of that city. For two terms he was prosecuting attorney in St. Clair County, and was the first Democrat in 25 years to fill a St. Clair office. He was Mayor of Port Huron in 1865, declined nomination to Congress, and in 1887 went to Detroit, becoming a member of the law firm of Dickinson, Thurber, and Stevenson. Mr. Dickinson was Postmaster-General during the Cleveland Administration, and Mr. Thurber became Secretary to President Cleveland. Mr. Stevenson was asked to accept the Vice-Presidential candidature, but declined.

Mr. Stevenson has a residence at Amherstburg, Ontario, as well as in Detroit, and has resided in Canada fully six months in the year for some time past.

Secretary and Manager of New York Company Commits Suicide.

New York, March 11.—Business associates of Leonidas M. Preston, secretary and manager of the Timken Roller Co., undertook yesterday a thorough investigation of the tangled affairs of Mr. Preston, who died suddenly in his apartments in the Hotel Cumberland, by drinking prussic acid, just as his partners were about to call on him for an explanation of the company's business.

Mr. Preston came to New York from Dallas, Texas, several years ago and was reputed to own considerable property near Dallas and to be heir to an estate in New Orleans reported to be valued at $3,000,000. Investigation so far has not located any of this property. A brother in Texas says he never heard of its existence. Preston received $12,500 a year as secretary and manager of the company. It is feared he has had losses and involved the Roller Company in them.

Poisoned Himself.

Last Thursday afternoon three members of the company, William H. Timken, E. R. Gwitt and Leonard Gray called at the hotel. Preston sent for them to come to his room and then excused himself to his wife and her woman friend who were present, went to the bath room, and on returning expired suddenly before his associates arrived. It was at first stated that he died of natural causes, but an autopsy was insisted upon by his partners, and showed the presence of the acid. An examination of his accounts is now being made.

Electric Lights In Paris Go Out Owing to Strike.

Paris, March 11.—Without a word of warning, the employes of the electric light and power companies went on strike Friday afternoon at five o'clock. The few lights that were burning were extinguished, and electric elevators ceased running. General confusion set in where electricity is employed as the sole means of lighting. Tradesmen closed their places of business, and the proprietors of cafes made hurried searches for lamps. Hundreds of candles were thrust into empty bottles for lighting purposes. The evening papers failed to appear. One that is issued at 7 o'clock managed to get out an edition at 10.

Strike Ends.

Paris, March 11.—The strike of the electricians of Paris, which threw the city into obscurity for the best part of two nights, has come to an end as abruptly as it began. The electrical companies have conceded the principal demands of the workmen in the matter of pensions, hours and wages.

Vesuvian Astronomer Matteucci Fears Comet Will Ignite Atmosphere.

London, March 11.—The approach of a new comet which will imperil the world has been announced by Prof. Lorenzo Matteucci, of the Royal Observatory on Mount Vesuvius, who with his more famous brother has recorded for years the eruptions of that volcano. He and his brother are both agreed that if the actual nucleus on the comet is merely crossed by the earth the danger will be brief, though necessarily acute. But if the earth collides with the tail of the comet our atmosphere will probably be ignited, and every trace of life will be immediately and violently destroyed.

U. S. to Get Nelson Relic.

Annapolis, Md., March. 11.—Permission has been granted Rev. E. W. Matthews, secretary of the British & Foreign Sailors' Society, to address the midshipmen of the Naval Academy.

There will be presented to the academy, Mr. Matthews said, in his application, a valuable memento of Nelson's flagship Victory. This relic comes from the British admiralty, and bears the initials of King Edward.

Washington, March 11.—Marked improvement was shown yesterday in the condition of Archie Roosevelt, the President's son who is ill with diphtheria. Surgeon-General Rixey this morning expressed the opinion that Archie was practically out of danger.

Clothes and Their Wearer.

It is curious how clothes become stamped with the wearer's personality. Just as shoes and gloves adjust themselves to the wearer, hats take on a something that instinctively reminds one of the wearer. It is curious, but it is so.

The Pearl.

The origin of the pearl is the subject of a Hindoo legend which attributes this beautiful formation to the fall of a drop of dew into the bosom of an oyster gaping in the sun.

Salt In Italy.

In Italy the sale of salt is a government monopoly, its cost in that country being greater than that of sugar. Every one therefore uses it very carefully. It is only for sale in the tobacco shops, and the privilege of keeping these is greatly coveted, being a sort of sinecure awarded to men who in other countries would receive a pension for services to the government.

Pins.

The number of pins manufactured daily in England is 54,000,000; in France, 20,000,000; in Germany, 10,000,000. It is estimated that about $3,000 worth of pins are daily lost in Europe.

Antidote to Poison.

It is a great thing to thoroughly understand what simple antidote to take if one is so unlucky as to swallow poison of any kind through mistake. Sweet oil is to be found in nearly every house, and half a pint of it, taken immediately, is an effectual antidote to almost all poisons. Anybody with a strong constitution should take a larger quantity of this simple remedy.

Saccharine.

Though saccharine, a product of coal tar, is 220 times sweeter than sugar, there is practically no nourishment in it.

Steel.

At a mild red heat good steel can be drawn out under the hammer to a fine point, at a bright red heat it will crumble under the hammer, and at a white heat it will fall to pieces.

How to Tell Pure Cream.

A simple way to detect the adulteration of ice cream with cornstarch is to dissolve a little of the ice cream in water and then add a few drops of the tincture of iodine. The solution will at once turn blue if there is starch in the cream.

Spanish Grandees.

The grandees of Spain number about 200. They are titular chamberlains of the sovereign.

The Eyes.

Every one, for hygenic reasons, should wash out the eyes with a 5 per cent solution of boric acid each morning and every night before retiring, for this bath not only cleanses them, but soothes and allays slight inflammation caused from cold or from strong winds and incidentally strengthens the eyeballs.

Siamese Debtor.

In Siam a debtor, after he has put off payment for three months, may be compelled to work out the debt.

Jolly Millers' Inn.

The Jolly Millers' inn, at Newnham, Cambridgeshire, England, has been kept by a family of the name of Musk for the last 400 years. It is recorded in Cambridge annals that Queen Elizabeth once stopped there and drank a quart of "ye olde English ayle" without getting down from her horse.

The Escurial.

The Escurial, the royal palace near Madrid, is so large that it would take four days to go through all the rooms and apartments, the distance which would have to be traversed being about 120 miles.

Shuffleboard.

Shuffleboard probably comes from the same source as quoits, curling and bowling. It was immensely popular in England during the reign of Henry VIII. Subsequently it was one of the games forbidden by law because it turned the people from the practice of archery.

Newark, N. J.

Newark, N. J., was first called Milford, from the name of a town in Connecticut. Its name was changed at the suggestion of the Rev. Abraham Pierson, an early minister in the town, who had been ordained at Newark, in England.

Chronicles of Don Q.

BY K. AND HESKETH PRITCHARD.

(Copyright by Pearson Publishing Company.)

THE PAROLE OF GEVIL-HAY.

If you take a map of Spain and follow the Mediterranean coast, where, across the narrow seas, the mountains of Europe and the mountains of Africa stand up forever one against the other, you will find on the Spanish side the broad line of the Andalusian highlands stretching from Jerez to Almeria and beyond. Here is a wild, houseless country of silent forest and evergreen thicket climbing up toward barren, sun-tortured heights. It is patched with surfaces of smooth rock, and ravines strewn with tumbled bowlders; lined by almost untrodden mule tracks, and sparsely dotted with the bottle-shaped chozas of the charcoal burners and the herdsmen.

The lord of this magnificent desolation was locally, though not officially, acknowledged to be a certain brigand chief, known far and wide as Don Q., an abbreviation of the nickname Quebranta-Huesos, which is, being interpreted, the bone-smasher, a name by which the neophron or bone-breaking vulture goes in those parts. In answer to any question as to where the bandit came from or when he began to harry the countryside, one was told that he had been there always, which, though manifestly untrue, was, nevertheless, as near an approach to historical accuracy as may be found on many a printed page.

For Don Q., though perhaps not endowed with the sempiternal quality, had many other attributes of mysterious greatness. Few had seen him, but all knew him and feared him, and most had felt his power; he had cognizance of what was said or done, or, indeed, even thought of, throughout the length and the breadth of the wild region over which he held sway. He dealt out reward and punishment with the same unsparing hand. If a goatherd pleased him, the fellow was made rich for life, but no man lived to bring him false information twice.

From his hidden abiding place in the black rock, 100 feet above the general camp of his followers, he was to the surrounding country as a poised hawk to a covey of partridges.

The stories of his savageries were brought down to the plains by leather-clad mountaineers, and occasional expeditions were sent up against him by those in authority in the towns. But every attempt failed, and the parties of guardias civiles came back fewer in numbers, having built cairns over their dead, leaving them near lonely shrines among the ravens and the big ragged birds of the sierra.

From all this it will be seen that the brigand chief was not a common brand of cutthroat; in fact, he belonged to that highest class known as sequestradores, or robbers who hold to ransom; and though his methods were considered unpleasant, he carried through most of his affairs with satisfaction to himself, for he was an exceptionally good man of business.

Gevil-Hay's obstinacy sprang from a variety of causes. He was in bad health and worse spirits, and he had for the whole period of his manhood governed a small kingdom of wild and treacherous hillmen in the interests of the British government, backed only by a handful of native police, and, what is more, had governed it with conspicuous success.

A party of civiles had just returned from a particularly unlucky excursion into the mountains, and there was, therefore, the less excuse for the foolhardiness of Gevil-Hay, who declined to pay any heed to the warnings of H.B.M.S. consul on the seaboard or the deep hints of his host at the little inn under the mountains, but continued to pursue his journey across the sierra.

He carried a revolver, it is true, but he found no use for it on a dim evening when something gripped his neck from behind. Indeed it was only after an interval that he understood vaguely how he came to be the centre of a hustling crowd of silent men who smelled offensively of garlic and leather. They tied him upon his horse and the party set their faces northeast toward the towering bulk of the higher sierra.

But for once in a way the spiders of Don Q. had taken a captive in their net of whom they could make nothing. In the dawn, when they got him out of the cane-built hut in which they had passed the latter part of the night, they saw that he was tall and thin and rather stooped, with a statuesque face of extreme pallor. So far he was not so altogether uncommon. But the brigands were accustomed to see character come out strongly in similar circumstances, yet Gevil-Hay asked no questions, he evinced no trace of curiosity as to where they were taking him. He showed nothing but a cold indifference. A man in his position who asked no questions was a man of mark. He puzzled them.

The truth was that Gevil-Hay despised his warnings and took his ill-fortune in the same spirit of fatalism. He had been an Indian civil servant of good prospects and bad health. In the end the bad health proved the stronger, and his country retired him on a narrow income. He was unemotionally heart-broken. There was a woman somewhere in the past, a woman to whom the man's lonely heart had clung steadfastly through the years while health slowly and surely deserted him. "Love me little, love me long" has its corresponding lines set deep throughout the character, and if Gevil-Hay was incapable of a passion of love or sorrow, he was not ignorant of the pang of a long renunciation and an enduring regret.

Late in the afternoon a halt was called, the prisoner was blindfolded and led through the scrub; then the wind blew more sharply in his face and Gevil-Hay knew that he trod on wiry grass, which in turn changed to a surface of bare, echoing rock. Passing out of this tunnel he was secured by having his hands tied, and, when his eyes were uncovered, he found himself in a small enclosed valley with sheer precipitous sides.

A couple of men hurried him up a winding pathway cut out of the cliff-face to the mouth of a cave, fronting which was a little natural terrace.

There they found Don Q., sitting in the sunshine, with a wide hat of felt drawn over his brows. Gevil-Hay saw nothing vulture-like but one lean hand like a delicate yellow claw that held the cloak about his neck.

"To whom have I the pleasure to address myself," asked the brigand, with extreme and unexpected politeness.

Gevil-Hay's hands being loosed, he fixed his single eye-glass and glanced round the glen before he replied.

"Perhaps you will be good enough to give me some idea of your career, and we can go into the question of the ransom at the end of it," resumed Don Q. in his courteous manner, as the other finished speaking.

Gevil-Hay answered briefly in good Spanish, for an Indian civilian is supposed to start in life equipped with a knowledge of every language under the sun.

"Ah, then, you have retired—well, been forced to retire—but with a pension? Yes!"

"Yes."

"How much?" he asked.

"Three hundred pounds a year."

"Ah," the brigand hesitates, while he made a mental calculation. "Your ransom, senor—" he stopped; he understood how to make a judicious use of suspense—"you are a poor man, you say, and you are lucky in that I believe you. I will name but a moderate sum, and after this conversation there will be no more about it. We will omit the subject while you remain my guest." The soft speech grew softer.

"There is no need to give my position a false name," answered Gevil-Hay; "I am your prisoner. Misfortune introduced us."

Above all things created, a man who defied him was abhorrent to the brigand, but now he saw one who looked him in the eyes without either fear or curiosity. Gevil-Hay interested him, but rather as a frog interests an vivisector.

"On one thing I pride myself, senor," he said presently. "When I speak, the thing which I say is unalterable. I am about to tell you the amount of your ransom. I will contrive to send down your message."

"You will have to give me time if you wish to get the money," said the other. "I have only my pension, and I must see if they will commute that."

"Your government will pay," asserted Don Q. suavely. "They will not lose so valuable a servant."

"Do you care for a worn-out coat?" asked Gevil-Hay with a mirthless laugh. "Beside, I came here in spite of warnings that the roads were unsafe. I must bear the consequences."

Don Q.'s wrinkled eyelids quivered.

"Shall we say $20,000?" he asked, as if deferring to his prisoner's opinion.

"You have said it, and that's the end," returned Gevil-Hay; "though," he added, "I don't think you are ever likely to see it. They will commute my pension on the scale of the probable duration of my life, and that will give no satisfactory average, I am afraid. I hope you may get $15,000. I doubt if you will get more."

"I trust for your sake I may get $20,000," replied the Spaniard, "otherwise a disappointment might lead to consequences—regrettable consequences."

Meanwhile Gevil-Hay wrote out his appeal and a request to Ingham, the consul at the seaport under the mountains, that he would urge the matter forward.

In the gloom, when the fire was lit outside the cave, Don Q. returned. He took the sealed letter that Gevil-Hay held ready for dispatch.

"And now, senor, I regard you as my guest," said he; "and in all things but one you may command me. I assure you I will do my best to play the host well and to make your stay among us pleasant to you. I have your parole, senor?"

Gevil-Hay hesitated. The fever had laid its hand upon him, he shivered as he stood in the breeze, and the joints of his knees were unloosed with a creeping weakness. Not so many years ago the world seemed at his feet; he had striven hard for his position and won it—won more than that. He had tasted much of life's sweetness and the joy of power and growing success, yet to-day—

"Yes," he answered.

As the days went on Gevil-Hay found he had a good deal in common with the chief, who proved himself an attentive host. There was something kindred between the two men, and yet Gevil-Hay was alternately attracted and repelled.

Yielding to the charm of Don Q.'s fine courtesy he was led on to talk of many things, and he talked well, while the chilly thin-framed hearer, crouching in his cloak over the fire, listened with interest to a later view of the great world than lay within his own remembrance. Also the Englishman had been a wanderer in far countries; he was a man who spoke with authority, who understood the craft of administration and high affairs, so that he could converse on the level of actual knowledge and experience with one who held himself to be also a ruler and a lawgiver to no contemptible portion of mankind.

To Gevil-Hay—Don Q. was a study. He watched him as a snake might be watched by an imaginative rabbit. He was always following the livid-lidded eyes, always speculating on the thoughts which worked in that ill-balanced brain. For Don Q. was a Spaniard of the Spaniards, having the qualities of his race in excess. He was quite fearless, proud to distraction, unsurpassed in the kindly courtesy of a nation of aristocrats, and cruel beyond belief. Gevil-Hay, like many another man who has thought himself tired of life, clung to his chances of escape as they hourly grew less before his eyes. For one thing was apparent—Don Q.'s peculiarities did not lean to the side of mercy.

A couple of days after his arrival in the glen he asked the brigand chief what had been done with the two young brawlers who had drawn knives upon each other under the terrace.

Don Q. removed his cigarette to answer.

"They will annoy you no more, senor," he said with the anxiety of hospitality, "no more."

"What? Have you sent them away to some of your outlying detachments?" asked Gevil-Hay, for he had learned by this time that the robbers were posted at many points in the mountains.

Don Q. laughed, a venomous sibilant laugh.

"They are gone—yes, with the other carrion—the vultures alone know where!"

The chief was in one of his black moods of intense and brooding melancholy. They were common with him, but this was the first which Gevil-Hay had seen.

It suddenly struck him that some leaven of insanity might lurk behind the fierce, bird-like aspect. No wonder his followers obeyed him at the run. His generosity and vengeance were out of all proportion to the deserving.

"Some day," said Gevil-Hay abruptly, "they will resent this kind of thing. There are many ways; they might betray you, and then—"

Don Q. gave him a poisonous glance.

"I have made provision for that also; but, no, senor, when I die, it shall be in my own manner and of my own will," and he relapsed again into musing.

It was then that Gevil-Hay found himself wishing his ransom might arrive in full, and wishing it with fervor. In a few minutes Don Q. spoke again.

"If you own a dog, he may love you; but a pack of wolves are kept in order with the lash. These," he waived his hand toward the gleaming campfires in the hollow, "are wolves. Also many men desire to join us—many more than I care to take. So you perceive, senor, I can afford to lose a few who offend me."

So the days wore on, but one evening there was a new development.

Gevil-Hay was allowed to wander at large about the glen, and on this occasion, after an ugly climb, he arrived at the head of a deep and narrow cleft in the higher rocks, along the bottom of which a faint track was visible. As he surveyed it with an involuntary thought of escape, he heard his name mentioned. Of course it was some hidden sentinel, but he was surprised when the man repeated his call in the same low voice, for Don Q.'s men were usually sullen.

"What do you want?" asked Gevil-Hay after a little hesitation.

"The thing I say must be forever between us two alone. You can help us; we can help you. That is the reason I speak. No, senor, stay where you are. If you promise I will show you my face."

"I promise nothing."

"Ah, that is because you have not heard. Is it not true that my lord of the sierra is taking from you all your riches?"

"Yes."

"And you, like the rest of us, would do something to save them? Is not that also so?"

"It may be."

"Then do it. It is but a little thing, and in the doing should taste sweet. You will not betray me?"

"As I have not seen you I cannot."

"But you will not?"

"No."

"Then take it, senor. Here, look up toward the lentisco."

In the warm gloom of the lentisco shrub something cold and ominous passed from hand to hand, and Gevil-Hay's fingers closed on the butt of a revolver.

"You mean me to kill him?" he said slowly.

A laugh was the answer, and words followed the laugh.

"Yes, for you have opportunity. Then you shall go free, for we hate him."

"And you?"

There was another laugh.

"A pardon, and the blood money between us. Now go."

And it cannot be denied that in the soft southern dusk Charles Gerald Gevil-Hay was horribly tempted. He stood there in the silence and wrestled with the temptation. Arguments came to him freely. By firing that shot he would be serving his kind as well as himself. Tormented with thoughts, he slid back into the glen and walked across the short, hard grass toward the terrace. He passed by the fires round which the men were gambling. Lean columns of smoke rose slowly into the higher air, strange cries filled the glen, for the sequestradores played high, and each voice rose and fell with its possessor's luck.

Presently he went in. Don Q. scowled at him and threw him an English newspaper. It was 14 days old, and not one which Gevil-Hay was wont to buy when at home; but in the whirl of his thoughts he fled to it as to a refuge. He was about to open it, holding it at arm's length for the purpose, when his glance lit upon a notice in the obituary column.

"Hertford.—On March 10, suddenly, at Frane hall, Franebridge, George Chigwell Aberstone Hertford, eldest son of the late—"

He folded the paper with mathematical precision and read two columns of advertisements without seeing a word of what he read.

So George Hertford was dead at last! And Helen—free.

Don Q. looked furtively at him under the shadow of his wide hat, and saw that El Pallido, as the men called him, was sitting there more white and more statuesque than ever. His eyes were blank and set. By his tense attitude Don Q. knew that some struggle was going on within the Englishman's mind, and his own face filled with an ominous light as he glanced at one of his letters.

"Senor," he said aloud, in a changed voice, "news of your ransom has come. Eighteen thousand dollars. I said $20,000."

Gevil-Hay started slightly, controlled himself and said unconcernedly:

"And so?"

"And so, senor, I am prepared to stand by my side of the bargain," replied the chief with a poisonous politeness. "At the rising of the moon nine-tenths of you shall go free from the head of our glen!"

There was a silence, broken only by the noises in the camp.

"Am I to be grateful?" he asked frigidly.

Don Q. smiled with a suave acquiescence.

"And because your conversation has interested me, senor, you shall have the privilege of choosing which tenth of yourself you will leave behind."

"In fact, not content with making me a beggar, you will take from me all chance of regaining my losses."

Don Q. bowed again and spoke with exceeding gentleness.

"It comes to that. I am very much afraid it comes to that," he said "It is terribly unfortunate, I admit, but I do not see how it can be avoided. But you are a comparatively heavy man, senor; I think I should advise you to leave a limb behind you. One can live without a limb."

The brigand's callousness startled Gevil-Hay, well as he fancied he knew him. And in the breast of the slow-moving, phlegmatic man the temptation arose again with accumulated strength. A loaded revolver was under his hand, practical impunity waited upon the deed, and beyond that life—and Helen!

But he had passed his word, given his parole, and a man occasionally finds his honor an inconvenient possession.

Through it all the bandit sat and watched him with blinking eyelids in the lamplight. Don Q.'s sight seemed not very good, but it served to show him what he wanted to see. He had broken down the indifference of Gevil-Hay.

"I should certainly advise you to leave a limb," repeated Don Q., at last.

"You villain! You unutterable villain!"

Don Q.'s hand fell to his knife as he sprang to his feet and faced his captive.

"The one fact for which I am really sorry at this moment," went on Gevil-Hay, "is that I should have allowed such a thing as you to associate with me on equal terms! If I had guessed to what genus you belonged I would never have talked with you or remained near you except I had been held there by force! Now you know what I think of you, and I assure you, although I can guess the price I shall have to pay for the pleasure of saying so, it is cheap!"

Don Q.'s angled face was yellow. His figure shook.

"Senor, you have spoken as no man has ever spoken to me before," said Don Q., at last. "There are many ways of conducting those little scenes which lie between this moment and your departure. By the time the moon has risen it will be hard to recognize El Pallido!"

There was a fierce significance in the last few words that any other time might well have made Gevil-Hay's heart turn cold. But now with his blood up and the hopelessness of his position apparent, he merely turned his back with a stinging gesture of repulsion.

"You evil beast!" he repeated, "as long as I am not annoyed by the sight of you I can bear anything!"

So Gevil-Hay turned his back and stared into the night. The noises below were hushed. The encampment was waiting for him—waiting—and for a third time temptation leaped upon him. And that was the worst spasm of all. When it left him, it left him exhausted. His mouth felt dry, his brow clammy.

He was still standing facing the opening of the cave, and after a pause a voice broke the silence.

"As you have a loaded revolver in your pocket, why do you not use it. Why do you not shoot me down, senor."

"You know I could not," replied Gevil-Hay comprehensively.

"And are you not afraid of what is coming?"

Gevil-Hay turned and held out the revolver. Don Q.'s face was a study. He took no notice of the other's action, but asked:

"Because of your parole?"

He was answered by another question.

"How did you know about the revolver?"

"I instructed the man who gave it to you. I wished to see whether I had read you aright. Yet your inability to shoot me hurt you. Is not that so?"

"I wish I could do it now! At least there is no necessity for more talk between us. Maim me and let me go or kill me! Only take away this revolver from me before I—"

Don Q. took the pistol and laid it with deliberation upon the table beside him, then he spoke.

"Senor," said he, "when I find one like you I do not spoil the good God's work in him. You are not the type of man who comes to harm at my hands. A man who can keep his honor as you have done is worthy of life. Had you shot me, or rather had you attempted to do so—for I bear the charmed life of him who cares not whether he lives or dies—then the story of your death would have been related in the posadas of Andalusia for generations. But now, take your life, yes, take it from my hands.

"After to-night we shall see each other no more; but when you look back over your life, senor, you will always remember one man, who, like yourself, was afraid of nothing; a man worthy to stand beside you. Don Q., once of the noblest blood in Spain. A man—" The brigand checked himself in his flood of florid rhapsody and Spanish feeling. "Adios, senor."

Two hours later Gevil-Hay was alone upon the sierras. When he reached Gibraltar, which he did in due course, he was surprised to find himself almost sorry to hear that the Spanish government, goaded on by ponderous British representations, had determined to cleanse the land of the presence of Don Q.

Since then Gevil-Hay's life has not been a failure. And sometimes in the midst of his work a thought comes back to him of the proud, unscrupulous, gallant brigand whose respect he had once been lucky enough to win.

HOW DON Q. DEALT WITH DON LUIS DEL MONTE.

The British government, having been put to some trouble in the matter of Gevil-Hay, immediately and imperiously demanded that the brigand who originated the unpleasantness should be forthwith caught and punished. Whereupon the authorities at Madrid sent down a strongly worded remonstrance to Don Felipe, governor of the town by the sea, inquiring why Don Q. the brigand in question, had not been plucked from his eyrie and executed long ago.

So it came to pass that Felipe Majada sat in his chair and cursed the British government by the length and breadth and to the depth and height of the Spanish language.

Thrown upon his own resources and realizing that something must be done, which it seemed the ordinary agencies of the law could not effect, he fell back upon the device of employing private enterprise.

It was upon this business that he journeyed to Malaga to meet a certain Don Louis del Monte, who appeared to him extraordinary qualified for the task to be performed. In Spain, as in other countries, there is always a sufficiency of broken gentlemen ready to lend a hand to any well-paid job. Luis del Monte was one of these.

At the time Don Felipe summoned him, he was living in aching poverty above a shop where they sold tobacco and stamps.

The governor entered into the business with a new zeal. To pit Don Luis against Don Q. meant bloodshed, and in fat Felipe Majada the instinct of the bullring awakened.

"Sit down," he said aloud; "I will explain the plan I have formed."

Then he told the story of Gevil-Hay's detention by the brigands, with the matter of the ransom, and added many other details given by former captives until del Monte felt he was in possession of all the needful facts of the case. Between them stood wine and cigarettes—the short, brown Spanish cigarettes rolled in sweetened paper and not innocent of saltpetre. Don Luis smoked one after another as he listened, gazing out with absent eyes over the two harbors of Malaga.

When Majada ceased he began.

"I have heard much of Don Q. He appears to be a fine sort of fellow who has made the best use of his opportunities up yonder. I had thoughts of going into the business myself. Meanwhile, what do you want me to do?"

The governor of the little white town put his wish plainly if largely.

"We must rid ourselves of this vulture," he said.

"So?"

"It will be worth your while," added Majada.

"That is as it may be. The risk is great."

"True. But one does not pay for nothing!"

"What do you propose to pay the man who undertakes it?"

"One thousand pesetas."

Don Luis del Monte laughed and snapped his fingers in contempt.

"Two thousand pesetas then."

Don Luis shook his head.

"Dollars," he said parenthetically.

"Impossible! Would you ruin the country?"

"No, no. You forget I know better, my dear senor. I have already in my time explored her pockets myself: Two thousand dollars."

The question was not settled in a moment, but eventually Don Luis del Monte's debonair inflexibility on the point prevailed.

"The price of my life," he said, "and a beggarly bad bargain."

"For the government," amended Don Felipe. "Besides you will live to enjoy it in Malaga. How, then, do you propose to get to work?"

"I must be captured, and you will arrange the ransom. They say down here that the brigand recognizes a gentleman and treats him handsomely pending the arrival of his ransom and the arrangement of his affairs. If he does not—well. I am an old soldier. Meanwhile I shall have five days in his company."

"By St. Peter! Cold steel and close quarters!" cried Don Felipe, with rising excitement. "Senor, you are not a coward."

"Nor a fool," rejoined the other coldly.

"Then you have some other design—yes?"

"Certainly I have a design less blaring than yours. I shall start in the early morning."

"Stay! How will you deal with him?"

"As the goatherd and the farmer deal with the other quebranta-huesos. I will poison him. He shall share the death of the vultures and the wolves. I shall have five full whole days with him, I tell you. How can he escape me?"

"I do not know," Don Felipe said dubiously as he watched the thin, sinister face opposite him with a smug interest. "But I have heard him called a bad enemy."

"And I will conquer him by being a bad friend, which is just twice as formidable."

"Yet," said Don Felipe lowered his voice instinctively, "he has other friends. I came hither to Malaga, for if I had had this conversation with you in my own house across the bay some ear would have heard and some foot have been ready to carry the matter up yonder."

Don Luis made no answer. He put a handful of the governor's cigarettes in his pocket and prepared to go.

"I must have money to-night—money to repair my toilet, to buy a horse and lay the affair in train. It is necessary to be generous, senor. This may be my last night of pleasure, and then, perhaps"—he began the song with which children mimic the clerk's chant at funerals—"the gorigor comes next. Who knows?"

Don Luis del Monte swaggered gracefully down the dim stone passage, with its high barred windows, and so out into the street. As he went along, a woman passed him with a soft southern laugh. For the rest of the evening she evinced a quite inadequate interest in his movements.

By early dawn, before the light broke, a man from the sierra waited in the prosaic shadow of Malaga railway station, where presently a woman with her head and shoulders wrapped up against the chill of dawn, came to him—the woman whose cadences of laughter Don Luis had heard for the first time as he bowed to her in the tortuous, ill-smelling Malaga street on the previous evening.

Robledo was her lover, who had come down from the sierra to see her with a price upon his head and the light of adventure in his eyes. Isabella liked him for his good looks, though he already was careworn, after the manner of mountaineers; but, for his reckless courage, her heart loved him.

Any account of their conversation would be superfluous. Robledo went away in the earliest train that left the city, thus it came to pass when Don Luis del Monte arrived by a roundabout route at the foothills, the news of his coming and his errand had already been thoroughly handled in the remote glen where Don Q. lived in his solitary greatness like the vulture whose name he bore.

Robledo had made extraordinary haste to carry to his chief intelligence of the danger that threatened, for rumors of Don Felipe Majada's instructions from Madrid and his anger thereat, with his perplexity as to how they should be carried out, had afforded the last week's talk in the mountain gorge.

Evening was once more drawing on when Robledo sprang up the narrow winding path to the mouth of the cave in the rock face, where Don Q. chose to house himself apart from his followers.

The chief sat moodily in the cave with his concentrated livid-lidded glare upon the young robber. And, although Robledo was a brave man, he crossed himself furtively.

Then the chief put a question or two, and Robledo told his story at full length. He had followed the governor to Malaga, after that so much was known, so much was guessed, but the plot was fairly understood and hung well together. For Don Luis had told nothing, he was far too experienced for that, but something had been overheard, and a good deal inferred from the purchases he had made, and, in fact, Robledo had proved himself a very creditable detective. As he grew more excited with his story, he gave way to those picturesque exclamations and gestures which the Andalusian loves. And Don Q. listened, laughing here and there tenderly as a man laughs who sees a subtle and hidden humor. When the tale was finished and the last low laugh had died away, the chief fell into thought; when he looked up he asked—

"And what is your counsel, Robledo?"

But Robledo knew his master too well.

"My lord orders" he answered glibly. "There is no knowledge nor will in the sierra but my lord's."

Don Q. closed his delicate claw-like hand.

"That is well, Robledo my child, for if there were it would die."

Robledo crossed himself again suddenly and involuntarily, and the chief caught the motion.

"And why that, Robledo?" said he.

"I was thinking of the soul of this Don Luis del Monte," replied Robledo with ready untruthfulness.

"Ah, then bring Gaspar and Andres."

In a very few moments the three men stood in a silent line before him.

"Robledo," he said, "you will go down beyond the valley of the cork-trees, and wait on the southern track to Ronda. Take men with you, for it may be that Don Luis will come by that way. And you will deal gently with him. You, Andres, will go toward the passes, for it also is a traveler's path through the sierra. You will bring this cabellero to me very safely. And listen. Robledo."

"Yes, lord."

"We share a secret between us and—"

"Yes, lord."

"When it ceases to be a secret you will cease to be a man. Now go!"

The two men turned away from the terrace, and Don Q. followed the lean, sinewy figures till their scarlet fajas disappeared down the slope; then, seeming to forget the presence of the third, his head drooped upon his breast, and he remained still and mute like some big sleeping bird for half an hour. Meantime Gaspar stood and waited without moving hand or foot.

"And for you, Gaspar," said Don Q. abruptly, but in the same tone as if he had just ceased speaking; "and for you, Gaspar, a peaceful errand—to the shrine of San Pedro. You will see the Fathers."

"Yes, lord."

"Take with you this bag of pesetas and ask them to say masses, beginning next Friday, for—"

Don Q. paused; Gaspar stood in the same patient, eager attitude.

"The soul of Don Luis del Monte."

Meanwhile Don Luis rode on unknowing. On the second morning he had left the open stretches of heath and palmetto behind him, and was mounting the lower spurs of the sierra. He had no guide, but Don Q.'s net swept a wide circle about the Boca de Lobo, and capture was equally probable anywhere upon the sierra. In the lining of his hat del Monte had secured the means whereby he hoped to take Don Q.'s life. Beyond that one resolution his plans were in the clouds, but he relied, as he had had reason to do in many other crises of his career, on chance, treachery and a good wit.

At length he entered upon a wide valley of corkwoods and ilex trees, where he rested during the heat of the day, and as the cooler airs of evening blew over the ridges from the sea he mounted again and pushed upward. The first dew was beginning to fall when he halted under a white outlying limestone crag to look around.

On every side, range beyond range, the sierra rose gray, stony and sinister. The utter loneliness of the scene, the fact that he was bound on a desperate errand, that there was no help possible against the bloodthirsty men into whose power he was about to give himself, might well have made him pause, but del Monte's single thought at that moment was success, and the supply of money it promised him for another fling at the tables.

A stone rolled down the perpendicular face of the crag and fell at the horse's feet, but Don Luis was lighting a cigarette and seemed too busy to look up. Then a shot whizzed past his head, ripping a shred of felt from his broad-brimmed hat, but he finished with his cigarette, threw away the match, and was about to raise his eyes, when a loop of rope fell sharply over him and he was jerked from his saddle upwards.

The indignity of his position as he was hauled up the face of the cliff amidst the jeers of the bandits roused del Monte, who passed a bad quarter of an hour dangling furious at the rope's end until exhaustion compelled him to allow himself to be secured without resistance.

Nearly all that night the men drove him blindfolded, and led by winding turns and through the chill of an underground passage into the enclosed glen where the brigand chief waited for his coming.

While Robledo went up into the cave to make his report, del Monte was left with a couple of sullen guards, in the valley. One happened to be Gaspar, whose errand to the Fathers had been happily concluded.

"My friend," began Don Luis presently, "is this captain of yours all one hears of him down there in the plains? Is it true that he buries his prisoners alive?"

"When he does not crucify them," replied Gaspar shortly. "It is often too great a labor to dig holes in our rocks."

"And you? Do not some of you taste death slowly—in a like manner?" asked Don Luis insolently.

"It has been heard of," was the imperturbable reply.

"And you love him better afterwards?"

"In the mountains love and fear are one," said the robber.

At length Robledo led the captive in to the presence of Don Q. The cave struck warm yet the chief was muffled in his cloak, but he bared his head in greeting as del Monte entered. The two men stood face to face and surveyed each other silently, before Don Q. spoke.

"Your mother, senor, was of the family of the De Casselos?" he asked with entire courtesy.

The strangeness of the question startled Don Luis as much as the appearance of the man who put it.

"I did not think you would be likely to interest yourself in these matters," he replied haughtily.

"And why not?" returned Don Q. with extreme softness.

Yet Don Luis only by an extreme effort kept up the manner in which he had begun the conversation.

"A gentleman of your profession—" he began.

"A gentleman is still a gentleman—in my profession. Answer my question, senor, if you please."

The other shrugged his shoulders.

"You knew her then, senor, that you ask me this?"

Don Q.'s thickened eyelids quivered; he raised his head with a fine gesture.

"That pleasure was mine. I knew her very well," he answered simply. "You have her eyes, beautiful exceedingly; but you cannot look another in the face any more than she could. It was a very little defect—"

"Of nature?" put in del Monte, half laughing as the other hesitated.

"I was about to say of the heart. But these things belong to the past, and only concern us to-day in that they prove you to be of gentle blood on both sides."

To be continued.

Perfect Womanhood

The greatest menace to woman's permanent happiness in life is the suffering that comes from some derangement of the feminine organs.

Many thousands of women have realized this too late to save their health, barely in time to save their lives.

To be a successful wife, to retain the love and admiration of her husband, should be a woman's constant study.

If a woman finds that her energies are flagging, that she gets easily tired, dark shadows appear under her eyes, she has backache, headache, bearing-down sensations, nervousness, irregularities or the "blues," she should start at once to build up her system by a tonic with specific powers, such as the great woman's remedy for woman's ills, made only of roots and herbs.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

It cures Female Complaints, such as Dragging Sensations, Weak Back, Falling and Displacements, Inflammation and Ulceration, and all Organic Diseases, and is invaluable in the Change of Life. It dissolves and Expels Tumors at an early stage. Subdues Faintness, Nervous Prostration, Exhaustion, and strengthens and tones the Stomach. Cures Headache, General Debility, Indigestion, and invigorates the whole female sysem. It is an excellent remedy for derangements of the Kidneys in either sex.

BIBLE PORTRAIT ALBUM

BEARS MANY LIKENESSES TO MEN OF THE PRESENT DAY.

THEY ALL TEACH MANY LESSONS

There Are Saintly Faces, and Also a Rogue's Gallery—Jesus Especially Denounces the Pharisees—Technical Right, Is Sometimes Moral Wrong—Must Keep the Spirit and Not Letter of Christ's Teaching.

Entered according to Act of Parliament of Canada, in the year 1907, by Frederick Diver, Toronto, at the Dept. of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Los Angeles, Cal., March 10.—Dr. Talmage shows in this sermon how true to life are the portraits in the Bible story and how common in our day are the identical faults and sins that characterized men in the time of Christ. The text is Luke xii, 1: "Beware of the leaven of the Pharisees, which is hypocrisy."

The Bible may be compared to a family album. When you turn the sacred pages, the different faces you see there are like your own ancestors. They are men of another age and another land, but they are men like ourselves. Their faults and their good qualities are plainly described, and we see that they were such men as those we associate with to-day. Moses and Joshua and Gideon and David and Paul and Peter and Mary and Martha and Lazarus do not seem to be so much Jews as human beings like ourselves—not strangers, but your own flesh and blood. By their own mistakes and sins and failings and spiritual triumphs they are preaching their practical lessons. They seem to sit by your side and say: "My son, I would not live as you are living. I would not sin as you are sinning. The only true and happy life is the gospel life. I know your temptations by experience. There were black days in my life as there are in yours, but they were the dark days when I was following my own selfish will. When I surrendered my life to the divine will, there were no dark days. Try to live for Christ, my child. By my own sad history I want you to learn this lesson." Yes, the Bible pages are simply filled with pictures of those who are part of us, as you seem to be part of them.

But, though the Bible is a great photograph album with its hundreds of saintly faces pleading with us to be good, the Bible also has its rogues' gallery as well. There the fiendish faces are pilloried for our warning. There are Cain, the murderer, and Jezebel, the painted hag, whose bleeding carcass is being eaten by the dogs under the walls of Jezreel. There is the swaying corpse of Prime Minister Haman dangling from the hangman's noose which he had prepared for just Mordecai. There is the Babylonish banquet hall where Belshazzar and his intoxicated revelers were holding the high carnival of death. There are the cruel face of bloody Herod and the demoniac visage of the unrepentant thief blaspheming Christ when they were both dying upon the cross. There is Judas, the traitor, clutching the blood money for which he had sold his Master. These sinful faces are all there. They seem to be human lighthouses, flashing out their red lights over the stormy seas of life, warning us away from the fatal rocks upon which they have eternally foundered. Yes, the Bible seems to be crowded with two kinds of pictures. There we find the saints and the fiends. The pictures of the saints are pleading with us to come and kneel at the foot of the cross. The fiends by their miserable fate are continually calling, "Beware, beware, beware!"

Among all the excoriated sinners of the Bible not any are more vehemently denounced by Christ than the Pharisees. In one place Christ compares them to the whited sepulchers filled with dead men's bones and all uncleanness. In another place Jesus compares these Pharisees to the woman who cleanses the outside of her cups and yet leaves the inside corrupt and filthy. In another place Christ describes a Pharisee and a publican praying in the temple. To the Pharisee God is turning a deaf ear. To the publican God is reaching out the hands of forgiveness and love. In another place Christ is comparing the Pharisee to a wolf crawling around in sheep's clothing. In my text he calls them hypocrites. In other words, these Pharisees may seem to have the face of an angel, but they have the claws of a tiger. Though they may seem to be the friends and helpers of mankind, yet everything they touch they pollute and destroy, as does the infectious hand of a leper. "Woe unto you scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites, for ye compass sea and land to make one proselyte, and when he is made ye make him twofold more the child of hell than yourselves." This was Christ's idea of the Pharisees when he was upon earth. It is just as true a picture of the Pharisees to-day.

Now, why should the faces of the Pharisees always be found in the rogues' gallery of the Bible? These men, as a class, represented the brains and the wealth of the east. They had among their representatives most of the social and political and ecclesiastical leaders of Palestine. When candidates were about to be inducted into their order they had to take vows of piety and pledge themselves that they would give one-tenth of all their financial income to the Lord. They held most of the seats in the sanhedrin, yet here Christ is denouncing them as worse than thieves and murderers and social outcasts. Why is all this? Let us study their origin and then mark the spiritual degeneracy of these men, who were outwardly fair to look upon, but inwardly were as a writhing mass of decomposition.

First their origin. But what is the etymology of the word? Pharisee originally comes from the Hebrew word perushim or separatists. A Pharisee in broad terminology means "a separator." A separator from what?

Away back in the time of Jehoiakim, 600 years before Christ, Nebuchadnezzar, king of the Chaldeans, with his mighty army swept southwestward and laid siege to and captured Jerusalem. As was the custom of that day, a large number of the Hebrews were carried away from the land of their nativity. There, within the strong walls of old Babylon, they had to dwell. No temple had they. No priesthood had they. Surrounded by the sins of a heathen nation and under the shadow of the shrines of the idols, they had to do something to prevent their children becoming immoral idolaters. So what did they do? They withdrew themselves just as far as possible from associating with these sinful Babylonians! They did what the Puritans did when they were exiles in Holland. "When the Puritans arrived in the city of Leyden, which was to be their home for some years to come," wrote the author of "The Pilgrim Fathers of New England," "the exiles from Scrooby lived very much together, a community within a community, dwelling among a strange people." Thus was it with the Hebrews in the Babylonish exile. They kept as completely separate as possible. In order to keep their Hebrew religion pure and undefiled they became in time a people narrow and bigoted and clannish. So the beginning of the sect was altogether commendable. The Jew was a despised captive. He could not reform the conditions around him, but he could register his protest against them by withdrawing himself from them. Not all the Jews of that time were willing to thus withdraw at the cost of obloquy and perhaps financial loss. Those who did withdraw were called separatists or Pharisees. Though the Pharisees as a class were narrow and bigoted, they had their origin in the noblest and purest of ideals. They were first organized as a sect in order to protect their own morals and the morals of their children.

I cannot illustrate my thought better than by taking you for a little while in old Jerusalem to the "wailing place" of the Jews. It is one of the great sights for the Palestine tourist to see. Though Jerusalem has been under foreign control for centuries upon centuries, yet the intense patriotic Hebrews have not forgotten their race or their religion. They are not allowed to enter the Mohammedan mosque, which is built upon the site of the old temple, so they gather day after day at the foot of the walls where there are stones that once formed part of the temple. There they repeat over and over again the lamentation of the Seventy-ninth Psalm: "O God, the heathen are come into thine inheritance. Thy holy temple have they defiled. They have laid Jerusalem on heaps. We are become a reproach to our neighbors, a scorn and a derision to them that are roundabout us. How long, Lord? Wilt thou be angry forever?" Thus they stand day after day as their fathers stood, and month after month, and year after year and century after century the weeping and wailing and praying and pleading go on. Thus did the exiled Hebrews become the Pharisees or the separators of Babylon. Day after day, year after year, they pleaded with God to bring them back to the Davidic capital. "How long, O Lord," they cried, "how long must we live amid these licentious and blaspheming Babylonians? How long? How long? How long?" Thus they prayed. Thus they pleaded. And thus they refused to mingle with the Chaldean sinners. Thus we find that the genesis of the Pharisees was inspired by love for God, by love for purity and by love for the Mosaic laws.

Having explained the genesis of the Pharisees, it is sad to have to trace their spiritual degeneracy. When God took pity on the race and permitted them to return to Palestine, the Pharisees were proud of the attitude they had taken. They had been faithful while many of their brethren had not, and they were proud of it. Now, spiritual pride is always a bad thing and leads men into serious faults. If you once teach the doctrine that the most important fact of a man's life is to live by a set of rules and stand up straight, it is not very difficult for him, like a fancy pigeon, to go strutting around bending backward. As he had separated from the idolatrous Chaldeans he now separated himself from his brethren and plumed himself on his obedience to the minute letter of the law. In order to keep separated from his fellow men he said, "I will obey the law." Then, in order to try to follow out the letter of the law, he lost sight of the spirit of the law. Then he said, "If I pay my tithes and I keep the laws of purity and I obey the law of the Sabbath, why, I am a perfect man." Now, you know and I know that there is no set of laws ever made that the man who wants to evade them cannot find a way to climb over or under or go around if you only give him time enough to work out his schemes.

The Pharisees said, "We must obey the Bible." Then in order to bolster up the Bible they hedged it around with a lot of traditional commands of the Talmud. Then as soon as they had made the letter of the law binding they evolved a lot of rules by which they could circumvent or crawl around the commandments of that law. For instance, by the old Talmudic law it was not right for a Hebrew to go farther from his doorstep on the Sabbath day than one and three-quarter miles. The Pharisee rigidly obeyed that law. But how did he do it? He took a small stone, which he placed at the front of his door. He called this his doorstep. Then when he wanted to make a long Sabbath journey he picked up this doorstep and put it into his pocket and went his way, carrying his doorstep with him, and of course was never away from it. Thus he was able to go as far as he wished and still keep the letter of the Sabbatic law. He obeyed the letter of the law. He broke the spirit of the Sabbatic law. He strained at the gnat of truth, and he swallowed the huge humpbacked camel of error.

As a man of common sense you know that a man may be technically right and yet morally wrong. He may obey the law of the state to the letter and yet be as dishonest as any criminal behind iron bars wearing the convict's stripes. So the Pharisees by legal technicalities circumvented the spirit of the Hebrew laws. They climbed over the laws. They crawled through the loopholes of the laws. They broke the laws of God just the same as some astute citizens are breaking the laws of their country to-day.

When the pharisaical order began to grow, the rabbinical leaders did not think the Bible statements of what God wanted his people to do were strict enough and full enough and explicit enough in their teachings. So these pharisaical leaders, or rabbis, year after year, century after century, began to form a companion to the Bible, which was not so much commentaries of the Bible as extensions of the Bible. They filled up their pages with commandments which God was supposed to have forgotten to tell Moses and Joshua and Jeremiah and David and Ezekiel. Thus this Talmud is nothing more or less than the traditions or the oral sayings of the old pharisaical rabbis. It told the Jews what kind of clothes they were to wear on the Sabbath day, and how they were to cut their finger nails, and how they were to feed their cattle and how they were to untie their ropes. I am literally speaking the truth about the Talmud. It is filled with childish trivialities and with the greatest amount of unmitigated nonsense which was ever compacted between the covers of any book. So with our Bible to-day. The learned theologians have been at work. They have covered the leaves with a mass of traditions. They have evolved out of its pages a conglomerate mass of meanings which a ten-year-old child ought to have sense enough to see are not there. And instead of our opening the leaves of our sacred Bible and reading the simple parables of Jesus Christ and interpreting them as they ought to be interpreted we are hedging our sectarian churches around with the sayings of theologians that Christ would at once repudiate if he were upon earth. The cardinal and essential doctrines taught in the Bible are two—the one, man is a sinner; the other, Christ is a Saviour. Let us beware of traditional creeds which should have been burned up long ago in the fires of the dark ages of sectarian strife.

Now, like a carpenter driving his nail into a board and clinching it upon the other side, we would clinch the applications of this sermon. There are two truths here which we want you to carry home. The one is positive; the other is negative. This first is this: We should adopt the Bible as our only infallible rule of faith and practice. When you try to live that Bible, will you practice its spirit and not simply cling to the letter of the law? Will you do this no matter what problems of life you have to face? For instance, when a man lies about you and misrepresents you and says all manner of evil against you falsely, will you try to win that man to Jesus Christ by the law of love and not by the law of hate? Will you follow the spirit of the Bible and not the letter of the Mosaic law? Will you show forgiveness to those who have done you a personal injury?

But there is a negative side to this subject as well as a positive. We must not disobey any of the commands God has given. We must not suppose that the gifts we make to Christ's cause or our regular attendance at church or our Bible reading or our prayers will cover over and atone for lying, stealing and cheating. Sins of the social world, sins of business life and sins of the home must be repented of and renounced. The Pharisees were so particular about their beliefs that they used to have the law written on a very small form and compressed it into a small box, called a phylactery, and tied this box as a plaster upon their foreheads and wore it as they went around the street that everybody could see it. So there are many church members who make a great parade of their orthodoxy and their Christian beliefs. But they are not honest in business, and they are not true to God in their home relations, and they neglect their duties to God and devote themselves to pleasure. When you confront them with the question, "Is that right?" they answer: "Other church members do it. Why should not I?" Are you resolutely willing to toe the mark of Christian integrity, no matter what other church members may do or say?

Tell me honestly, are you serving God aright when you go to those progressive euchre parties? Are you serving him aright when you overreach a man in a business deal? Are you serving him aright when you let the theatre party and the dance hall crowd out the prayer meeting? Are you serving him aright when you have wine upon your table? There is no excuse to-day to say, "Some ministers and church elders do those things." The question for you to decide is, "Is it right for me to do them?" God does not judge us by what the other Christians do. God judges us by what we do ourselves

"Well," you say, "if I cannot follow men and I must follow the Bible, tell me in a few words how I can best learn what the Bible wants me to do. I cannot read all its books in a night." Of course not, my friend. But you can read a few chapters. These you can soon master. Just take the four gospels for a guide. Take the central figure of the Bible for your model. Paul was a Pharisee of the Pharisees. He said it. But Paul as a Pharisee had to renounce many things before he became Paul the triumphant apostle. Take Christ as your guide. Follow him. Do what he would have you do. If you are in doubt about any act, just say to yourself, "What would Jesus do in my place?" If you take Christ as your model and keep studying him and keep clinging to him, there is no doubt that you will come out all right. Oh, sinner, worried and anxious in the struggle of life, wilt thou take this sure and infallible guide for thy earthly life and for thy celestial companionship?

To Save Ill Feeling.

Bert's Rescue

By JAMES CONLEY.

Copyright, 1906, by E. C. Parcells.

"Come on, Bert," urged Charlie. "The ice is bully just now. Come on ahead."

"Don't rub it in," pleaded Bert Bentham. "This is my punishment for seeking to astonish the natives with a frock coat and silk hat. The train was so late that no one beheld my glory, and as my trunk will not be here until tomorrow I'm afraid that I shall have to go without my skating."

"But we're the same size," insisted Charlie. "Put on some of my duds."

Bentham winced. It was his quarrel with nature that she had made him but two inches taller than five feet. His little cousin was only thirteen yet, and, as he said, Bert could wear his things. For a moment pride fought with desire, and desire won. He had always been passionately fond of the ice, and it had been a couple of years since he had enjoyed an opportunity of skating. This chance was too good to be lost. It was a beautiful night, and the probabilities were that no one would recognize him. He could slip into the crowd and quickly lose himself.

"Proceed," he said, with mock tragedy. "I shall enjoy my second childhood rather earlier than most men; that is all."

Half an hour later they were on the river. Already a crowd had assembled, for the moon was full and the ice a perfect glare. Charlie's simple "My cousin, fellows," was regarded as sufficient introduction, and presently Bert was skimming over the ice with an easy swing that betokened the experienced skater.

He shot straight up the river, speeding along with no thought of anything save the enjoyment of the skimming motion, and it was half an hour before he realized how far he had gone.

Skating back against the wind was a slower process, and by the time he reached the ferry road again the ice was crowded. He hunted up Charlie and then contented himself with shorter flights, though he kept away from the most crowded part of the ice. He had been skating in artificial rinks for so long that the broad stretch of glassy ice fascinated him, and he had no use for the parties of skaters that clung in groups.

He had just wheeled for a trip up the river when a tiny form shot past him, and almost unconsciously he gave chase. Apparently she was a mere child, but her strong, graceful strokes carried her along with a speed that tested his own qualities, and he skated after her.

Around the bend of the river the sluiceway from the cotton mill emptied into the stream, and for a space the ice was thin. Bert had kept away from this side of the river after the discovery, but now he was so intent upon his chase that he did not realize that the child was bearing dangerously in toward shore until she gave a little cry as she felt the ice crack under her feet.

Instead of keeping ahead she seemed paralyzed with fright and dug her skates into the ice to stop herself. He could hear the new ice giving way as the strain of her weight continued, and with a sudden swerve he dashed in toward her.

He was powerfully built for his size, and it was an easy matter to catch the child up in his arms and carry her out of the danger zone. As they swept along he could feel the ice give under him, and the ominous crackle seemed to follow him. Then the noise stopped as he shot out on to the firm ice, and he ceased skating, coming gradually to a halt.

"That was a risky thing to do," he said sharply as he set her on her feet. "Don't you know about the sluice?"

"I should have remembered," she said as she clung tremblingly to him, "but I heard one of the boys coming after me, and I wanted to beat him. I forgot all about the danger."

"I guess that's the last time you'll forget this season," he said.

"I should say so," she agreed. "It was awfully good of you to act so quickly. Who are you?" she added as he changed position so that the moon shone on his face.

"I'm Charlie Bentham's cousin," he explained.

"Oh, yes," she smiled. "I remember Mrs. Bentham telling us that Charlie had a little cousin coming to visit him. You're a good boy, and I'm awfully grateful to you."

She stood on tiptoe and kissed him squarely on the lips. For a moment Bert was too astonished to speak; then he sped after her.

"Can't I skate with you?" he asked. "Let's skate up as far as the railroad bridge."

"Come ahead," she called as she put out her hand. Bert grasped it, and they glided off. For a few minutes nothing was said. They skated together as perfectly as though through long practice, and they were almost at the bridge.

"You are a newcomer in Maridale?" he asked, breaking the silence. "I don't think I remember you."

"We moved here two years ago," she explained.

"That's it," he declared. "I pride myself on my memory for faces. I have not been able to get up here for a couple of years. My business has kept me pretty close to town."

"Your business?" she echoed, losing her stride and stopping. "Why, Mrs. Bentham said you were the same age as Charlie!"

"That's Ned Collins," he explained. "Ned's coming down for the holidays. I'm Bert Bentham."

"But"— she began, with a glance at his clothes.

"I see," he laughed. "You thought I was a boy because I was wearing one of Charlie's suits. You see, I got a foolish idea that it would be funny to come down all togged out. When Charlie said 'skating' I realized that a frock coat was scarcely a skating costume, so I put on one of his suits. I guess I look pretty much like Charlie. That's the worst of being so short."

"And you let me kiss you," she reproached.

"That's all right," he smiled. "I've had little girls kiss me before, you know."

"But I'm not"— she began. Bert started.

"You don't mean to tell me that you"— he gasped.

"I'm nineteen," she said, her eyes filling with tears. "There's nothing to laugh about," she added as Bert shouted. "You let me kiss you, and it was real mean."

"It was real nice," he contradicted, "and I didn't let you. You kissed me before I knew you were going to."

"And now every one will laugh at me," she sobbed.

"The laugh is as much on me as it is on you," he reminded. "I don't think I'm any too anxious to be laughed at."

"And you won't tell?" she demanded, her sobs growing less violent.

"Never," he promised, "not if you kiss me a thousand times. But I thought surely you were a child," he said, glancing at her short skirt.

"I have my dresses all made long, so that I look taller," she explained, "but they are awfully in the way when I skate, so I borrowed one from my sister."

"I guess it's a standoff," he declared. "We fooled each other and ourselves. But we haven't reached the bridge yet."

He held out his hand, and she slipped hers into it. Somehow the sense of a secret between them gave her a feeling of security, and her embarrassment soon wore off. Before they turned she was chatting away as though he had known her all his life.

They were on the ice again the next morning, and Bert went home a slave to her charms. Alice Vinton was the first woman he had ever seriously cared for, and he made such an active courtship that on the last night of his stay, as they turned at the railroad bridge, which marked the limit of their progress, he held her hand for an instant.

"I'm going home tomorrow," he said, "and I want to take back with me your promise that I may come for you in the spring. Will you promise, dear?"

For answer she reached up and kissed him as she had done on the night of their meeting. But this time there was no mistake of identity.

Her Serious Programme.

"I am going to have a little girl baby, and when she is three years old I am going to kill myself."

This startling remark came from the lips of a seven-year-old north side girl and was made with no more demonstration than if she had remarked that she was going to take one of her dollies out for a walk.

"My, my!" said her father. "What in the world possessed you to make such a remark?"

"Well, papa," replied the little miss, "I have just been reading a lovely story about how a little girl only three years old put fresh flowers every day on her dear dead mother's grave, and her mother had killed herself, and I thought how nice it would be to have a little girl put beautiful flowers on my grave."

"Oh!" said her father reflectively. "I guess you had better play outdoors more and do a little less reading."—Columbus Dispatch.

Jeweler's Bit of Advice.

"I think I'll have to bring her in and let her choose," said the embarrassed young man as he looked hopelessly at the diamonds spread out on the table.

"Pardon me for a bit of advice," the jeweler said earnestly, leaning forward, "but I've had a lot of experience in such matters. If you pick it out yourself and take it to her she'll surely be satisfied. Always are. But if she comes here and sees bigger, handsomer rings she won't be contented with the one you can afford. The $500 or $800 ring she sees will stay by her. We've often lost sales that way. I've frequently seen the young woman pick out a ring that the man obviously couldn't afford, and he would find some excuse for not buying it."

Then the young man said he thought he might as well decide on that $110 trifle at once.—Kansas City Star.

Came Near Missing the Abbey.

"Well, it was worth coming the few miles for," said the American as he puffed a cigar and drank his coffee outside the restaurant at Mount St. Michael. "They told me that I ought to come here and eat an omelet, and that omelet was real good. Now, I expect there's not much more to do on this little rock, and so I'll be getting back to the motor."

"But," suggested his English companion of the moment, "have you seen the abbey?"

"Abbey!" came the sharp reply. "Have they got an abbey on this bit of stone? No, I've not seen that, and they didn't tell me anything about an abbey. They all talked about the omelet. But if you tell me that I ought to see the abbey, then I'll just have to stay half an hour and have a look at the place, but it'll make me late for dinner, I guess."—Westminster Gazette.

Example of False Myopia.—A lad of 9 years formerly stood high in his classes, but during that school year had fallen far behind. Severe headaches, nervousness, restlessness at night were among the symptoms. On examination, false or functional myopia was found, also due to muscular spasm. It took a minus 2D glass to give him clear distant vision, but a plus glass was given, combined with prism, which, of course, at first blurred distant vision, but with the result, in a short time, that all headaches, etc., disappeared, the boy could read and study easily, and again made rapid advancement at school, and at the end of the school year could see distinctly and clearly for distance, and had no need to wear the glasses any longer, whereas if minus glasses had been given to give clear distant vision (which "No. 1" wanted) the boy would have been a confirmed myope for life.

BAPTISTS DEDICATE THEIR NEW CHURCH.

BRIGHT AND INSPIRING SERVICES IN THE NEW EDIFICE YESTERDAY — SERMONS BY REV. V. H. COWSERT — THE MUSICAL FEATURES — SOME ANCIENT HISTORY.

Had the Baptists of this city waited till next Sunday to formally dedicate their fine new church, it would have been exactly 34 years since the first meeting of the brethren of that denomination in Belleville, which meeting took place on the Sunday following St. Patrick's day, 1873. Before reporting what took place yesterday, it may not be out of place to recount a little ancient history in regard to the church.

SOME ANCIENT HISTORY.

The prime mover in organizing a Baptist congregation in Belleville was Mr. Charles Lang, now and for many years resident on Yeomans street. In 1870 the old gentleman landed here, just from Devonshire, England. Having been connected with the Baptist communion "at home," as he says, he soon looked around Belleville in the hope of finding fellow-Baptists. He was directed to an old lady named Mrs. Reed, who lived near the station. She told him of other Baptists who were in the city, but on visiting them Mr. Lang found they were then averse to leaving the congregations with which they had become united. In the spring of 1873 a Rev. Mr. Stewart, then a Baptist minister in Toronto, came to Belleville to give a lecture under the auspices of the Ministerial Association, and on the following Sunday preached in St. Andrew's Church. Mr. Lang heard about a Baptist minister being in the city, and after the morning service on Sunday approached Rev. Mr. Stewart as to the possibility of instituting a Baptist church in Belleville. The Rev. gentleman told him that if he could get his fellow-Baptists together they would have a meeting that afternoon, and Mr. Lang set off, full of zeal, to see them. Things were arranged, but on such short notice no hall could be secured, and it was found necessary to meet in the dwelling of Mrs. Reed, which was done. They had a splendid meeting, Mr. Lang says, and from that Sunday afternoon dates the history of the Baptist congregation in Belleville. For some time afterwards the congregation worshipped in the Marble Hall, Front street, but that was found too expensive, and a change was made to the Court House, the permission of the County Council having been obtained. The names of the ladies and gentlemen who were identified with the first Baptist congregation in Belleville were: Mrs. Reed, Mrs. (Dr.) Tracy, Mrs. Jessup and Palmer, Messrs. Charles Lang, James Etheridge, Henry MacColl, Richard Bryant, William Etheridge William Worth, Jr., Samuel Squires, Albert Jones and T. Jessup. The first minister was Rev. Mr. Patterson, and under his pastorate the first church, which stood on the corner of Coleman and Moira streets, was built.

REV. V. H. COWSERT,

Who Preached Dedicatory Sermons in the New Victoria Avenue Baptist Church Yesterday.

The church cost $4,000, and was formally opened and dedicated on the 22nd of May, 1874. The opening sermon was preached by Rev. Dr. Davidson, then of Guelph. Only two of the original church members are now connected with it, namely, Mrs. (Dr.) Tracy and Mr. Lang.

In 1896 the congregation moved across the river to the building which was torn down to make way for the present splendid edifice. Shortly after the change the old church burned down.

The following gentlemen have been pastors of the church since its inception: Rev. Messrs. Patterson, Mulhern, Turnbull, Stobo, Baker, McNeil, Munro, Marshall, Cowsert, Elliott, and the present incumbent, Rev. Chas. H. Emerson.

So much for the past.

THE NEW CHURCH.

The new building is a red brick structure, 90 feet long by 60 feet wide. The design is a modified Gothic. The shapely tower rises on the southwest corner to the height of 65 feet. The interior is complete, except the front gable, which is to be capped in cut stone as soon as the weather permits. Entrance to the building is gained either through the tower or through the vestibule at the other side of the church. The front doors have bevelled glass panes. The floor of the auditorium is gained by an easy staircase. The School room is a high ceilinged and well-lighted room suitable for the varied work of the church. The primary class occupies the front, and is separated from the rest of the room by folding partitions. At the back a Board room, furnace and coal room, a stair leading to the auditorium and lavatories are provided. The walls and ceiling are finished in pine, and tastefully decorated.

The auditorium proper is entered from corners of the vestibules. The floor inclines gently toward the pulpit, placing all the seats in view of the speaker. The wood-work is pine and grained in golden oak. The carpets and curtains are green, making a most effective color scheme. At the back of the church provision is made for pastor's study and vestries. Over these vestries is the organ chamber. The choir occupies a platform immediately in front of the pulpit platform. Incandescent lights strung along the girders and hanging in clusters from the trusses provide what light is required. Circular, uncushioned seats, provide accommodation for about 500 people. The walls have been given a stucco, and are indurated.

YESTERDAY'S SERVICES.

For about a year, more or less, the good people of Victoria Avenue Baptist church have been engaged in the construction of their new building, and, though they have for some time been worshipping in the Sunday school rooms, the church proper was not completed sufficiently to permit of its dedication, till yesterday, and yesterday was, one may be sure, a joyful day for the members of the congregation. Special services were held, and appropriate sermons were preached by a former pastor, Rev. Vernon H. Cowsert, now pastor of the Western Baptist Church, Toronto. Very large congregations were present, both morning and evening, and the services were bright and pleasing in character.

An Intelligencer representative, yesterday morning, was moved to admiration by the handsome interior of the church, which is tasteful, yet simple, and quietly elegant without being "loud" in any sense. The hardwood pews appeal to one's sense of comfort, too, which is more than can be said for all the churches in this city. The platform was tastefully decorated with flowers, the choir seats were full of cheerful looking ladies and gentlemen, the organist was playing a voluntary, soft and low, yet withal appropriate, and, altogether, there seemed an indescribable something in the air which "nicked in" well with one's sense of the fitness of things.

The hymns were appropriate to the service, and were sung with heartiness.

Rev. Mr. Emerson made the dedicatory prayer. He said they thanked God for the privilege of worshipping in their new church to-day, and asked Him to accept their humble gift in the name and spirit of Jesus Christ. The new building represented hard work and sacrifice on the part of the people, and they gave it with humble and thankful hearts. Very earnestly the pastor prayed that the pulpit might always stand for the truth as exemplified by Christ; the pews always be filled with people who were ready to be known as faithful followers of His; that the church might always be a resting place for the weary and sad, a turning point for the sinner, and a rock of strength for those who came to have their faith intensified. He asked for an especial blessing on those who had made sacrifices in aid of the building of the church, and that light, peace and joy be with all of God's people everywhere.

During his announcements Rev. Mr. Emerson said he was led to marvel at the way God had led them on in the building of the new church; how He had, in fact, almost compelled them to go forward. On the new edifice had been spent $17,500. Of this they had paid or pledged $9,500, which left quite a debt, but they believed that God who had led them so far would lead them through; they had no misgivings as to that.

Rev. Mr. Cowsert took as the basis for his sermon part of the 4th chapter of Joshua, the first seven verses, more particularly the words,

"What mean ye by these stones?"

The sermon was literally crowded full of apt similes, anecdotes and thought-compelling matter. At the time of the text the Children of Israel had at last reached the promised land, and had there erected a monument. This text was suggested to him, the preacher said, because, eleven years ago, the Baptists of Belleville had been placed in a somewhat similar position to the Children of Israel, and God had helped them over the local Jordan—the Moira—and had placed them in a more favorable position for their work. This occasion was a link to bind them to the past, and the preacher spoke of the noble men and women who had in the past labored for the church, and who would have been overjoyed could they have lived to see this splendid new church dedicated. He mentioned the names of the late Major Casswell, Daniel Cunningham and Mrs. (Rev.) Robt. Wallace. But the present church was not meant to speak only of the past; it was here to tell its message out to the future, and the message was that God must be glorified and that men must serve Him forever and ever. It had been asked why, here in Belleville, was it necessary to build a new church, while the ones at present in existence were not filled. That was a fair question, and demanded a fair answer. He thanked God he had never yet had to apologize for being a Baptist, and the reason for building the new Baptist church was because the Baptist Church stood for those fundamental principles the result of which had been a large reaping of good the world over, and at all times and in all countries Baptists had been in the forefront of the fight for religious liberty. The Baptists had opened the door through which Methodists and other evangelical denominations had come to join in the fight. The fact was that one denomination helped the other. The preacher then affirmed many of the fundamental principles of the Baptist Church, which, he said, granted to every man liberty of thought and the right to worship God in any way he chose. In conclusion he prayed for the unity of all Christians, and that the new church might be a power for good in Belleville.

During the offertory the choir sang an anthem, "They that faint shall renew their strength," in good style, Mr Kelly taking the solo. The form displayed by the choir reflected credit on the choir leader, Mr. P. J. Smith.

At the conclusion of the sermon, before the benediction, Miss Bessie Moon sang the sacred solo "Laddie," in excellent voice and with much sympathy.

The collections yesterday, we are told, were very satisfactory to the church officials.

This evening there will be a tea for the congregation and members of the church, in the basement, and afterwards a public meeting in the church, with addresses by local ministers and laymen.

John Street.

"The Hour After Danger" was the subject discussed last evening by the pastor, Rev. A. H. Drumm. His text was from Exodus, 9th chapter, 34th and 35th verses. The Rev. gentleman spoke of Pharoah, who, whilst the plagues were over the land of Egypt, softened his heart, but hardened it again after the cessation of the plague. As with Pharoah, so it is with many in the world to-day, who, when afflicted, have their hearts softened, but, when all is well again, become hardened once more. Pharoah was only a type of human character. During the service Miss H. Gowsell sang a solo entitled "Was There Ever a Friend so True?"

Holloway St.

The delightful Sabbath was improved and enjoyed by the large attendance at Holloway St. Church. In the morning the pastor's text was Matthew, 21, 10:

"The city was moved, saying, who is this?"

Who is this, was asked, that stirs the human heart to its core, and through his enthusiastic followers stirs the city and the world? It is Jesus, a present Christ, a source of comfort and joy to the appreciative of his bodily and spiritual healing and salvation and this company with Jesus in their midst spread their feast day garments and shouted a glad Hosanna. The speaker showed that it was the Christian martyr spirit of Miss Maxwell that recently stirred the City of Montreal. That the departure of Drs. Carman and Sutherland this week to attend the first general conference of united Methodism in Japan and the centennial of missions in China, where the Hosannas will be sung and the cities of the east, moved, will ask the question of the text. The choir sang "Tell the story," Miss Price taking the solo. In the evening the theme was "The Holy City and its Citizens."

St. Michael's.

At St. Michael's Church yesterday evening Miss Gowsell sang "There is a green hill far away," with pleasing effect. At benediction, a trio, composed of Mrs. Grant, Miss Bawden and Mr. Peppin, rendered, with good expression, Beethoven's beautiful "Ave Verum," in F.

Church Notes.

At Bridge Street Church last evening a quartette composed of Mrs. P. Allen, Miss G. Price, Messrs. J. T. Burns and C. H. Vermilyea sang "The Old, Old Story," and in the anthem, "Now the Day is Over," Mrs. P. Allen sang the solo part.

At yesterday morning's services at St. Andrew's Church, Messrs. W. Wardrope, B. Mallory and J. Horie were ordained as elders of the church. The pastor, Rev. R. S. Laidlaw, officiated.

At Emmanuel Church last night Miss Lillian Hubly sang a solo, "The Best Friend You Have is Jesus," in a very sweet and sympathetic way.

Rousing Meeting Of Picton Conservatives

PROUD OF ROBLIN'S SUCCESS — WANT UNFAITHFUL PUBLIC SERVANTS DISMISSED.

Picton, Ont., March 10. — The annual meeting of the Liberal-Conservative Association of Prince Edward County was held here yesterday afternoon. The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Levi Williamson, of Picton; Vice-President, Harry Dempsey, of Rednersville; Secretary, E. A. Morden, Picton. A resolution was unanimously passed condemning the organized system of graft at Ottawa, and calling upon the Dominion Government to dismiss every Minister and official for disgracing his office by using the same for the private gain of himself or personal friends. Congratulations were extended to Premier Roblin on again winning the premiership of Manitoba.

The association declared its allegiance to Mr. R. L. Borden, and upheld the hand of Hon. J. P. Whitney.

DRUNK.

A Frenchman named Frank Venne was charged with being intoxicated on Sunday. He claimed that he obtained his liquor on Saturday night and drank it on the Sabbath. The Magistrate, after admonishing the accused, imposed a fine of $2, or in default five days in jail.

A Child's Escape

On Saturday afternoon a little girl named Fagan, whilst crossing from Front to Bridge streets, was knocked down by a horse and one of the wheels of the vehicle passed over her. Fortunately the child escaped with a few bruises.

Renfrew's Trial.

Fred Renfrew, who has to answer the charge of escaping from the County jail, was this morning brought up before Judge Deroche for election. He elected to be tried before His Honor, and the trial was fixed for Saturday afternoon next, at 3 o'clock.

McINTOSH BROS.

GEN. BOOTH ARRIVES

Will Visit Nearly All Canada's Chief Cities.

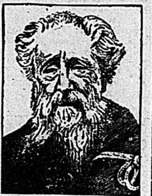
Tells the Story of His Army's Work—Emigration Is a Science With Them—The Government Should Provide Transportation—General Commends Ontario System of Dealing With Immigrants—Approves Jail Farm.

Toronto, March 11.—General William Booth of the Salvation Army reached the city shortly before noon Saturday, and was escorted to Government House, where he will be a guest during his stay in Toronto. There was no demonstration by the Army. At 4.15 in the afternoon he was tendered a civic reception at the City Hall, which was largely attended. In the evening he was greeted by Army officers and soldiers from all parts of Canada, who thronged Bond street Congregational Church to the doors, and who gave the venerable commander a rousing welcome.

Plan of Campaign.

In answers to questions as to his plan of campaign he general said:

"First of all I stay in Toronto for a week and see my officers, and do what I can to advance generally the interests of humanity and religion. Then to Montreal and Ottawa, where I stay with the Governor. Afterwards to Winnipeg, Vancouver and Seattle. From there I sail for Japan. I expect to spend my 78th birthday, the 10th of April, on the Pacific Ocean."



GENERAL BOOTH.

Speaking of his emigration schemes he went on to say:

Emigration Work a Science.

"The Salvation Army is rapidly reducing emigration to a science. What has been done has created the confidence now existing. Whatever people may think of the religious operations of the Salvation Army, and whatever they may thing of our peculiar methods—and they are somewhat peculiar, forcing religion on the attention of men—I think the large majority (seven-eighths probably) of the people of England believe we are reliable. They have not been equal to the task, and they turn to us. When I came away we were getting 1,000 letters a day, 750 letters and 250 applications at least a day, and as these represent families, the work is very important.

Commends Ontario.

He commended the Ontario system of making people repay what was advanced to them.

"It is a wonderful plan, and it is the only colony that does so," he observed.

With respect to the character of the men sent out he repeated his answer to Lord Rosebery. He could not guarantee that the men had never said a bad word, or told a fib, or taken a drop too much, or done any cheatery.

"For that class you must go to the House of Lords," he told Lord Rosebery.

"They are all archangels there," agreed Rosebery.

"As far as we can we guarantee that the men are honest and industrious, and likely to make such settlers as a Government desires," the general declared.

He approved of the idea of a jail farm for the province.

"It is one of my great schemes," he said. "I commend you to make the trial. There are enormous difficulties," he added. It is best to let men mix up with the mass, and then they do not feel that they are branded, he advised as to after-treatment.

Trade Secretary Short $5,000.

Baltimore, March 11.—David D. Carroll, president of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association, states that at a meeting of the directors on Friday, Clarence H. Forrest, secretary, was summarily discharged, it having been discovered, according to Mr. Carroll, that he was short in his accounts between $5,000 and $10,000.

California Would Bar Asiatics.

Sacramento, Cal., March 11.—The Senate Saturday unanimously adopted a joint resolution protesting against the naturalization of Japanese and instructing California's Senators and Congressmen to work for an exclusion law to include all Asiatics.

Nicaraguans Again Routed.

San Salvador, March 11.—At noon Saturday, a Nicaraguan column, as a reprisal for the recent victories of the Honduras, attacked the cavalry of Honduras at Tuguare. After three hours' fighting the Nicaraguans were annihilated.

Suicide Bureau a Success.

New York, March 11.—Miss Booth of the Salvation Army announced yesterday that the anti-suicide bureau has successfully passed the experimental stage, and that it will be made a permanent feature of the organization.

Gets Hingston's Seat.

Ottawa, March 11.—Sir Wm Hingston's successor in the Senate will be J. J. Dessaulles, business man, of St. Hyacinthe, Quebec.

BANK CLERK ARRESTED.

Will Be Taken Back to England to Face Charge of Theft.

Winnipeg, March 11.—Chased thousands of miles and having escaped pursuit for nearly seven months, Henry Douglas Anderson, former clerk in the branch of the Bank of England at Manchester, Eng., was captured Saturday near Dominion City by Provincial Constable Waddell.

Anderson has been working there weeks for a farmer about twelve miles from the town. When arrested he made no attempt to deny that he was the man wanted. He does refuse to admit the charge of theft on which he will be arraigned when he is taken back to stand trial.

It is alleged that Anderson, while employed by the bank at Manchester, stole £1,081. Large quantities of coin passed through his hands, and it is supposed he substituted copper coin for gold.

Before the alleged theft was detected Anderson left the employ of the bank coming to Winnipeg last August and putting up at the Imperial Hotel, where he stayed for about a month.

He returned to the old country until about six weeks ago, going to work for the farmer near Dominion City on his return.

The provincial police authorities were notified shortly after Anderson's first departure from England, and a search was made for him, but without success.

On the second arrival here, the police got a clue that led to his arrest.

The authorities in England have been communicated with, and an officer will be sent here to take the prisoner back to stand trial.

Anderson is about 42 years of age, quiet and unassuming.

Pay for Immigrants.

Ottawa, March 11.—Following the termination last fall of the contract with the North Atlantic Trading Co. for the encouragement of immigration to Canada, the Government has now arranged to pay a commission of ten shillings per head on each adult and five shillings per head on each child booked for Canada by the booking agents of the continental steamship companies. The immigrants so booked must be those who have signified their intention to follow farming or railroad work in Canada, or to accept positions as domestic servants in the case of females.

Russian Parliament Rests.

St. Petersburg, March 11.—Parliament adjourned Saturday night at the conclusion of the election of officers. It accepted the suggestion of the president to take a recess for several days.

Sir Daniel Dixon Dead.

London, March 11.—The Right Hon. Sir Daniel Dixon, member of Parliament for North Belfast, is dead. He was 63 years of age.

Simply Swallow.

MANY EAT AS THOUGH THEY WERE BLIND AND THEIR TONGUES CUT OUT.

Dyspepsia is built on confidence—too much confidence in the ability of your stomach to digest anything and everything you put into it.

In this age we have developed speed in every line of action, and we have also developed speed in mastication.

We don't take time to eat right, and sometimes we do not eat the right kind of food. Sometimes we carry our business to our meals and as a result eat mechanically. We eat as though we were blind and our tongues cut out. We simply swallow.

The result is that the food we eat is half chewed, and lies like a lump of lead on the stomach.

You may deny to yourself that you abuse your stomach, but when you get a bloaty feeling, you can't deny you've got it.

When you get brash, eructations burning sensations, bloating, aversion to food, loss of appetite, belching and other kindred ailments, there is not much use asking yourself, for the time being, why you suffer. The fact is you've got these ailments and the question of the hour is how to get rid of them at once, so that at your next meal you may be able to sit down and look at your meal straight in the face—with a keen appetite and a smile, and enjoy thoroughly everything you eat.

Just one of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest an ordinary meal, without the help of the stomach. One ingredient of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest 3,000 grains of food. The strongest stomach couldn't do the work any better than one of these wonderful little Tablets can do it.

Each tablet contains the strongest digestive agents it is possible to obtain.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are not a patent medicine. We come out and say just what is in them—hydrastis, golden seal, lactose and aseptic pepsin. They are recommended by 40,000 licensed physicians in the United States and Canada.

And they are recommended by everyone who uses them—they can't help it, for they immediately invigorate the stomach by letting it take a rest they strengthen the gastric juice and cause the appetite to become keen and regular.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will surely destroy dyspepsia, brash belching, that "lump of lead" feeling, burning sensations, indigestion, loss of appetite, and aversion to food.

Have Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets handy where you can take one or two after each meal. Then you will know what a blessing it is to have a good appetite and to get all the good possible out of everything you eat. You'll feel rosy and sweet. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at any drug store on earth, 50c.

CARS TOTTER ON BRIDGE

Narrow Escape of Train Falling Into Niagara Rapids.

Refrigerator Car Jumps Track—Smashed the Rails and Hung Toppling Over the Edge—Below Was a Chasm of 180 Feet—Damage Not More Than Few Hundred Dollars—Spectators Have Experience.

Niagara Falls, March 11.—A car jumped the track on the steel arch bridge of the Grand Trunk over the river, tore up the wooden filling between the heavy stringers, broke away from the train about the middle of the bridge and tottered on the edge Saturday.

The car behind it, pulled from the rails, plunged across the structure to the north side and stopped with the end hanging well out.

It seemed as though a breath would topple either car into the rapids, 180 feet below.

A New York Central switching crew took a long freight train from the Lehigh Valley yards on the American side to pull it to the Grand Trunk yards on the Canadian side.

Car Jumps the Track.

As the engine passed the water-tank switch, about 600 years from the eastern end of the bridge, an empty refrigerator car about the middle of the train left the rails. It bumped along the ties, across Lewiston avenue, tearing up the planking and ballast.

There being a sharp curve around the postoffice at the American entrance to the bridge, the engineer did not hear the cries of spectators nor see the signals of the crew. The train kept on over the bridge, the derailed car staying well within the rails, but smashing the railroad deck.

The car broke loose when about half way across. It swerved to one side, ripped through the pipe railing and hung as if in a balance.

Stops At Edge of Bridge.

The next car, jerked from the track by breaking of the train, veered off. One of the trucks caught in the bridge and the car stopped at the edge, one end swaying over the river.

The wrecking crews of both the New York Central and the Grand Trunk hauled off the forward and rear ends of the train. They they carefully pulled the two cars back, jacked them up and put them on the rails.

The damage to the bridge will be covered by a few hundred dollars, being in the main to the wooden stringers and the deck.

There practically was no interruption of traffic, the derailment having occurred on the south track.

The accident is said to have been the first of its kind here.

Seat Collapses' Two Dying.

New York, March 11.—Six persons were precipitated into the hold of the Hamburg-American steamship Romani, at Hoboken Saturday, when the hatchway on which they were sitting gave way.

Boatswain Lewis and Seamen Walker, Horton and Kennok and Mess Boys Parsley and Cater were removed to a hospital in a serious condition. Walker and Parsley probably will die.

Baby Dead From Laudanum.

Chatham, March 11.—The 13-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Basil Milner died yesterday as a result of laudanum poisoning, after physicians had labored nearly 20 hours to save the life.

The mother left the child alone in a room Saturday for five minutes, during which time the child opened a sewing machine drawer and took from it a bottle.

Dundas Woman's Death.

Hamilton, March 11.—Some time during the night Mrs. Frank Brown, of Dundas, who had been in poor health since the death of her child, a couple of months ago, got out of bed, and without dressing herself wandered out of the house. When her absence was discovered search was instituted, and about 10.30 yesterday morning her lifeless body was found below the dam. It is supposed that while wandering aimlessly about she accidentally fell over the dam and was either drowned or killed. An inquest will be held.

34 Lost In Shipwrecks.

Berlin, March 11.—A despatch from Cuxhaven reports the loss of thirty-four lives by the foundering of two vessels—a German cargo steamer, the George Wattern, and a trawler—during a heavy gale in the North Sea.

QUEEN SENDS SYMPATHY.

Her Majesty's Admiration of Miss Maxwell's Heroic Conduct.

Ottawa, March 11.—The following cable has been received by Earl Grey from the Colonial Secretary, Lord Elgin: "The Queen has learned with regret of the disastrous fire which occurred in the Protestant children's school at Montreal. Her Majesty desires me to convey to you her great admiration of the heroic conduct of Miss Maxwell, who gave up her life in a gallant attempt to rescue the little children entrusted to her care, as well as her Majesty's deep sympathy with the bereaved relatives of this brave woman." (Signed) Elgin.

West Durham Liberals.

Bowmanville, March 11.—It was decided at the annual meeting of the West Durham Liberal Association, held Saturday, to hold the district convention April 9, when Liberal candidates for the local House will be selected.

Among the speakers were: F. G. Inwood, general secretary of the Ontario Reform Association, Toronto; D. B. Simpson, John W. McLaughlin, Hayden, and William Rickard.

Officers were elected as follows: President, R. D. Davidson; secretary, F. W. Allen.

Belcourt May Be Senator.

Ottawa, March 11.—Already there is discussion as to who is to succeed Senator-Casgrain in the Senate. It is claimed to be the seat of an Ontario French-Canadian and rumors are [illegible] N. A. Belcourt, ex-[illegible] for the vacancy.

Attacks His Wife's Story.

Questions As to Thaw's Cruel Treatment Admitted.

Trial May Last Two Weeks Yet--Thaw Family Attorney Placed On Stand--Battle of Words Between Counsel--Rebuttal Evidence Produced, Little Headway Made--May Attempt Alibi For White.

New York, March 12.—Yesterday, the first day of the state's rebuttal in the trial of Harry K. Thaw, District Attorney Jerome came to a temporary standstill against a practically solid wall, the rules of evidence built around the story of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw.

Jerome began to attack this story as soon as court opened. There ensued a well-nigh incessant fight between the prosecutor and Delphin M. Delmas, leading counsel for the defence, at the end of which Justice Fitzgerald upheld the rule laid down at the beginning of the trial—the story is admissable only as tending to show the effect it might have had in unbalancing the defendant's mind, its truth or falsity being immaterial.

Although he doubtless will be blocked by the same rule when the time comes, it is said he may attempt in the same way to prove an alibi for Stanford White as to the events testified to by the wife of the defendant.

Ten Witnesses Called.

The district attorney called ten witnesses during the day, but, aside from obtaining from the state's eye-witnesses to the tragedy the opinions that Thaw seemed rational the night he shot and killed Stanford White, little real headway was made.

Lining up all his forces in rebuttal, Jerome decided to open his fight upon the defence by attacking the story told by Evelyn Nesbit Thaw. He called to the stand Frederick Longfellow, and asked him first about the case in which Ethel Thomas is alleged to have sued Thaw for damages because of cruel treatment.

Delmas objected to questions along this line under the professional privilege of lawyer and client, but before Justice Fitzgerald sustained the objection and ruled out the evidence Jerome declared:

"The story of the girl tied to a post and whipped by Thaw is the story of Ethel Thomas. This poor girl is dead."

Jerome showed Mr. Longfellow the photographic copy of the affidavit Evelyn Nesbit is said to have signed in the office of Abraham Hummel, which alleged Thaw used her cruelly while abroad in 1903, "because she would not tell lies against Stanford White."

Dispute Over Papers.

Jerome followed this up by asking the witness if Mrs. Thaw did not turn over to him certain papers to which she had subscribed. Mr. Longfellow said she had. There was a long controversy between Jerome and Delmas, at the conclusion of which Mr. Longfellow brought his entire examination to naught by declaring Mrs. Thaw never showed him a paper similar in any way to the Hummel affidavit. He thereupon was excused without cross-examination.

During the afternoon recess Jerome sprung something of a sensation by calling to the stand Dr. Rudolph Witthaus, a chemist and expert in poisons.

New Hypothetical Question.

The district attorney framed a hypothetical question covering Evelyn Nesbit's story, and asked if there was any known poison which would cause insensibility in two minutes and permit of the quick recovery testified to by Thaw's wife.

Around this vital point, which would bring up means by which the prosecutor could attack the truth or falsity of Mrs. Thaw's story, argument raged for an hour or more.

Jerome insisted he was not attacking the truth of Mrs. Thaw's story. He was calling for an expert opinion, he asserted, to the effect that no known drug would produce the effect testified to by Mrs. Thaw.

Did She Really Tell Thaw?

"My question indicates the answer I expect to get to the question," said Jerome, "and I can show there is no such poison in the world; if I can show there was no such occurrence as testified to, then it is for the jury to infer whether or not Evelyn Nesbit told her story to Thaw in Paris in 1903."

Bulgarian Premier Slain.

Sofia, Bulgaria, March 12.—M. Petkoff, the Premier and Minister of the Interior, was assassinated here yesterday.

M. Petkoff, with other Ministers, was walking in the Boris Garden when he was attacked by a stranger, who fired at him with a revolver. The Premier was hit by three bullets and instantly died.

M. Guenadieff, the Minister of Commerce and Agriculture, was wounded in the arm.

'Twill Advertise Us.

London, March 12.—(C. A. P.)—The pavilion, which will accommodate the Canadian exhibits at the International Exhibition, Dublin, is of imposing dimensions, and promises to be a splendid advertisement.

Canadians are much more ready, judging by past experience, to pass local option laws than to enforce them, says The Scotsman.

Increase the Grant.

Toronto, March 12.—The Government has decided to give the Salvation Army a $3,000 increase in the grant for their extra work this season in immigration and colonization. The former grant was $7,000, which will be increased to $10,000. Premier Whitney foreshadowed the increase at Massey Hall on Sunday.

Two Named In Carleton County.

Ottawa, March 12.—R. H. McElroy is the official Conservative candidate, and William H. Hartin, the independent farmers candidate for vacancy in Carleton County, to be filled next Monday.

S. A. LABOR IMMIGRATION.

None Are Placed Where Trouble Is On, Says Brigadier Howell.

Ottawa, March 12.—Ralph Smith of Nanaimo elicited from the Minister of the Interior, by way of reply, to a letter from Brigadier Howell of the Salvation Army, setting forth the practice of the Army in regard to the immigration of artisans.

The effect of it was that there was always a certain number of mechanics among those desiring to emigrate to Canada, and the Army officers saw to their employment in Canada. The Army was careful, however, to see that such persons were not placed where there were any labor troubles.

"In fact," wrote Mr. Howell, "the Salvation Army is doing more in the interests of labor than many of the labor unions themselves."

Hon. Mr. Oliver said the Salvation Army received the same assistance from the Government as other booking agents; besides, the Army was allowed $5,000 a year as expenses of the London office, in consideration of the fact that they cared for their immigrants upon their arrival in Canada.

J. A. DUNCAN SENT FOR TRIAL.

Former Bank Manager At Ayr Charged With Raising Voucher.

Brantford, March 12.—John A. Duncan, former manager and latterly acting accountant of the Bank of Commerce at Ayr, arrested at Paris on Saturday on a charge of raising a voucher from $17.90 to $13,017.90, was arraigned at Paris yesterday. Harry Lay, manager of the branch, stated that he had examined the books and believed the offence had been committed by the prisoner. Mr. Smoke, who acted for Duncan, agreed to waive further proceedings of court, not having evidence in rebuttal, and consequently the prisoner was committed to stand trial in the county of Waterloo, in which Ayr is located.

Fleet Gets Ready for Fun.

London, March 12.—Six ships belonging to the British first cruiser squadron are being fitted out at Portsmouth preparatory to joining the international fleet, which is to assemble in Hampton Roads in honor of the inauguration of the Jamestown Exposition.

The quarter-deck of Rear-Admiral Neville's flagship, the armored cruiser Goodhope, is being cleared of numerous fittings so as to allow plenty of room for dancing. Other preparations indicate that much entertaining is projected on board the vessels belonging to the squadron.

Postal Agreement Near.

Washington, March 12.—Following the recent visit to Canada of representatives of the United States Post-office Department regarding the announced intention of that Government to abrogate on May 7, the postal convention with the United States with respect to second-class matter, it was stated yesterday, that a satisfactory solution of the question probably will be found.

Boulter Wins In Brampton.

Brampton, March 12.—J. H. Boulter defeated Edward Hale in the municipal election yesterday, despite the fact that he was disqualified by reason of having an action against the Carnegie Library.

St. Kitt's Enquiry Closes.

St. Catharines, March 12.—The evidence in the civic investigation was completed yesterday, but the hearing of the arguments of counsel was postponed until Wednesday, March 20.

Horseshoe Inventor Dead.

Hanover, Conn., March 12.—Rodolphus W. Fuller, the inventor of the machine to make horseshoes, died yesterday, aged 85 years. The inventor died poor.

TIMELY TOPICS.

The members of the City Council in general, and the Gas Committee in particular, are, we believe, to be congratulated on their action of last night in engaging Mr. Thomas Gardner, of St. Catharines, as manager of the local gas works. Mr. Gardner comes highly recommended, and has, we understand, before proved himself, while in this city, to be a man knowing the gas business from A to Z. The up-to-date way of judging men and their methods is by results, therefore it may be well for our people to give Mr. Gardner a fair chance, for a few months, to bring order out of chaos before criticizing him, and, in the meantime, to render him every assistance in their power.

The business-like report of the Gas Committee appears elsewhere, in our report of the Council proceedings. It will, we believe, appeal strongly to our citizens as the deliverance of men who are quite in earnest in their desire to put that important civic utility on a business-like and paying basis. After reading the figures presented, one is forced to agree with the report, that the prospect is not very bright, but the very suggestions made by the Committee provide, we believe, the remedy. The accounts MUST be rendered promptly, and strict business methods must prevail.

Another recommendation with which we most heartily agree is the one providing that, in future, sales of fixtures and the matter of interior plumbing be left in the hands of city merchants. Those men pay business tax and keep up establishments; the city has no more right to compete with and possibly undersell them than it would have to open a dry goods or grocery store in the City Hall. In other places, we have been told, the city takes its gas pipes to the border of private property, and the rest of the work must be done — or arranged for—by the tenant or landlord. This looks to be only fair and equitable. In fairness, however it must be stated that, in the past the city sold fixtures and did interior plumbing work with the object of enlarging the sphere of gas sales. The arrangement, no doubt was initiated in all good faith. It has had its trial, has proved, apparently, unsuccessful, and should be stopped.

The fact that only a little more than $400 in waterworks accounts was uncollected at the end of last year speaks well for the management of the Waterworks department. That the Gas department could, and should, make equally as good a showing we respectfully submit.

With three provinces, Ontario, British Columbia, and Manitoba, strongly Conservative, it begins to look as though Laurier may see his finish if he looks far enough ahead.

Three street railroad employees of La Crosse, Wis., who were trying to break up an ice jam in the river were carried away on a cake of ice and came near being drowned. As they succeeded in saving themselves, though, it is assumed that they hung to the straps.

The Yankee railroads probably figure that people have to die sometime, anyway.

The days will soon be here when the rhymester can say:

The streets are damp with slush and mud—
There seems no bottom to it;
Sometimes we blithely jump the flood—
Sometimes just waddle through it.

The faculty of the University of Washington says that the students dance too much. This is not nearly so important in the eyes of the girls as whether or not they dance well.

A Cleveland man who has been paying $25 a week alimony has become too fat to work, and the court has cut the alimony allowance to $12 a week. His separated wife should send him some anti-fat.

What is the trouble in Nova Scotia and in Ontario?

* * *

A vacancy in the Senate occurred a few days ago through the death of Sir William Hingston, of Montreal, and it was filled on Saturday last by the appointment of Mr. Dessaulles. Quick work. Reason: The Irish Roman Catholics of Quebec were claiming the seat, Sir William Hingston being of that creed and nationality, but they did not get it.

* * *

In Nova Scotia there has been a vacancy for years. One man was appointed who declined the honor. Is there not another man in the Province willing to sacrifice himself on the altar of his afflicted Province?

* * *

Poor Ontario, how she suffers! There are at the present moment no less than three vacancies in the Senate, one for some months, the other two of a later date. Are there none ready to accept? Oh! yes. Topics knows of one, who says he has had the promise of Sir Wilfrid and Sir Richard in his pocket for years to give him a seat in the Senate. Nathanael, insist upon that promise being fulfilled, or raise a ruction.

Eye Strain CAUSES Eye Diseases

Eye STRAIN is the cause of most eye diseases. It produces irritation and congestion and a consequent weakness of all the nerves and muscles of the eye. In this way Glaucoma, Optic Nerve Paralysis, Granular Lids, Ulcers, Cataract, etc., are induced. These diseases are not only painful, but if neglected, result in blindness.

The best time to treat eye diseases is in the "eye STRAIN stage," and the most capable and experienced is the man to consult.

If your eyes, or head, or nerves trouble you you may rely upon our Optician for useful and competent advice, whether or not glasses are the medium of relief.

NO ACCIDENTS IN NATURE.

Every Calamity, No Matter How Great, Has a Definite Beginning.

There are no accidents in nature. The avalanche that without a moment's warning, rushes headlong down the mountain side is not an accident.

For years previous tiny atoms have been crystalizing, and adding their minute weight to the mass which left its base when the accumulation reached a certain point.

Neither is baldness an accident. The infinitesimally small germ which is the cause of Dandruff and Baldness, feeds silently and long before the result is seen.

The small germs which thrives on the scalp and which are the cause of Baldness and Dandruff cannot exist however, when Newbro's Herpicide is applied.

Sold by leading druggists. Send 10c in stamps for sample to The Herpicide Co., Detroit, Mich. Two sizes, 50c and $1.00. J. S. McKeown, special agent.

The Manitoba Elections.

The people of Manitoba last Thursday gave a renewal of confidence in Premier Roblin and his Government. It was one of the hardest fought fights that the Prairie Province ever witnessed, and the Liberal Opposition, aided as they were by the Federal authorities at Ottawa, left no stone unturned to effect the defeat of the Conservative Administration. Edward Brown was selected by the Laurier Government as leader, and every available force was placed at his disposal. A despicable campaign of slander was hurled against the Government, and even members of the clergy joined in the attack and hurled invectives from the pulpit. The temperance question was made an issue by the Opposition, and the Government was charged with violation of their trust, but the able defence of Premier Roblin and his colleagues apparently carried much greater weight with the electors. Premier Roblin made it a fight for provincial rights in the matter of the boundary question, and the Federal Government was charged with dealing falsely with the people of Manitoba. This was resented by the Ottawa authorities, who threw their every effort into the fight, and the cry was thrown out at the Government that they were seeking to evade local questions. But the Laurier Government received a stirring rebuke, and numbered amongst the defeated are Edward Brown, the leader-elect of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and his lieutenant, Horace Chevrier. The Laurier Government attempted the same tactics in British Columbia. They brought McInnes from the Yukon Governorship to lead the Liberal forces, but, what was true of British Columbia is true of Manitoba, and the electors spoke in no uncertain tone of protest against this Federal interference.

Premier Roblin's majority is not quite as large as it was before, but that was expected. He has been in power for seven years, and the programme he has carried out has been notable for its fidelity to the interests of the province and for its actual suitability to conditions as they exist. Leader Brown, of the Opposition forces, drew up a rather attractive policy, but the people of Manitoba were not to be misled, as that policy was only an invention of the Federal Government to act as a bribe in securing the suffrages of the people. It failed and that it did fail redounds to the good judgment and common sense of the electors of the Prairie Province.

He had no coat upon his back,
But had one on his tongue,
And Rocky Mountain Tea, it's said
Kept him from being hung.

Good For Your Cold.

A noted specialist in throat and lung trouble, who established a camp for consumptives in the pine woods of Maine, and whose remarkable cures there have attracted great attention from the medical world, says that one-half ounce of the Pure Virgin Oil of Pine mixed with two ounces of Glycerine and one-half pint of good Whisky, used in teaspoonful doses every four hours, will heal and strengthen the lungs, break up a cold in twenty-four hours, and cure any cough that is curable. The ingredients can be secured from any good prescription druggist at small cost.

Inquiry at the prescription department of a leading local druggist elicited the information that the Pure Virgin Oil of Pine is put up only in half-ounce vials for dispensing. Each vial is securely sealed in a round wooden case, with engraved wrapper, showing the name—Virgin Oil of Pine (Pure), prepared only by Leach Chemical Co., Windsor, Ontario—plainly printed thereon. Only the cheaper oils are sold in bulk, but these create nausea and never effect the desired results.

It Is Now Up To the Dominion Government

Kingston News: From the statements of the Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines, in the Legislature in regard to the Healy Falls Power Company it is clear that the getting of ample power for, at least, eleven lake front ridings depends on the surrender of its rights by the Dominion Government to a portion of the power above Healy Falls.

Without the Dominion Government's portion of the rapids there would not be sufficient power and which after all is of no use for power purpose to any other than the Healy Falls Company. This company now owns several stretches of the rapids in question, and besides recently secured a patent from the Ontario Government, the land necessary for the hydraulic works which after all is the key to the situation. The question is will the Dominion Government block the way?

HOW BILEANS SAVED A FIREMAN.

Many a man has escaped perils of fire and ocean to fall a prey to disease. Bileans saved Fireman J. R. Flanagan, of Raglan Road, Kingston, from this fate. He says: "I suffered terribly from indigestion and constipation. After food I had acute pain, a sensation of weight at the stomach and belching, followed by a worn-out, languid feeling. My bowels would not work healthily, bad headaches were common, and I fell into a weak, worn-out state. What would have happened to me but for Bileans I don't know! One box of this vegetable remedy greatly improved me and a few boxes cured me. I have now gained weight and am quite restored." Bileans also cure piles, female ailments, anaemia, spring debility, blood impurities, pimples, eruptions and all liver and kidney troubles. All druggists and stores at fifty cents a box, or from Bilean Co., Toronto, for price.

Y. M. C. A. NOTES

Mr. D. M. Terry, the great Seedsman, has presented $25,000 to the new building of the Detroit Y.M.C.A.

The Board meets to-night at 7 o'clock. The business men's gym. class at 7.15. The seniors at 8.15. Basket-ball practice at 9 o'clock.

There will be prizes offered in connection with the drawing competition of domestic animals mentioned last evening.

MUSIC AND THE DRAMA.

"SHADOWS OF THE PAST."

Though Lincoln J. Carter's successful drama, "Shadows of the Past," is by no means a scenic production in the usual sense of the word, in that it depends for its strength on tons of scenery and properties, yet the background against which the story is laid is unusually picturesque. The action of the piece changes from England to Belgium, and then back to bonnie Scotland. The scenes showing the famous bell tower in Bruges and a flower embowered lodge in Scotland, are two of the most artistic sets of theatrical decorative art exhibited on the road this season. "Shadows of the Past" will be at the Gorman on Monday, March 18.

THE STYLE OF HAIR WORN

is an important factor to produce a younger and refined face and a well shaped head to any lady or gentleman. Prof. Dorenwend, who will be at Crystal Hotel on Wednesday, March 13, can demonstrate this to anyone calling on him at his show rooms. He has ladies and gents' Wigs, Toupees, Bangs, Wavy and Plain Fronts, Switches in every length and shade, that he will gladly adjust on any lady's head free of charge to prove this. DON'T FAIL TO SEE HIM. It is his only visit to Belleville this season. w7-d9,12

The religion that cannot mix with business has no business to meddle with anything.

A new leaf is really the same old one with another turn.

The Baptist Doings

The Baptist dedicatory services were continued last evening. There was a tea for members of the church in the basement, and afterwards a public meeting in the church proper. The attendance was fair. Rev. O. H. Emerson, pastor, was chairman, and congratulatory addresses, breathing the spirit of fellow-ship, were delivered by Rev. Messrs. Hubly, of Emmanuel R. E. Church; Leitch, of Holloway St. Methodist Church; Laidlaw, of St. Andrew's, and Brown, of the Tabernacle. The choir sang two anthems in good style, and Mrs. Ray sang a pleasing solo, "I'll go where you want me to go, dear Lord."

At to-night's service Rev. J. P. Wilson, pastor of Bridge St., will deliver an address on "The Message of the Church to the World."

On Sunday, the 24th of this month the famous McMaster Evangelistic Band will commence evangelistic services in the Baptist Church, and their visit is being looked forward to with great expectancy.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

SPORTING NOTES.

Stratford juniors beat the Lindsay Midgets 4—1 last night, thus winning the round and the junior O.H.A. championship by 14 to 6. The Stratford lads, by beating the Lindsayites on their own ice, show that they must have exceptional class, for people who saw the Lindsay bunch in this city realized that they could go some.

The fact that the Guelph Lyons, before being kicked out by the O.H.A., beat the Stratford juniors on their own ice, shows that the Lyons, for a junior team, must have been about as fast as any that ever came down the hockey pike.

Stratford is now in the proud and unique position of owning two champion O.H.A. teams. Hats off to the Classic City, not forgetting the Lindsay lads, who certainly played the best junior hockey ever seen here.

In the intermediate finals last night, Berlin lost to Collingwood 4—3, but won the round and championship by three goals, the score on the round being Berlin 10, Collingwood 7.

Wanderers beat Toronto pros. 12—10 last night, in spite of the fact that the spectators were throwing chairs at the visiting team. Gentlemanly people, those Toronto spectators.

The two Smiths of Ottawa will go to Kenora to help Tom Phillips' crowd to defend the Stanley Cup. The thing of subsidizing players to leave other clubs and strengthen the defenders' line-up does not seem exactly the thing, in one sense. Some people think there should be a residence rule for pros., as well as for amateurs, but the spectators are not kicking. They want to see hockey well played, and whether the speedy players get their money openly or on the sly cuts no ice with the man who pays the nimble quarter at the gate. That is an undeniable fact, and all the crocodile tears of the Globe et al. will not wash it out.

The carnival to-morrow night is very much in the eye of local skaters. It will probably be the last rink event of any importance this season.

THE MARCH "ROD AND GUN."

There is no lack of interesting articles in the March number of "Rod and Gun and Motor Sports in Canada," published by W. J. Taylor, at Woodstock, Ont. Dog hunters will read with indignation and concern the article on Our Vanishing Deer, which opens the number and will point to the many papers on Wolves as showing that Dr. Murdoch, the writer, is wrong in his conclusions. The subject is one open to differences in views, though the Doctor makes a good beginning, and knowing his ground, will be well able to defend his position in any resulting controversy. The wonderful manner in which public opinion is moving all over the continent in connection with the protection of fish and game is well shown by the special descriptive account of the two days' conference of the North American Fish and Game Protection Association at Quebec.

It flows like fire through your veins, it does the work. If you're wasting away day by day, take Hollister's Rocky Mountain Tea. 35 cents, Tea or Tablets.—D. M. Waters.

John Merrin Dead.

WAS THE OLDEST ENGINEER ON THE G.T.R., AND MADE THE RECORD RUN IN THE YEAR 1896.

At 5.30 a.m. on Saturday last the death occurred at his home, at the G.T.R. Junction, of John Merrin, who held the record of being the oldest engineer on the G. T. Railway, and also of being the longest in actual railway service in Canada. Mr. Merrin was taken ill on Dec. 19th last and for some weeks was in the General Hospital. He recovered and returned home, but collapsed last Monday and sank rapidly during the week. The deceased was born in Liverpool, England, on Oct. 1st, 1831. On March the 9th, 1846, he entered the service of the East Lancashire Railway Co., and thus was for 60 years in actual railway service. In 1857 he came to Canada and entered the service of the Grand Trunk Railway Co. as locomotive engineer, and thus was for half a century on the road. He first lived in Kingston, then in Belleville, and for the past 11 years in Kingston. For 25 years he ran the passenger trains from Belleville east and west. Since July, 1906, he has been engineer on the Kingston Suburban train. On leaving Belleville he was presented with a gold-headed cane and an illuminated address by the locomotive engineers of Belleville, a token of appreciation and esteem in which he was held by his fellow-employees. Mr. Merrin held the G.T.R. record for the fastest trip ever made over that company's line. In January, 1896, when Dr. K. N. Fenwick was dying, it was he who brought Dr. Roddick, of Montreal, to Kingston, on a special. He came from Brockville to Kingston at a frightful rate of speed, covering the distance of 48 miles in 42 minutes. In those days the engines were not as powerful as now. The speed was, therefore, remarkable. Many engineers have since tried to lower that record, but they have so far failed, and it is likely that John Merrin's feat will remain a record for many years to come. In religion Mr. Merrin was an Anglican: a member of St. George's Cathedral, and in politics a Conservative. He was an old time Masonic member. In 1857 he married Ann Dunning, of Kingston, who survives, together with the following children: James, of London; Mrs. V. Wensley, of St. Thomas; Mrs. T. H. Marshall, of Belleville; Mrs. J. Kemp, of Kingston; Misses Cassie, Hannah and Carrie, at home. Mr. Merrin was a quiet man and highly esteemed. On one occasion he was presented with a medal by the G. T. Railway mechanical superintendent, Mr. Eaton, in recognition of his careful and faithful service to the company.

Bungalows.

Bungalows may be built of stud walls on a brick foundation, covered externally, either with tiles, weatherboarding creosoted or stained and varnished, with rough cast or half timbered work. Inside the walls should be plastered.

Pingyang.

Pingyang, in northern Korea, was the first "literary center" in the Peninsular Kingdom. Its chief author was an ancestor of Confucius named Kishi, who, gathering up his writing materials and leaving China in 1122 B. C., emigrated eastward into Korean regions. His name is greatly venerated, and many tablets still exist in his honor in the northern parts of Korea.

There is nothing more pleasing than praise if it is honest and you believe you have earned it.

MAY BE CAUSE CELEBRE

POSSIBILITY OF ANOTHER BECK CASE IS AGITATING ENGLAND.

Son of Church of England Clergyman Undergoing a Term of Imprisonment For Mutilating a Horse Who May Be Innocent—Parliament May Order a Searching Investigation—The Evidence On Which He Was Convicted.

England is at present agitated over the possibility of another Beck case, the victim being George Edalji, at present serving a term of imprisonment for mutilating a horse. Our readers will remember the case of Adolph Beck, the Norwegian, who was twice unjustly condemned on charges of theft, and whose innocence was finally demonstrated in a miraculous manner. Beck's wrongs created a tremendous sensation, and English public opinion regarded him as a martyr of the Dreyfus type. It is fortunate, indeed, as The Spectator says, that the people of England become so much in earnest whenever they suspect that a wrong has been done a private citizen, however obscure. It is now certain that when Parliament meets a thorough investigation of the Edalji case will be demanded, if not ordered, by the Government.

The Anonymous Libeler.

Edalji is the son of Rev. S. Edalji, a Church of England clergyman of Parsee origin, and was born in 1876. In 1888 a number of threatening letters were received at the vicarage, and their author was proved to be a dismissed servant girl who was prosecuted. Four years later the Edaljis were again the victims of anonymous libels circulated in the village. These letters continued to be written till 1895, when they ceased, but not before the local Staffordshire papers had printed a forged letter of apology, admitting the authorship of the letters, signed by George Edalji and Frederick Brooks. In 1903 there was another outburst of scurrilous letters. It does not appear, however, that the same person wrote all the letters, and it seems clear that Edalji could not have been the author of them all, if, indeed, he wrote any of them, which he has steadfastly denied.

Mutilating Cattle.

On Feb. 2, 1903, took place the first of a series of hideous outrages on cattle, that eventually led to the young man's arrest and imprisonment. Before Aug. 17 six instances of mutilated horses and cattle occurred in the neighborhood, and on Aug. 18 George Edalji was arrested, apparently because his name had appeared so often in the anonymous letters that were in full blast about that time. In pressing the charge the police appear to have tried two or three lines of prosecution before settling down to their theory. They finally tried to prove that the crime was committed by the prisoner between the hours of 11 o'clock on the night of the 17th and 6.20 the next morning. The prisoner's father swore that his son went to bed shortly after 7 o'clock, and did not leave his room until 12 hours later. They slept in the same room, and Edalji, jr., always locked the door.

The Evidence For the Crown.

The police produced a coat belonging to the prisoner, which was damp, and on the cuff of which were bloodstains, proved by a medical expert to belong to some mammalian animal. The prisoner's trousers and boots were also shown to have been muddy, and the latter fitted exactly into tracks found in the field with the wounded pony. One of Edalji's razors was wet, and had evidently been recently used. Twenty-nine horsehairs were picked off Edalji's clothing. This was the evidence for the prosecution, with some expert testimony to show that the prisoner had written a threatening letter to the police. Edalji was convicted, and sentenced to seven years' imprisonment. He was in jail awaiting trial when another outrage occurred, with a horse as victim, and for six months thereafter horses and cattle were found wounded. Finally a man named Farrington was arrested and convicted. He was sentenced to three years' imprisonment. Edalji served three years and was released.

For the Defence.

At the trial and since some facts have been brought out that point to Edalji's innocence. In the first place he was under surveillance for some time previous to his arrest, and the vicarage was watched the night of the pony outrage. He was not seen to go out. It is obvious, however, that the watch was not very strict, for the field was also watched in the same way, but the pony was wounded nevertheless. Edalji suffers from astigmatic myopia, and without glasses can see only a few yards, and as it is a considerable distance from the vicarage to the field, it would certainly have been extremely difficult for him to make his way there at night. As regards the damp coat, if it was worn that night, it would have been more than damp, for the rain fell heavily. But if the coat was damp, why were not the bloodstains also damp? As a matter of fact, they were dry, and could only be recognized by careful analysis.

The Hairs on the Coat.

The mud on boots and trousers is explained by a walk Edalji took early in the evening. But the most important contention of Edalji's friends is that the coat was examined by the police and not a hair found on it until 12 hours later. Then the police had also in their possession a piece of the dead pony's skin, and the suggestion is that the hairs got on the coat while both were in the hands of the police. Edalji's case was taken up by Henry Labouchere, in Truth, and latterly by Sir A. C. Conan Doyle, in The Telegraph. Their presentation of the facts given above was so telling that the conviction grew that an innocent man had been punished. It has been suggested that the Home Office has been actuated by personal bias in the case, and since the Beck case this branch of the civil service has been none too popular.

A Deadly Enemy.

It seems more probable, however, that if any animus was shown it was at the prosecution. Edalji seems to have been unpopular, and one can imagine that a young man of Parsee descent, whose physical infirmity made it impossible for him to go in for sports, would be coldly received in certain English districts. Moreover, his connection, however innocent, with scurrilous letters would not improve his position. Edalji is apparently the victim of some deadly enemy of a type more common in fiction than in real life.

SERPENT POISON.

The Venom of the Cobra Is Deadly Almost Beyond Belief.

It was in the autumn of 1891 that Calmette, while acting as director of the Bacteriological Institute of Saigon, Cochin China, first commenced his experiments on the neutralization of serpent venom in the animal system. He had exceptional opportunities in the matter of serpent venom wherewith to carry out his investigations, inasmuch as a band of cobras had recently attacked a village in the vicinity of Baclieu, and by order of the governor of the district no fewer than ninety specimens of the terrible Naja tripudians, or cobra de capello, were forwarded in a barrel to the Institute.

Forty of the reptiles arrived alive, and several were at once sacrificed to secure their venom glands. Each gland, resembling both in size and shape a shelled almond, contains about thirty drops of venom, and in this transparent limpid liquor is embodied a toxin of extraordinary strength. As is well known, this cobra is the most dreaded of all serpents, and it is widely distributed over India, Burma, Sumatra, Java, Malacca and Cochin China. Until Calmette, however, set to work to systematically study the nature of this reptile's venom but little precise or reliable information had been obtained as to its character. It was, of course, necessary in the first instance to ascertain, within as narrow a limit as possible, the exact degree of toxic power inherent in the venom and to determine if possible the precise dose lethal in respect of each variety of animal experimented upon.

A correct calculation of the quantity of venom required in every case was, however, found to be quite impossible, for so virulent is the poison that a single drop of an emulsion produced by pounding up eight glands in 300 grams of distilled water is sufficient, when introduced into the vein of a rabbit's ear, to kill it in five minutes. All the mammals to which Calmette administered this cobra venom, such as monkeys, dogs, rabbits, guinea pigs and rats, succumbed more or less quickly, according to the size of the dose.—Westminster Gazette.

Andirons.

In regard to andirons, a writer in The Connoisseur points out the curious fact that the older specimens rarely come in pairs, but are of different heights and sizes. It was the custom in the middle ages, it seems, to make them uneven so as to facilitate the moving and raising of the huge blocks employed for firewood. He continues: In the middle ages they were also planned to hold a splint, and it was not until the late sixteenth century that they were much ornamented. According to Viollet le Duc, since the most remote ages, from Etruscan times down to the Romans, such andirons were made of iron. Vasari speaks of andirons made with "meraviglioso magistero" for the captains of the Arte delle Seta, but I have not found much ornamentation upon them as early as he says. I have a theory of my own, which is contrary to that of Viollet le Duc. In England andirons are called fire dogs, and in the Bargello there is a splendid specimen made in the form of crouching hounds. I hold that the andirons were in the first instance made in the shape of animals lying at rest, shaped of clay or stone, and it was much later that they were made of iron, when they often ended in animals' heads, most often in that of dogs.

The Field Marshal's Mistake.

In The Manchester Guardian G. W. E. Russell tells, or re-tells, this good Wellington story. Mrs. Loudon was an accomplished lady, who wrote not only on floriculture, but on arboriculture and landscape gardening, and illustrated what she wrote. In one of her works she desired to insert a sketch of the "Waterloo Beeches" at Strathfieldsaye—a picturesque clump planted to commemorate British deliverance from the Corsican tyrant. Accordingly, she wrote to the Duke of Wellington requesting leave to sketch the beeches, and signed herself, in her usual form, "J. Loudon." The duke, who, in spite of extreme age and with perceptions not quite so clear as they once were, still attended to his own correspondence, replied as follows: "F. M. the Duke of Wellington presents his compliments to the Bishop of London. The bishop is quite at liberty to make a sketch of the breeches which the duke wore at Waterloo, if they can be found. But the duke is not aware that they differed in any way from the breeches which he generally wears."

"Put Into a Book."

Thomas Mitton was Dickens' solicitor as well as his schoolfellow and used to say that he was the only one of all of "Charlie's" friends whom the novelist had never "put into a book." Mitton's hearers smiled inwardly, because they recognized obvious pieces of Mitton in several of the novels, the most conspicuous fragments being in Wemmick ("Great Expectations") and Tappertit ("Barnaby Rudge"). Not much in common, it may be said, between these two eccentrics. Nevertheless, life being more various and more inconsistent than fiction, there he was visibly. Dickens was greatly and long attached to him, and it was in a letter to the lawyer that he described most admirably the frightful railway accident from which he escaped physically unhurt, but gravely shaken in nerve.—London Chronicle.

BEING A PEACEMAKER.

I tried to part two fighting dogs,
The cause of peace to beg;
But while one chewed my coat tails up,
The other ate my leg.

A fracas matrimonial,
I undertook to stop,
The lady tried to scratch my eyes,
The husband called a cop.

Don't think I grudge him his renown,
Nor bile turn green my eyes,
Because the President for less
Received the Nobel prize.

But just the same, for future use,
This motto I have picked:
Before you interfere be sure
The parties both are licked.

Some notion of the predicament a great city would be in if it had to haul its supply of water, as country people do when the well runs dry, may be gained from the statement made recently by a London engineer that one day's supply of water for the metropolis would fill nearly 800 miles of ordinary railway tracks. That is to say, it would be necessary to run a half-mile train every minute through the 24 hours to keep up with the demand.

Although Great Britain is economizing on her naval expenditures, she has not changed her old policy that her navy should be equal to the navies of any two of the great powers. This statement was made in the House of Commons on Tuesday by the Parliamentary Secretary of the Admiralty, Mr. Robertson who showed that during the last ten years Great Britain had added 1,122,205 tons to her navy, while Russia, France and Germany together had added only 1,108 280 tons And Great Britain will have six new powerful warships ready in two years. Britain will continue to rule the waves.

Trail to Great Slave Lake.

The plans of the Mounted Police for the present season include opening a route of winter communication from the head of Lake Winnipeg to Fort Churchill on Hudson Bay, a distance of a little less than 500 miles. When the police are firmly established on the bay and get a post planted at what is known as Baker Lake it is intended to open a trail across the barren lands that separate Chesterfield Inlet from Great Slave Lake. This is a route that very few white men have yet traversed. The opening of a trail, however, and building of a few huts thereon will no doubt be followed by exploration to ascertain what it contains. There is mineral wealth still further north, and it is hard to say what metals these remote regions may not possess.

HER DAY OF FREEDOM.

By ROSALIE DAVIS.

Copyright, 1906, by Homer Sprague.

Grace Cramer received the news of her aunt's trifling illness with outward manifestations of regret and sympathy, but an inward feeling of exultation which she realized was, to say the least, ungrateful. Aunt Felice had been a patient, untiring, uncomplaining chaperon for one long week.

"Tell Mrs. Cramer I hope she will be feeling very much better when I come back from a drive. Is there anything I could bring her—violets or perhaps roses?"

"Madam cannot endure perfume of any sort when she has one of these attacks, but I shall tell her of your kind thoughtfulness," said the precise, black gowned maid, who had been in Mrs. Cramer's service for fifteen years.

Well trained and capable was this maid, but it never dawned upon her that she should personally see that Mrs. Cramer's order for the carriage was executed. Certainly this sturdy young woman from the west, only daughter of Mrs. Cramer's only brother, looked as if she were quite capable of giving her own orders.

And so it happened that the butler, not without some misgivings, held open the big walnut and bronze doors for Grace to pass out half an hour later and watched her walk briskly down the avenue.

At Thirty-fourth street she paused uncertainly. There were several points of interest she really wanted to see before returning home—the statue of Liberty, the Metropolitan Museum of Art and Grant's tomb. Of course New Yorkers were always bored with such things, but Grace was from the west and frankly interested in sightseeing. And such a morning as it was for sightseeing!

In front of the Waldorf-Astoria stood a line of hansoms. With deliberate steps and keen glances she turned her feet in their direction. The cabbies looked at her expectantly—sharp featured English drivers, heavy jowled and red eyed Irish drivers, a couple who looked as if they had sprung from the ghetto and one who caught and held her glance, smooth and boyish of face, smart and well groomed of coat and hat. She stopped and looked up into his face, shielding her eyes with her long flat purse.

"How much?"

"Where, miss?" said the driver courteously.

"Oh, I don't know just where—by the hour, I guess."

"One-fifty for the first hour, a dollar an hour after that."

"All right. And first we'll go to the museum in the park."

He touched the front of his hat with his gloved fingers, and some rude young men lounging near the carriage starter's booth laughed. Grace started. Perhaps she had better not. Then she glanced up at the young man on the box. His gloved fingers were still against his hat, the doors were invitingly open, and, though his face was quite grave, his eyes danced in a fashion very much in accordance with her own joy in being free from surveillance for a whole day.

She sprang into the hansom, and the doors clattered shut.

"How silly to be afraid!" she murmured. "Why, at home I go everywhere alone—and he is such a nice looking Irish boy."

"The nice looking Irish boy," gathering up his reins, turned his eyes on the group of rude laughing youths near the starter's booth, and in that look was a curious mingling of triumph and reproach.

They bowled through the park and drew up with a flourish in front of the museum. Grace sprang out.

"Oh, it is so much larger than I expected," she said, turning to the driver in frank surprise, not untinged with appeal. "I had no idea there was so much of it. You don't suppose I can begin to see it in half an hour or even an hour?"

The young man leaned respectfully from the box.

"Indeed you can't, miss. I've been here nearly every Sunday for the past three months, and I don't feel as if I'd seen the half of it yet."

"Oh, then you don't work on Sundays?"

The cabby flushed.

"After 6, miss. There's not much doing here on Sundays till dinner time."

"Do they have guides?" she said, waving her hand toward the museum.

"No, miss. But you can buy a catalogue"—

"And spend all my time trying to figure out the catalogue. Goodness, everything is so big in New York! It appalls me." She took a step forward, then turned.

"I don't suppose—would you mind—if you could get some one to hold the horse—could you take me through? It would save so much time if you know the building, and then maybe I could see Grant's tomb too."

The young Irishman swung around on the box. Yes; there, a few rods away, was a policeman. He drove toward the officer, held a whispered conversation and in a few moments returned on foot, leaving the horse in care of a bright looking boy, with the sympathetic policeman in higher authority.

"You'll want to see the Vanderbilt loan collection, a few of the biggest and finest pictures and the Morgan jewels," he said. But they saw much more, and it was fully an hour and a half before they emerged from the museum.

"It isn't hard to see that you have spent your Sunday afternoons to good advantage," said the girl without a touch of patronage, and the young man looked at her gratefully.

"Once I thought I'd like to be a painter, but now"—

He signaled to the lad, who led up the horse.

"Ah," thought the girl as the doors closed in upon her, "probably has a poor mother and some little brothers and sisters to support."

At Grant's tomb he found another obliging youth to hold the horse, and he pointed out to her all the interesting features of the battle scarred relics in the crypt. He drove her out past Claremont and the viaduct, then lifted the window above her head and asked:

"Where next, miss?"

"Home, and I suppose you had better hurry. It is past lunchtime now. Fifth avenue."

The tiny window fell with a sharp click. The young man sat on the box so surprised that the girl in the hansom wondered why he had not obeyed her order to hurry. Then with a clatter they dashed down the drive.

"Three hours—that's three-fifty." She handed him a five dollar bill. "And please keep the rest for yourself. I've had such a beautiful time, and you showed me so much more than our own coachman could have done."

The young Irishman bent low to hand her some change.

"I beg pardon, miss, but I belong to an association, and members are not allowed to take more than a quarter for a tip. Now, if you happened to have a silver quarter, particularly a nice shiny quarter, I'd"—

Grace fingered the change in her long blue purse and triumphantly drew out a brand new quarter which glistened in the clear winter sunshine.

"I don't suppose I could have your hansom tomorrow if I"—

"I'm sorry, miss, but I don't know where I will be sent tomorrow. You see, we're posted at different points different days."

"Well, he is the most human thing I've met in this frosty old town," said the pretty westerner to herself as she touched the electric button.

The Ernest cotillon was at its height. Mrs. Cramer, quite recovered from her illness, watched in radiant triumph the success her husband's niece was scoring.

"Brimming over with personality, don't you know," murmured an old beau, nodding over Mrs. Cramer's shoulder at the lovely girl in her dancing frock of silver gauze. "Actually enjoying herself, isn't she?"

Just then to a rattling twostep half a dozen young men pranced into the room, clad in coaching coats and hats made of paper and carrying long whips, which they snapped as they circled round the great room.

"The horse show figure—how clever!" murmured Mrs. Cramer. "And I hear the favors are exquisite silver brooches and buckles pinned on blue ribbons."

Just then one of the dancers paused before her niece and raised his high paper hat. He was a smooth faced chap, with blue eyes that twinkled merrily into the astonished face of the girl.

"Why, I thought you were"—

"I was for one day," he said as he led the dazed girl into the mazes of the dance. "An election bet I had to settle, and you came along just in the nick of time."

"And you said that you wanted to be a painter."

"So I did," he maintained stoutly. "You'll at least admit I know something about art."

She nodded her head, but flung him a reproachful glance.

"Well, my father decided that I ought to help him build railroads instead; that's all."

"If you can drive spikes as straight as you drive a hansom"—

"It was rather a jolly morning, eh?" he said, with a chuckle. "My, but the boys were sore! They hoped I'd get some old girl on shopping bent, who would keep me outside the shops, where I'd meet everybody I knew, but you rescued me in that park drive."

He was handing her the dainty silver favor, and then he thrust his fingers into his vest pocket and drew out a quarter.

"That's a little the best favor that ever came my way. I am going to keep it"—

"Till you have another fare?"

He turned grave.

"As long as I live."

"I am going home tomorrow," she remarked irrelevantly.

"How odd! And I am going to Denver on business. Great luck, and I guess we've proved that we don't require a chaperon."

Bermuda the Onionless.

If you just go to Bermuda for the onions, you had better stay at home, because all the onions are exported. But if you can make up your mind to do without onions you will have a splendid time. In the first place, there are no railroads and—oh, blessed thought!—no trolleys on the islands. You can forget the hurry and the fret and rest tired nerves. You can bathe; you can sail on the wonderfully clear, still water within the rampart of coral; you can fish and look through water glasses thirty feet down on the teeming life under sea. The Bermuda boats are rigged with something which is almost a balloon jib and a leg-o'-mutton, or jib headed mainsail, and they are of deep draft. But they work pretty handily and will stand up and sail fast in rough water, so that you can take them out beyond the protected water without fear.—Travel Magazine.

Chronicles of Don Q.

BY K. AND HESKETH PRITCHARD.

(Copyright by Pearson Publishing Company.)

"I cannot perceive the advantage to me just now."

Don Q. continued gravely.

"Because I may on that account offer you my hospitality," he said, "in return for your parole. It is thus when one deals with equals. Last year I was deceived into offering hospitality to a merchant who sold dried fruits and flour. I assure you the man's manner, of breathing offended me so much that I had to rid myself of him before the arrival of his ransom. You will, therefore, comprehend my reasons for troubling you. And if you will now give me your parole we may have a pleasant time pending the arrangement of your affairs."

"I give it," answered del Monte, with a very present thought that death would soon free him from his word; "I foresee that I shall enjoy my visit to the sierra, senor, although I hope you will not be very severe in the matter of a ransom."

"It is unfortunately one of the exigencies of my position that I have my children to maintain!" Don Q. indicated the figures of Robledo and Gaspar in the aperture of the cave. "We must have our demands paid in full or—"

"Or?" repeated Don Luis.

"No, no," said the brigand, with a sympathetic geniality; "we will not spoil our first meeting with dismal considerations. I can recommend these cigarettes; you will find them passable."

"I must congratulate you on the discipline of your com—your men," Don Luis said, fingering a cigarette thoughtfully.

"Many others have complimented me also upon that; I assure you, senor, it always gratifies me."

But it must be owned that Don Luis del Monte from the moment he was brought into the presence of Don Q. began to like his errand less.

Nevertheless, he neglected no point that might assist him in his design; he observed, he bridled his natural insolence, he went cautiously. He quite understood that he was dealing with one who would strike before he spoke.

On a single occasion only he forgot his self-control for a moment. They were talking of former days, and Don Q. had been relating stories, with reserve indeed, but also with force and a fine power of detail.

He told of an incident of the bull ring in some town to which he gave no name.

"Can you not trust me with that most interesting name, senor?" asked del Monte, his sneer obscured by a smile.

"Do you wish to know the name I bore before I covered it with the title by which I am called to-day?" Don Q. looked at him with a significance his words did not contain.

"Yes, by your favor."

The brigand laughed very softly, but with an intensity of amusement that sent a chill of misgiving down del Monte's spine.

"But yes, senor—since we are friends," added he, almost nervously.

"True, I had forgotten that I can promise you shall know—some day."

The promise, however, failed to convey any distinct impression of pleasure to the governor's emissary.

At length the ransom arrived. Don Luis had by this time conceived his plot in detail. As soon as his captor actually held the ransom in possession the assassin determined to make away with him. Once rid of Don Q., he believed himself equal to dealing with the remainder of the band.

But, although he was watchful throughout the day, no opportunity occurred for using the poison. Don Q., even in his most morose and absorbed moments, always showed the unsleeping vigilance of a wild bird. The blinking gaze always opened upon del Monte if he stirred, and, though time after time his hand fell upon the phial of poison in his pocket, he never found the few minutes' grace to do the deed.

By night this failure began to work upon his nerves. Without, only the cold scent of the wind, and the red-cored fires that burned below in the darkness of the glen; within, that terrible companion, whose bleared eyes never seemed to close.

But at length the chance came of itself when a robber, hoarse and diffident, appeared in the mouth of the cave, and Don Q. went out to him, leaving del Monte alone.

With a rapid movement he unstoppered the bottle and poured its contents liberally into the brigand's wine. Then he sank back with a great sigh. The tenson was broken; Don Q. was practically dead.

Presently Don Q. came back and resumed his seat opposite.

"Senor," he said, "in the old days it used to be the custom here in the sierra for guest and host to exchange glasses. Let us follow the custom and do so now."

He filled his glass with the poisoned wine and passed it over to Don Luis, who accepted it with a bow. Then, Don Luis, pouring out half the wine into his own glass, handed that in exchange to Don Q.

"We will drink to our friendship and mutual prosperity, senor," said he, using the words heartily.

"To the first drinker be the best wish," quoted Don Q., with much urbanity. "Drink, then, my friend; I do not grudge you a better fortune, alas, than mine."

"But no, senor," declared Don Luis gallantly; "then I must urge that your need is greater than mine. Drink, and may all befall as one would desire!"

How long this pretended struggle of generosity might have been maintained it is impossible to tell had not the chief brought the scene to an end. He would take no refusal, while the other desperately declined.

"why do you not drink?" cried the brigand. "I do not poison my guests!"

But a saving thought had by this time come to Don Luis' help.

"They call this the parting cup, senor," he replied; "therefore I will not drink it with you. You are alone here; you need a gentleman whom you can trust. If you want a lieutenant, why, you see before you a man who has dealt with the difficulties of life and whose courage needs no testing. I have a liking for you, senor; let me keep you company up here in the sierra!"

Don Q. seemed to pause for consideration.

"Then it shall be as you say," he said at last; "you shall keep me company up here in the sierra—eternal company! I may follow five years hence or to-morrow, but you—go to-night!"

Don Q. was more courteous, more soft-spoken than ever, and del Monte stared at him. Then he cleared his throat, for something rose in it that choked him.

"I do not think I quite take your meaning," he said.

"It is plain, nevertheless, Luis del Monte. What passed between you and that gross fool Felipe Majada on the balcony at Malaga? What errand brought you into the mountains but that which is held together by a few drops of poison at the one end and two thousand dollars at the other? I know it all! And if I have sinned against heaven my punishment has come to me now—that the hand of your mother's son should be raised to seek my life."

"Senor, hear me!"

But rough fingers were clapped upon his mouth, and in a moment he was pinioned at the door of the cave.

The plan was painted in upon the darkness. The picturesque ladrones, yellow handkerchiefs tied across their brows, were playing cards beside the fires. Behind them rose the rocky walls of the valley.

When Don Q. spoke again he delivered sentence in cold tones.

"I was at some trouble," he said, "to allow you time enough to poison my wine. You did so. And now it still wants five minutes to midnight, and at 7 and 9 in the morning two things are going to happen. They both concern you intimately. Can you guess? At 9 the priests of San Pedro, the little church you passed on your way here, will begin to sing masses for a soul. Yours. Don Luis! At 7 you will begin to die. If you have not completed the operation by 9 o'clock, why you will, of course, lose some of the good the kind fathers are trying to do for you!"

HOW DON Q'S SWORD WAS DRAWN FOR THE QUEEN.

After the death of Don Luis del Monte no event of great import occurred for a long period in the sierra. Certain captures were indeed made, and certain persons of small consequence were held to ransom during those weary months of monotony, for in the course of his long and interesting career as a chief of sequestradores, brigands who hold to ransom, Don Q. had had dealings with many sorts and conditions of men. Persons of divers callings had passed through his hands—sportsmen, politicians, merchants, a doctor, a couple of English M. P.'s, a high-church parson of the same nationality, the German Count von Squeelalotte, an American newspaper proprietor and many adventurers. But when his men, patrolling the lower passes, lassoed Garth Lalor, they added to Don Q.'s list a gentleman of a profession with which he had never before come in contact.

Garth Lalor was nearer 20 than he cared to own, full of the irrepressible sap of youth, and of a racial blend that made it difficult for him to take things seriously.

Without much delay Don Q. sent for him. Lalor was distinctly stirred by the romance of the situation, for the brigand was a man with an ominous record, and the captive looked with a good deal of curiosity at the fragile figure muffled in a cloak, that crouched beside the great fire, spreading bloodless hands to the blaze. Was this person the fierce-hearted and terrible character they spoke of in the plains? As usual a wide soft brim of felt hid his features, and he seemed unaware of the entrance of the party, until Lalor stepped suddenly up beside him to the fireside.

"Good morning senor. It is precious cold," he said.

His two guards sprang forward at the word and thrust him back roughly. Don Q. raised his head and looked full at this unusual prisoner.

"Excuse my taking off my hat, senor," the chief spoke at last in smooth, derisive tones, "but, as you say it is cold. I regret that your visit to us should be made in such unpleasant weather. Still we welcome you for we have been in danger of suffering from dulness lately, and I foresee both pleasure and profit from your society."

Garth Lalor was a very adaptable young man. "That's right," he said good-humoredly.

At a sign from Don Q. the guards retired to the door of the cave.

"Pray be seated, senor," he went on. "I perceive that you are English. One forgives much to the English."

"Sorry," said Lalor, "if I've done anything wrong." Don Q.'s face cleared.

"I feel quite sure we shall enjoy each other's society while you remain with me," he remarked urbanely. "Let us at once get over the disagreeables of business, and then, when we understand the position, we can dismiss all sordid considerations from our minds—for the present. But first I must ask you to reply to a few questions."

Lalor nodded.

"Quite at your service, senor. I hope I'll turn out satisfactory."

The chief looked him over. Garth Lalor was a strong-built, clean-limbed young fellow rather over the middle height, with marked features and sleepily gray eyes.

"I trust so," replied Don Q., with some emphasis. "Senor, you puzzle me. To what profession do you belong? You have the fingers of a man of practical mind and the eyes of a dreamer."

Lalor smiled. The old pleasant smile was by no means lost on the chief.

"Well, if I had to sign a census paper I should write myself novelist or anyhow, author."

To his surprise Don Q. showed symptoms of pleased excitement.

"How interesting! I have never before in the course of my career had the good fortune to meet one of your calling. But of that later. We must, perforce, deal first with the little matter of your ransom."

"Ransom?" ejaculated Garth Lalor, and he broke into a cheerless fit of laughter. Don Q. looked at him in surprise.

"You are amused, senor. May I be permitted to share your amusement?"

"By all means, such as it," said the lad. "You spoke of hoping for a ransom. The idea tickled me—that is all."

The brigand's livid eyelids flickered ominously.

"I still fail to see the point of the joke," he remarked.

"All my possessions are before you. The clothes I stand up in, £5 in English money and half a pocketful of the coin of the country, of which the delicacy of your followers permitted them to relieve me," replied Lalor, unable for the life of him to avoid imitating the chief's elaborate manner of speech.

The brigand waved his emaciated yellow hand airily.

"Your relations—they must cherish you! I can well understand it! Then there is your government, rich as a dream, and pitiful. I have heard of a public subscription—for a popular author thousands could be raised. Is it not so?"

"I dare say it is." Lalor's lips took an ironical curve. "But, you see, unluckily I am not a popular author, only an unknown one—yet. Ingham, the consul, warned me before I started. They have had some experience of ransoms before. Anyhow, Ingham told me plainly they were tired of paying them, and that I must take my chance. As for relations, I haven't one in the world who would give sixpence for me! And now you know how we stand."

"But this is terribly sad," exclaimed Don Q. softly. "I hope you have misjudged your relations and friends?" (But Lalor shook his head.) "It is, alas! nearly always so. I rarely take a fancy to one of our captives, but whenever I do so, it almost inevitably turns out to be one who fails with his ransom. I assure you, senor, this fact forms one of the severest trials of my lot."

Don Q.'s face, peaked and sunken like that of the bird he resembled, was inclined courteously towards his prisoner.

"I will do all I can for you, Senor Lalor," he said, after a short pause. "I will name but a little ransom—only $2,000. I trust this can be raised—for your sake?"

Garth shook his head. "You won't get it. I'm not worth anything to anybody except myself. What are you going to do with me?"

"Alternatives are usually deplorable but we will wait for 15 days until you have an answer from your consul," said the chief.

"But the alternative?"

Don Q. sighed. "Alas, senor, you are so young to die."

Lalor was conscious of feeling very young, and very human. The strong life in his veins chilled for the moment, but when he spoke his voice was as casual as before.

"What good will my death be to you?"

"My dear senor"—there was regret in the soft sibilant tones that made the lad shudder involuntarily—"it is business. I have a terrible reputation to maintain. You must be aware of the enormous value of such a reputation to one of my profession."

"I see your point of view," Lalor said judicially; then he laughed again.

Don Q. regarded him with increasing interest. This young man was certainly of a new type. Lalor read the question in his eyes.

"Do you know," he said, "before I heard the alternative you have so delicately alluded to, I was congratulating myself on having fallen into your hands?"

He smiled his quaint smile. "It's a trifle hard after spending a couple of years in collecting rejection forms that the first really good thing to come in my way should turn out so crookedly."

"You traveled to get local color?" inquired Don Q.

"Well, you see"—Lalor looked oddly shy—"I'm not old. If a fellow hasn't age he has to get experience. Don't you think so?"

The chief felt his heart quite warm to this ingenuous Britisher.

"I know an author," he began, "who for years has seldom left his own hearthstone, yet his transcriptions of humanity are so original, so vitally true, that the world will be shaken with a new knowledge of itself when he publishes them. He has had opportunities of seeing the soul of man naked—"

Lalor pushed back his chair involuntarily. His imagination had divined the truth.

"It's yourself!" he cried, while the thought flashed through him—what sights had not those livid-lidded eyes looked upon?

"You are right. I have occupied my odd moments in compiling an autobiograph which will tend to set me right in the eyes of those who malign me in the plains. It will not be a dull book."

"They do give you a villainous character down there," admitted Lalor.

"Well, for reasons which I have already mentioned to you, I am sometimes forced to adopt regrettable alternatives—" The chief stopped and looked resentfully at the door, where one of his men stood holding a letter.

The daylight had now grown stronger, and Don Q. went to the terrace outside the cave-mouth to read the communication. An odd sound made Lalor look up. The chief stood in the centre of the cave, shaken visibly by some fierce emotion.

"You have been to Malaga?" he asked abruptly. "Who was the chief guest at your hotel?"

"Let me see," Lalor considered. "A fellow from South America, calling himself Da Costa. He seemed to have any amount of money."

"That is the animal who has permitted himself to insult me. Da Costa!" The chief grinned venomously. "You will know him as the Comte de Dieppe, or as he loves to call himself royally amongst us Spaniards, Gen Don Basilio."

"What?—the Carlist general?"

"Yes. Here is a man who writes asking me to become a rebel, who offers me a free pardon as the price of my honor! Corpse of a scullion! He would overthrow a dynasty! He forgets that between Queen Christina and her enemies lies the sword of Don Q.!"

"You take the side of the Queen Regent?" asked Lalor in some surprise.

"I remember the court of Spain as it was. I am proud of the court of Spain as it is! There are not many good women in the world, Senor Lalor, you will learn that for yourself some day; let us defend and admire those whom we know. This is a moment when all true subjects of Queen Christina should loosen their knives in their belts. It is a mother defending her fatherless child against the plots of powerful and subtle enemies. Well, I have 70 men at her service!"

"Were it not for my misfortune as regards my lack of ransom, you might have 71," exclaimed Lalor, a little carried away.

"Senor, are you willing to risk your life for the queen of Spain?"

Lalor's only reply was his expressive smile.

"The queen is already on her way to Malaga, where she is to make a progress through the streets on the 15th. Don Basilio's presence means that some infamous plot against her is being prepared. You have heard of this man?"

"He's pretty notorious."

"You may take my word for it, senor, he is even worse than the world believes him to be.

"It is at the man himself that I must strike!" The chief paused and laid a slim yellow forefinger on Lalor's sleeve. "Are you willing, senor, to do a great service to the queen, and thereby to cause me to remit your ransom?"

"I am willing without the remitting of the ransom, senor."

"Corpse of a scullion!" exclaimed Don Q. "I see our way into this man's presence!"

"Our way?"

"Yes, we two—alone!" The chief bent forward and whispered for some time into Lalor's ear, breaking off at intervals to give way to terrible sibilant paroxysms of laughter.

As the young man listened, his face lighted up. Here was adventure undefiled.

Don Basilio's plot is still in the egg—we must crack the shell a little prematurely," added Don Q. aloud in his usual soft tones. "I foresee that Fate ordains you to hold a hand in a fine game. Should I be forced to kill you later, you will at least have lived to some small purpose."

The bleak evening had fallen and the lights of La Bien Venida at Malaga were twinkling out upon the chilling air, when a hooded carriage drove into the courtyard of the hotel. From it Lalor descended and, standing upon the marble step before the lofty main door, carefully assisted an elderly man to get out of the vehicle. This latter was a very fragile and thin personage, attired in the severe costume of a bishop of the English church. Under his great coat could be seen his apron and puny gaitered legs, but between the white tab at his throat and the curly-brimmed hat a beak of nose and a pair of fierce livid-lidded eyes peered forth to arrest the attention of any onlooker.

"Come, dear uncle," said Lalor, "we have arrived at the end of our long journey."

At this moment the innkeeper appeared to meet them.

"I am desolated, senores, but my house is full," he began.

"Te, te, te," cried the bishop irritably, "I am here, and here I stay. Do you know who I am? I am Rev. Dionysius Bellingham, lord bishop of Britain."

The landlord hesitated. English visitors paid well, and were not from the point of view of Don Basilio dangerous, still—

"I have but one room, excellency."

"So? Put two beds into it. Be quick!"

The landlord turned to Lalor.

"Senor," he said in a low voice, with a glance over his shoulder at the masterful bishop, "can you not persuade the noble lord to try another hotel? There are many in the city."

Lalor looked gloomily into the man's eyes.

"No power on earth could persuade him!" he replied with tragic conviction.

"Come, come, lead the way! lead the way!" piped the bishop peremptorily, in spite of his now halting Spanish.

The guest rooms of La Bien Venida are built round an inner patio, paved in marble, roofed in glass, and decorated with many lofty palms. Into this the bishop advanced with his mincing step, followed by the reluctant hotelkeeper. The sharp, sibilant tones were sufficiently raised to attract the attention of a tall and stout man who had been smoking a cigarette in one of the adjoining rooms. He came striding out.

"What is this noise about?" he asked angrily of the hotel keeper. "Who is this? Did I not order you to keep the place clear of your pestilential clients?"

In an instant the bishop had stepped up in front of him.

"Pardon, senor, my coat is black, but it can be pulled off! Also I can borrow a sword!"

The hotel keeper stood aghast that any one should thus address the great Gen. Don Basilio. That truculent personage seemed a good deal surprised himself.

"I do not fight with gnats!" he answered rudely. "Get rid of him," he added, turning away.

But the bishop's active figure was again before him.

"Yet I will not be brushed away," he cried with sibilant imperiousness, "more especially by an animal like you!"

Lalor, who was enjoying himself hugely, felt it was time to interfere.

"I think, my dear uncle," he said, laying his hand on the bishop's shoulder, "that presently you will deplore having permitted your prominent virtue of Christian patience to desert you."

"True, true, dear nephew," said the bishop sadly, pressing his thin finger upon his lips. "Your pardon, good senor," he went on. "My excuse must be that although I have strong hopes of ultimately succeeding. I have not yet entirely mortified the flesh. My fiery temper has ever been a thorn in my side." Then seeing that Don Basilio was about to vent his rage in words, he added—"Forget all I have said—I earnestly trust I have not frightened you!" The churchman's livid eyelids flickered up at Don Basilio's puffy face, and before that gentleman could recover his speech, he was trotting up the stairs, followed by his nephew and the hotel keeper.

Don Bailio stood still, uncertain how to act. Just then the bishop's piping tones floated down from above.

"Te, te, te! I will remain! I am ill. And if you refuse me entertainment I shall be obliged to appeal to the authorities. Send at once for—"

Don Basilio went back to his cigarette.

So it happened that the lord bishop of Britain, or the man who masqueraded under that name, planted his camp well within the lines of the enemy; in other words, obtained lodging at the headquarters of Don Basilio.

The latter worthy for a time did not know what to do. Should he insist on the departure of the peppery English cleric, or would it be wiser to let sleeping dogs lie? After half an hour's cogitation he decided that awkward as was the presence of the two strangers in the hotel it might be still more awkward to bring himself and his people into prominent notice at the moment.

So Don Basilio cursed the bishop in two languages, rated the hotel keeper and finally dispatched a little note of apology to the bishop of Britain, which caused the man who received it to shake it from his fingers with contempt.

"So you see, senor, after all no harm has come of taking my own part," he said to Lalor, "I knew my man. Had I allowed him to rough-ride over me he would, at that moment, have had us turned out of the hotel.

"Now, can you suggest a suitable illness for a bishop? I am about to go to bed for two days."

"Go to bed?"

"Yes, it is an essential part of my plan. And, indeed, happily so. Don Basilio is no doubt meditating whether he should leave the hotel. If I cross his path too often he may do so. That would be a misfortune, and ruin our hopes. But if I give out that I am very ill, he will simply indulge in pious prayers for my death, and thank the saints that my powers of interference have been providentially spoiled. I once had an English captive," he continued thoughtfully, "who developed chickenpox. Is that a disease adapted to the highest ranks of the princes of the English church?"

"Gout would be more dignified," suggested Lalor.

"Then gout it shall be. And tell them that I have no faith in the medical profession of this country, and that if a doctor presumes to enter my room I will cut off his ears."

"That would hardly be in keeping with your character," remonstrated the young man; "but if you will allow me I will say that we have telegraphed to the great gout specialist in London, Sir Charles Jenkinson, and that until he comes you will trust to your own knowledge rather than to local talent."

Don Q. looked up from the buckled shoe he was removing. "Excellent," he commented. "I foresee, Senor Lalor, that you will one day become a very great writer indeed."

Lalor carried out his part of the program, and everything fell out as Don Q. had foreseen.

"The queen enters Malaga this afternoon," observed Lalor, sitting down on the edge of the pallet he occupied in the bishop's room. "The royal progress through the streets takes place, as arranged, early to-morrow."

"Ah, then, we must act," replied Don Q., raising himself from his pillow. "This delay is very wearisome, senor. It has been in my mind to go down to desayuno, and pistol Don Basilio where he sat."

Lalor grinned appreciatively.

"I'm afraid you would have been disappointed, for Don Basilio always remains in his own room for desayuno, though he sometimes joins us at comida in the evening."

Don Q. was out of bed in a twinkling and wrapped in his dressing gown. He was already bandaging one foot with a towel before he spoke.

"It is midday," he said, "a waiter has brought my invalid soup. Every person in the hotel is at this moment engaged in devouring food. The time has come, dear nephew."

"What are you going to do?" asked Lalor.

"First we will concern ourselves with what you are to do," returned the chief serenely. "When you leave me you will descend and partake of desayuno, and do not forget, my dear nephew, to give evidence of anxiety at the increasing indisposition of your cherished uncle. I can no longer move—I—but you are gifted with an imagination; I can leave the matter in your hands. Afterward you will go toward the stables, and there you will find a ragged fellow assisting with the horses. I venture to believe you will recognize a black-eyed scoundrel you have seen before in the sierra. When you catch his eye, be so good as to place your forefinger of the left hand thus upon your chin."

"I understand," said Lalor. The affair was becoming engrossing once more. He waited eagerly for Don Q.'s next words.

"As for me, my dear senor," resumed the chief, "you tell me that Don Basilio has been good enough to inquire about my health. It is very well, for I am now about to pay him a visit to thank him."

Don Q. perched himself actively on Lalor's shoulders, and they passed out into the empty passages of the hotel on their way to the quarters of the Carlist leader.

Don Basilio sat alone at his meal, and was in the act of raising a glass of wine to his lips when Lalor, bearing his strange burden, paused in the doorway.

"That will do, dear nephew," piped the bishop; place me a chair by my good friend Don Basilio, and go at once to your breakfast."

"What does this mean—this unwarrantable intrusion?" shouted Don Basilio.

Don Q. raised his pallid claw-fingered hand in deprecation.

"Not at all, not at all, senor," Lalor heard him say as he closed the door upon the couple; "I have come to thank you for the kind inquiries you have been making after me, and to have a little talk with you."

Liverpool, March 11.—Liverpool and London cables are easier at 11c to 12¼c per lb., dressed weight; refrigerator beef is quoted at 9¼c to 9½c per lb.

Toronto Junction Live Stock.

Toronto Junction, March 11.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Stock Yards were 68 car loads, composed of 1396 cattle, 7 hogs, 99 sheep and 56 calves.

Exporters.

Prices ranged from $5 to $5.40 and one exceptionally prime load was reported by Maybee, Wilson and Hall as sold at $5.50 per cwt. The bulk of the shipping cattle sold at $5.15 to $5.30. There were a few loads of common light exporters reported under $5 per cwt., as will be seen by sales quoted. Bulls sold at $3.85 to $4.40.

Butchers.

The quality of butchers' cattle was generally not good, but prices for all classes were 15c to 25c higher than a week ago, owing entirely to the light delivery. Prime picked cattle, of which there were few sold at $4.85 to $5.25; loads of good, $4.50 to $4.75; medium, $4.30 to $4.45; mixed, $3.90 to $4.25; cows, $3.55 to $4.25.

Milch Cows.

A limited number, none of which could be classed as being of extra quality, sold at $30 to $53 each.

Veal Calves.

Trade was brisk for the best. Prices ranged from $3 to $7 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Export sheep sold at $4.75 to $5 per cwt.; yearling lambs, $6 to $7.50 per cwt.

Hogs.

H. P. Kennedy reports $6.75 for selects and $6.50 for lights and fats.

The Gunn Co. report paying about $6.60 to $6.65, f.o.b., at country points, which would mean at least $6.80 or $6.85 at Toronto.

Montreal Live Stock.

Montreal, March 11.—(Special.)—Cables from Liverpool and London on Canadian cattle came weaker and ⅛c per lb. lower than a week ago, at 11½c. The demand for ocean freight from St. John, N.B., is very limited, and agents find it difficult to let space to any port at 25s to 30s. Exports last week from St. John and Portland were 1898 cattle. At the Montreal Stock Yards' West End Market the receipts of live stock for the week ending March 9 were 4200 cattle, 1000 sheep and lambs, 2449 hogs and 1227 calves, while the supplies to-day for local consumption were 900 cattle, 25 sheep and lambs, 800 hogs and 275 calves. Owing to the fine, spring-like weather, there was a large attendance Sales of selected lots of hogs were made at $7.15 to $7.25 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars. There was no change in the condition of the market for sheep and lambs. Receipts continue very light, which indicates that there are few in the country ready to be marketed, for, if there were, present high prices would bring them out. The demand is keen from butchers for all the small lots coming forward, and there is also a good enquiry for export sheep, as the foreign markets are in good condition, but shippers find it impossible to secure sufficient to make up a shipment. Prices are very firm at 4½c to 5c for sheep, and at 6½c to 7c for lambs, per lb. Receipts of calves are steadily increasing, but the average quality of the same is very poor; in fact, a large percentage of them coming in are not fit for human food, they being too young, and it would pay farmers to keep them a few weeks before shipping, as such poor stock are only selling at $1.50 to $2; fair at $2.50 to $4, and good to choice at $5 to $8 each.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

East Buffalo, March 11.—Cattle—Receipts, 4000 head; active and strong; prime steers, $5.60 to $6; shipping, $5 to $5.70; butchers', $4.50 to $5.20; heifers, $3.50 to $5.25; cows, $3 to $4.65; bulls, $3.25 to $4.75; stock heifers, $2.75 to $3.25; stockers and feeders, $3.25 to $4.50; fresh cows and springers, steady, $20 to $55.

Veals—2000 head; active and 25c higher, $4.25 to $9.50.

Hogs—Receipts, 12,600 head; fairly active and a shade lower; heavy, mixed and yorkers, $7.40 to $7.45; pigs, $7.25 to $7.30; roughs, $6.50 to $6.65; stags, $4.25 to $5.25.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 17,800 head; active and higher; lambs, $5 to $8.20; yearlings, $6.75 to $7; wethers, $6 to $6.25; ewes, $4.75 to $5.50; sheep, mixed, $3 to $5.50.

New York Live Stock.

New York, March 11.—Beeves—Receipts, 4506; steers and bulls steady; fat cows steady; others slow. Steers, $4.90 to $6.25; bulls, $3.75 to $4.50; cows, $1.75 to $4.22½.

Calves—Receipts, 2170. Veals, 25c to 75c lower; barnyard calves weak. Several cars back, but will not be sold to-day. Veals, $5 to $9.25; general top price, $9; culls, $4 to $4.50; few barnyard calves, $3.37½ to $3.50.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 5491; sheep steady; lambs, 10c to 15c higher; sheep, $3.50 to $5.50; lambs, $7.62½ to $8.20; few choice, $8.25; culls, $6.

Hogs—Receipts, 10,224; market firm; state and Pennsylvania hogs, quoted at $7.00 to $7.75.

Chicago Live Stock.

Chicago, March 11.—Cattle—Receipts, 33,000; 10c lower; plain to best steers, $4.25 to $6.85; heifers, $2.65 to $5.25; cows, $3.25 to $5; bulls, $3.25 to $5.00; calves, $2.50 to $7.25; stockers and feeders, $3.50 to $5.25.

Hogs—Receipts, 32,000; 5c to 10c lower; choice heavy shippers, $7 to $7.05; light butchers, $7 to $7.02½; light mixed, $6.95 to $7; packing, $6.50 to $7; pigs, $4.50 to $6.80; bulk of sales, $6.95 to $7.

Sheep—Receipts, 18,000; 5c higher; sheep, $5 to $6.25; lambs, $7.25 to $7.55.

FARM AND FIRESIDE

Useful Hints Which Will be Appreciated by the Progressive Farmer and His Housekeeper.

EXPERIMENTS WITH FARM CROPS.

The members of the Ontario Agricultural and Experimental Union are pleased to state that for 1907 they are prepared to distribute into every Township of Ontario material for experiments with fodder crops, roots, grains, grasses, clovers, and fertilizers. About 2,000 varieties of farm crops have been tested in the Experimental Department of the Ontario Agricultural College, of Guelph, for at least five years in succession. These consist of varieties from nearly all parts of the world, some of which have done exceedingly well in the carefully conducted experiments at the College and are now being distributed free of charge for co-operative experiments throughout Ontario. The following is the list of co-operative experiments in agriculture for 1907:

No.	Experiments.	Plots.
1	Three varieties of Oats	3
2a	Three varieties of six-rowed barley	3
2b	Two varieties of two-rowed barley	2
3	Two varieties of hulless barley	2
4	Two varieties of Spring wheat	2
5	Two varieties of buckwheat	2
6	Two varieties of field peas	2
7	Emmer and Spelt	2
8	Two varieties of Soy, Soja, or Japanese beans	2
9	Three varieties of husking corn	3
10	Three varieties of mangels	3
11	Two varieties of Sugar beets for feeding purposes	2
12	Three varieties of Swedish turnips	3
13	Kohl Rabi and two varieties of fall turnips	3
14	Parsnips and two varieties of carrots	3
15	Three varieties of fodder or silage corn	3
16	Three varieties of millet	3
17	Three varieties of Sorghum	3
18	Grass peas and two varieties of vetches	3
19	Field cabbage and two varieties of rape	3
20	Three varieties of clover	3
21	Sainfoin, lucerne and Burnet	3
22	Five varieties of grasses	5
23	Three varieties of field beans	3
24	Three varieties of sweet corn	3
25	Fertilizers with potatoes	5
26	Fertilizers with Swedish turnips	6
27	Sowing mangels on the level and in drills	2
28a	Two varieties of early potatoes	2
28b	Two varieties of medium ripening potatoes	2
28c	Two varieties of late potatoes	2
29	Three grain mixtures for grain production	3
30	Three mixtures of grasses and clover, for hay	3

The sizes of each plot in each of the first twenty-seven experiments and in Nos. 29 and 30 is to be two rods long by one rod wide; and in No. 2, one rod square.

Each person in Ontario who wishes to join in the work may choose any ONE of the experiments for 1907, and apply for the same. The material will be furnished in the order in which the applications are received until the supply is exhausted. It might be well for each applicant to make a second choice, for fear the first could not be granted. All material will be furnished entirely free of charge to each applicant, and the produce will, of course, become the property of the person who conducts the experiment.

USE OF MANURE.

(By Prof. Voorhees, Director of New Jersey Agricultural Station.)

Manure is one of the most important and valuable assets of the farm. In it is contained part of the fertility that has been removed in crops, and in the form of manure may be returned to the soil for the use of future crops. It is to be expected that farmers and others would not agree as to the value of a given quantity of manure, because the returns derived from it are also influenced by kind of soil, kind of crop and the character of the season; hence manure will vary in its value, dependent upon these various conditions. The fact remains, however, that it is a valuable product, and that which has been learned in reference to its value as a source of plant food, the losses that may occur in handling, and the improvement that it gives to soils, in addition to supplying the essential constituent elements is of very great service.

Manures, like all vegetable organic materials, are subject to change, and changes generally result in a loss; however good, therefore, the management may be, there is likely to be some loss. For example, fermentation begins immediately the manure is dropped, and unless it is properly regulated losses of ammonia will occur, and it is important that means should be used to absorb this valuable product at the earliest possible moment and prevent its evaporation. It is for this reason that recommendations are made to use plaster and other "ammonia fixers" in the stables though the advantage of adding these materials is not confined to the fixing of ammonia, since it also results in improving sanitary conditions. It is recommended that where cattle and horses are stabled that at least one pound daily of land plaster or two pounds of acid phosphate be applied in the gutters for every three to five full-grown animals. It is also a well-known fact that manures lying in heaps are liable to loss because the tendency of the manure is to ferment, become hot, not only causing a loss of ammonia direct, but a reduced value of the nitrogen, because of the burning or "fire-fanging" of the manure. It is for this reason that many recommend that manure be applied to the land as rapidly as it is made, whenever it is convenient to do so. This is no doubt the best plan from the standpoint of securing the greatest return, and is in the long run the most satisfactory method of general farming. If the manure is thrown out in the open yard and subjected to a direct rainfall, as well as to the additional rainfall accumulated on roofs of buildings, and which pours into the yard, there is a loss not only of the nitrogen, but also considerable portions of phosphoric acid and potash.

Experiments have shown that manure subjected to this treatment for one hundred days will lose from 25 to 50 per cent. or more of all its fertilizer constituents, the amount depending somewhat upon the proportion of litter mixed with the manure. The smaller the quantity of litter the greater will be the loss. If the manure has been carted and spread upon the land immediately it is made the spreading will cause the manure to cool, and thus stop fermentation, beside the rainfall would carry the soluble constituents into the soil, where they are needed for the use of plants. It does not follow that even though these statements are true that farmers should not be careful as to how, when and where the applications are made. If applied on steep hillsides and upon frozen land in winter the loss is likely to be much greater than if applied upon reasonable level land and when it is not frozen. Nevertheless, even here the losses are not likely to be as great as if left in the open yard.

It must be remembered, too, that the value of farm manure is not measured entirely by its content of the fertilizing elements, nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash, which directly increase the yield of crops, but is also valuable because it contains vegetable matter which when applied to the soil improves its physical character, making it more absorbent, more retentive to moisture and heat, and increases the tendency to decay of soil substances because harboring more comfortably these organisms which assist in making inert plant food available. It is for this reason, too, that in general farming particularly it is much better to apply six or eight tons per acre over a large area than fifteen to twenty tons per acre over a small area, because beyond a certain point the indirect benefits derived from the application of vegetable matter are relatively less. In other words, by distributing the manure over a reasonably large area the indirect benefits of the organic matter in the manure are increased. It is also an important matter to have the manure distributed rather than thrown in large chunks or small heaps over the land, for by the latter method the benefits are uneven and irregular, many plants being overfed and others are underfed, and besides the indirect benefits are very materially reduced. In the case of market gardening or other lines of "intensive" practice, where the purpose is to force a rapid growth, as well as to improve the physical character of the soil, and encourage warmth in the early season, manures may be applied in the row, or in the hill, with very great advantage, as, for example, in the growing of sweet potatoes, white potatoes and other crops upon light soils, where it is desirable to concentrate the supplies of food, not only, but to provide a more favorable condition for the development of the crop. Under these conditions, too, if the crops are of high commercial value, the extra labor required in handling the manure, that is, in composting and reducing its bulk, while at the same time increasing the availability of the constituents, may be more profitable than to use the fresh or coarser products. Another instance of the fact that the values of manures are dependent upon the kind and character of crop grown, as well as the kind of soil. Farmers should also remember that all vegetable matter about the farm, such as straw, stalks, weeds and growths of all sorts, do contain in a marked degree the valuable characteristic organic matter, which, as has already been stated, is so important in improving both the physical character of both light and heavy soils, making the heavier ones more open and porous, and the lighter ones more compact and retentive. Hence, great care should be taken to gather up and use all of these various sources of supply. Many farmers allow their straw stacks to rot down, when if the straw was cut up, and used as an absorbent in the stables it would add materially to the value of the manures from this standpoint, as well as preventing losses which now occur.

Pudding Sauces.

Sauce for All.— Cream together a teacupful of sugar and a tablespoonful of butter; add a pint of boiling water and a teaspoonful of cornstarch dissolved in cold water, boil thoroughly and season with nutmeg. If this sauce be made without flavoring a tablespoonful of currant jelly mixed with the same quantity of hot water and poured over it just before serving will make it very palatable.

Favorite Sauce.—Beat together until very light one teacupful of powdered sugar with one egg and the yolk of a second; add a wineglass of wine heated very hot.

Maple Sauce—An agreeable sauce to serve with a steamed pudding is made by dissolving half a pint of maple sugar in a teacupful of water; add half a teacupful of butter mixed with one tablespoonful of flour; flavor to taste and boil.

Cider Sauce.—To one teacupful of sugar and half the quantity of butter creamed together, add two teacupfuls of boiling water and a tablespoonful of cornstarch dissolved in cold water; boil, and while boiling add half a teacupful of boiled cider with flavoring to taste.

Hard Sauce.— Beat together one teacupful of sugar and half a teacupful of butter; flavor to taste; form into a pyramid and shape to suit the fancy.

Soft Sauce—A teacupful of sugar with two tablespoonfuls of butter and the yolk of one egg. When beaten, stir them into a pint of boiling water on the fire. Keep stirring until it foams; then take up and serve.

A Few Don'ts.

Don't wear colors that swear at each other and set one's teeth on edge.

Don't use borax and rosewater without putting a little cold cream on the face afterward.

Don't dress your hair in the style when you know it makes you look like a fright.

Don't spend all your money on a hat when you need a new petticoat and shoes.

Don't forget to give the face a dash of cold water after giving it a warm scrub.

Don't forget to mend your gloves and stockings, keep your shoes nice and be tidy about the heels.

Don't spend all your money at the bargain counter buying remnants because they are cheap, unless you have use for them.

Don't invest in cheap jewelry, tawdry white boas or flimsy chiffon garniture. It is a delusion and a snare to women with slim purses.

Don't wear tight shoes unless you wish to look worn and haggard before the day is half done. There is no beautifier like comfortable shoes.

Don't always be looking for slights. Don't harbor old grudges. Don't distrust your friends. Don't look in the dark side of things, and, above all, don't forget to make every day the best of your life.

$1,600 MISSING.

Bank Messenger Has Disappeared and Cannot Be Found.

New York, March 12.—William O. Gillespie, a messenger of the National Park Bank of this city, has been missing since Tuesday, when $1,600 of the bank's funds also disappeared, it was officially stated by the bank officials yesterday in this announcement.

"William O. Gillespie, 25 years old, a messenger in the employ of the National Park Bank for about six months, failed to return last Tuesday afternoon, after making his customary collections. He had collected between $1,600 and $1,700 and no trace of him has been found."

Gillespie is said to be a native of Scotland, who came to the bank from Canada about six months ago. His duties were to make collections on notes and drafts sent in by the correspondents of the bank. He lived at a boarding-house on East 89th street.

Last Tuesday afternoon he is said to have gone to his rooms, where he was joined by another young man with whom he had been friendly. The two men left the house together and on the corner met two young women.

Later it was learned a party of four answering the description of Gillespie and his friends boarded a train for Buffalo at the Grand Central Station.

Agents of the bank are reported to have searched unsuccessfully for Gillespie in Buffalo and in Canadian cities.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Names For Queen Elizabeth.

Queen Elizabeth was called Good Queen Bess by her friends and Bloody Bess by her enemies. She was also designated the Maiden Queen, the Queen of Virgins, the Untamed Heifer, Fortune's Empress, the Glory of Her Sex, the Miracle of Time, Astraea, Oriana, the True Diana, Gloriana and other names respectful and the contrary.

Earring Shaped Lake.

The Pend d'Oreille lake, in Idaho, took its name from its shape, which resembles that of an earring.

Solitary Confinement.

Solitary confinement is calculated, doctors state, to produce melancholia, suicidal mania and loss of reason. Nine months of absolutely solitary confinement are almost certain to result in the mental ruin of the convict.

Solomon's Temple.

A gleaner of Biblical curios says that Solomon's famous temple was only 107 feet long, 36 feet wide and 54 feet in height.

Veronese's Big Painting.

Veronese loved to represent festive gatherings on a colossal scale. His "Marriage of Cana" is 30 feet long and 20 feet high and contains 130 figures. The most remarkable feature of the painting is the group of musicians in front around a table. Among this party Veronese represents Titian, Tintoretto, himself and other celebrated painters.

A Big Family.

Dennis Koorobee, who died in Ireland in the early part of 1852, had 48 children, 236 grandchildren and 944 great-grandchildren.

The Camel's Foot.

The camel's foot is a soft cushion peculiarly well adapted to the stones and gravel over which it is constantly walking. During a single journey through the Sahara horses have worn out three sets of shoes, while the camel's feet are not even sore.

The Roman Catacombs.

The Roman catacombs are 580 miles in extent, and it is estimated that from 6,000,000 to 15,000,000 dead are there interred.

Dice.

Dice are said by some to have had their origin in occult sources, but more reasonably they are ascribed to Palamedes of Greece B. C. 1244. Those exhumed at Thebes are identical with those used today, and the games played with them are the simplest and most widely known games of chance in the world.

Irish Bog Oak.

Irish bog oak is probably the best known example of workable wood dug from the ground. It is perfectly black and has good grain for carving.

To Prevent Bunions.

Easy shoes with wide soles and straight heels will be found the most effectual preventive of bunions on the feet. CROSS-EYES.

As soon as any child shows the least symptom of cross-eyes it should be taken to an eyesight specialist. This will apply if the child is only one year old. The parents should never be told to "wait and see if the child will outgrow it." The result of such neglect is that the child generally becomes blind in one eye, and after a few years of non-use the eye can never be used for sight again, even if it is partially straightened by an operation. Eyes thus operated on never mate well together. Exercises, for the two eyes when the child is young, combined with a careful correction by glasses, will generally straighten the eyes and save the sight of both. Children as young as two years have been fitted with complete success. We make a specialty of children's eyes. Consultation free.

New Gas Works Manager Appointed Last Night.

Mr. Thomas Gardner, Of St. Catharines, Is the Man--Was Formerly Manager For Mr. Pearson In This City--Auditors' Report Makes Situation Look Anything But Rosy--Good Deal Of Important Business Transacted At Last Night's Meeting Of the City Council.

At the regular Council meeting, held last evening, all the members excepting Ald. McCrodan were in attendance. Owing to some of the committees convening before the Council, it was 8.45 before the latter was called to order. The session was one of considerable length and much important business was transacted.

COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

From Police Magistrate Masson, requesting the Council to make some improvements to the police court room in the way of heating and ventilation; to instal a telephone, procure some necessary stationery and provide a room for witnesses.—Laid upon the table.

From the Ladies' Aid of St. Andrew's Church, inviting the Council to attend their meeting of the Council as it will be in 2000.—Received and filed.

From Dr Harper, reeve of Madoc village, stating that on Friday, the 15th inst., a conference would be held at Madoc with G. T. R. officials in reference to the extending of a railway line from the village to Eldorado He asked the City Council to send one or more delegates to the conference.—Laid on the table.

From the Hospital Board, asking the Council for the usual grant of $1,000 towards carrying on the work of the hospital.—Referred to the Executive committee.

A statement was presented showing that on December 31st there was but $411.95 due for water rates for the year.

Council went into committee of the whole on reports, etc., Ald. Butler in the chair.

COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE.

The accounts of the Gas committee were passed, as were also the following accounts:

A. W. Vermilyea & Son	$ 12.00
A. McFee	2.25
J. W. Walker	23.20
Bell Telephone Co.	51.00
D. Bleecker	9.00
Pay sheet, public works	118.45
Gas department	18.38
E. McGrath	7.50
Mail and Empire	1.29
C. C. Leavens	41.40
Mabel McIninch	5.00
E. T. Cherry	29.65
Peck & Wills	3.25
Waterworks pay sheet	30.80

A. N. Pringle estate	33.24
H. B. Hunt	2.00
J. Turner	6.00

THE GAS PROBLEM.

The committee presented the following report and recommendations:

"The Gas committee beg leave to place before you the auditors' report, and they desire to call your attention more especially to the following facts--

"In addition to the first debenture issued, viz., $50,000, there was a second lot of $15,000, also third lot of $25,000, making a total debenture of $90,000. In addition to this there is still due for city stock ($25,200) $1764, making a total indebtedness of $91,764. Of this amount there is still to our credit in the Bank of Montreal $16,381.57, which amount will be required to pay for the new gas holder already contracted for. There has been paid on this debenture debt $1759.10. According to this report you will note there is a revenue from Gas sales of $18088.61 and in addition to this there is a profit on fixtures, fittings, tar and coke (from which must be deducted all wages in connection with these items) of $2318.12 or a total of $20,406.73, from which we must deduct operating expenses of $16,797.75 leaving a difference of $3608.59, which would appear to be the profits for the year from the operations of the plant, provided all the outstanding accounts, which amount to $6356.82, are good. We believe, however, there will be a considerable amount of these accounts that will require to be written into bad debts. In addition to this we have had several large accounts for coal, etc., presented, which do not appear to have been taken into account in the expenses of 1906, which will materially reduce above profits. From above profits we are supposed to meet interest and debenture debt of $6447.19 which is certainly not a very bright prospect.

"We recommend that an expert Gas manager be appointed, and that the party be Mr. Thos. Gardner, at a salary of $1,100 per annum.

"We recommend that all accounts be rendered promptly on the first of each month and that the discount rule be enforced, and positively no discount be given after the 15th of said month, and that all persons not paying their accounts within one month after due have their gas turned off and immediate steps be taken for collection of said accounts.

"We recommend that as far as possible prepayment meters be used for all doubtful accounts:

"That the Gas office be moved to the City buildings, thus effecting a saving of nearly $200 a year;

"That the sale of fixtures and plumbing of houses be left in the hands of merchants and plumbers;

"That the works be put in a proper state of repair;

"That a daily record be kept of the gas made and materials used in making same."

THE CHAIRMAN'S REMARKS.

Ald. Green said it was no secret that the Gas department was in a peculiar and difficult position, and it seems to be doubtful even if the report presented shows the actual state of affairs. The Manager had resigned and the Committee had advertised for a new manager, with the result that Mr. Thos. Gardner had been agreed upon by the Committee. He was a practical man, and it was hoped that, under his management there would be better results in the future than in the past. Mr. Gardner had been strongly recommended by Mr Pearson, a former lessee of the Gas works.

Ald. Burrows was pleased at the explanation of the chairman, and was pleased that the Committee had recommended the engagement of Mr. Thos. Gardner as manager of the works. He was a man who was in every way capable of performing the duties devolving upon him.

The Mayor said the Committee had decided to secure a person who was thoroughly competent, and Mr. Gardner was such a man.

The Committee's report was adopted.

OTHER MATTERS.

The communication from the Police Magistrate was referred to a committee consisting of the Mayor, Ald. Ackerman, Green and Marsh.

A motion prevailed that Ald. Butler be delegated as the city's representative at the railway conference to be held at Madoc on Friday next.

The Clerk stated that on Monday next, at Ottawa, there will be a conference of municipalities in reference to railway matters, and it might possibly be well for the city to send a representative to that meeting, as other municipalities were doing so.

Upon a vote being taken it was decided not to send a delegate.

An account from the Trenton Electric Company, amounting to $243.44 was presented.

In answer to an enquiry Ald. Burrows said that the Trenton Electric Company had deducted $106.50 from their account for the month of February, owing to no lights being supplied.

A motion prevailed that the account be paid.

An account of $50, presented by Mr. W. J. Thomson for services alleged to have been rendered some two years ago, was referred back to the Gas Committee.

An account from the Downey Coal Company, amounting to $765.58, was presented. It was for coal for the Gas department for last year.

Ald. Green said the ex-Manager of the Gas department had stated that the coal was received, but there appeared to be some discrepancy in the price. This was only one of the many matters the Gas department was up against.

On motion the account was referred back to the Gas Committee to effect a settlement.

A recommendation prevailed that a contract be prepared with the Pittsburg Coal Company for 2500 tons of coal, at $2.53 per ton, at the bridge.

ENQUIRIES.

Ald. Marsh desired to know if it was a fact that at a recent special meeting of the Board of Trade there was objection taken to the C. P. R. and C. N. R. coming into Belleville by a certain route.

Mayor Sulman — Two members of the Board are adverse to the railways going by way of the water front.

Ald. Ackerman said he understood the matter was to be considered at a future meeting of the Board.

Ald. Marsh asked if it was a fact that there was a discrimination in passenger rates west of Toronto, as against the east.

Ald. Ackerman — "There is a small discrimination in that direction."

Ald. Ackerman asked if it was a fact that the Council chamber was for the use of other organizations besides the City Council. As chairman he desired to know.

The Mayor said the Board of Education, Board of Trade, Woman's Christian Association, and the Cheese Board had met in the chamber during the past few years.

Mayor Sulman wished to know if the Council was going to do anything in reference to the sewage matter.

There was no answer to this enquiry.

Ald. Green asked if the chairman of Market and City Property was going to do anything in reference to the matter of heating the City building.

Ald. Ackerman — "The matter will be brought up at the next meeting of the Committee."

Ald. Ackerman asked if anything was being done in reference to obtaining cheap power for the city.

Mayor Sulman said the matter would no doubt be attended to.

At this stage of the proceedings the time of the Council was extended for three hours.

BY-LAWS.

Ald. Panter introduced a by-law, known as a granolithic walk construction by-law, which provided for the construction of a number of granolithic walks in various parts of the city during the coming season.

The by-law was passed through its various stages and numbered 1303.

Ald Panter was chairman of the Committee on By-laws.

NOTICE OF MOTION.

Ald. Marsh gave notice of a motion that the chairmen of the Executive, Waterworks, Gas and Market Committees, with His Worship, form a committee to discuss and report on the enlargement of the City Treasurer's office and duties, with the view of having all civic revenues received at the one office, viz., that of the City Treasurer, and report.

Council adjourned.

Stroke Proved Fatal To Mr. Thomas Wills.

AGED AND RESPECTED GENTLEMAN PASSED AWAY SHORTLY BEFORE 6 O'CLOCK LAST EVENING — AN INTERESTING AND USEFUL CAREER — DECEASED GENTLEMAN HAD DISTINGUISHED RELATIVES.

Universal regret was expressed in the city last evening and this morning when it became known that Mr. Thomas Wills, ex-M.P.P., had joined the great majority.

At an early hour on Sunday morning, the 3rd inst., Mr. Wills was the victim of a paralytic stroke, which terminated fatally shortly before 6 o'clock last evening.

Deceased was born at Green Pond Island, on the northeast shore of the coast of Newfoundland, in the year 1826. He was educated at Salisbury, Eng. In the year 1846 he came to Belleville and from that time to his death had made this city his home, except for a short time spent on a farm in the first con. of Thurlow. Mr. Wills was, until lately, an exceedingly active man, and always took a deep interest in all matters pertaining to the city and county of Hastings. In military matters he was also much interested, and was proud of his title of Lieutenant-Colonel, which he formerly held in what was known as the East Hastings Reserve Militia. He was at the front during the Fenian Raid, and at his death was a member of the Veterans' Association.

For a period of 52 years the deceased was a faithful and painstaking official of the county, serving in the capacity of County Clerk and County Treasurer. The latter position he retained until the first of April, 1905 when he was succeeded by the present incumbent, Mr. B. Mallory. Whilst not a member of the Town or City Councils, Mr. Wills was always interested in the advancement of the city and municipal matters generally. He made the first compilation of the Municipal Act of Ontario.

Mr. Wills also branched out into a larger field than mere county or municipal matters, and entered the political arena. In the general election of 1874 he was an unsuccessful candidate for West Hastings in the Commons. In the year 1875 he contested West Hastings for a seat in the Legislature, and was successful over two opponents, namely, the late Messrs. John Lewis and Ketchum Graham.

In educational matters Mr. Wills took a deep interest, and for many years was a member of the Town and City Board of Education. In the year 1865 he was first elected as a representative of Ketcheson ward. He continued upon the Board until 1901. During his incumbency he was for four years chairman of the Building Committee, and in 1881 was chairman of the High and Central School committee. At the meeting of the Board in June, 1881 he was elected chairman of the Board and retained the position for the remainder of that year and the year following. He was a faithful attendant at the Board meetings, and upon his retirement his services were fittingly acknowledged by the Board which passed a strong resolution of commendation.

Mr. Wills was a member of long standing (between 40 and 50 years) of the Orange Order, and occupied the position of County Master in the year 1860. He was identified with the order when the Prince of Wales, our present King, visited the city. He has always retained a warm feeling for the order.

In religion the late Mr. Wills was an Anglican, and in politics a staunch Conservative.

In the year 1852 the deceased married Miss Anna Maria, youngest daughter of the late Capt. Henry Levesconte. The aged widow, and a family of three sons and one daughter, survives. The sons are Messrs. H. T., of New York; J. F., of this city, and Dr. Alf., of Gold River, Yukon; the daughter, Miss Wills, resides at home.

The late Mr. Wills had some very distinguished relatives and ancestors. His father-in-law, Capt. Levesconte, fought under the great Nelson at Trafalgar. His brother-in-law, Lieut. Levesconte, was one of Sir John Franklin's officers, when that ill-fated old mariner was lost, with his entire crew, in the expedition the object of which was the discovery, if possible, of the Northwest passage. Lieut. Levesconte was, the records showed, the last surviving officer before death stilled the hands of the writers. When the bodies of Sir John and his crew were found there were also found some silver spoons with Lieut. Levesconte's initials upon them. When Lady Franklin, Sir John's widow, visited Canada she came to Belleville and presented the spoons to Mrs. Levesconte, relict of Capt. Levesconte, who was at the time living in this city.

A first cousin of the late Mr. Wills, whose name was William John Wills, and who was an explorer, engineer and surveyor, was one of a party of the first white men to cross the continent of Australia, all of whom lost their lives through starvation, Mr. Wills' body being found sitting under a tree, within a comparatively short distance of Sydney, N.S.W. A monument commemorates the heroism of those brave and adventurous men, upon which appears the name of Mr. Wills, and a monument also, in London, to the Sir John Franklin expedition, bears the name of Lieut. Levesconte.

Attendance of All the Ministers Discussed By the Press.

London, March 12.—(C. A. P.)—Botha announced he would attend the colonial conference.

Churchill, replying to Lyttelton, said yesterday that the Colonial Secretary had determined that the constitution of the colonial conference should be a matter for that body itself, but it would be the first subject of importance to be brought before the conference.

The Morning Post says there is much more in the Canadian suggestion that all Colonial Ministers might be invited to the colonial conference than meets the eye. In effect it marks a distinct advance to a common crown, but while in this sense it may be invited to the colonial conference be regarded in some quarters as a step towards the dissolution of the empire, the principles advocated would facilitate the solution of the imperial council.

The Standard contends that Ministers other than Premiers should only be in attendance when matters affecting their departments are being discussed.

LORD PENRHYN DEAD.

Famous Dispute With His Slate Quarry Employes Recalled.

London, March 12.—Lord Penrhyn, whose dispute with his employes at the Bethesda slate quarries brought him into great prominence, is dead.

The quarrymen struck and Lord Penrhyn refused to parley with them, shut down the quarries, and refused to re-open them except on his own terms. The men yielded after three years' struggle, which cost the Bethesda district nearly $2,000,000 in wages, and which, it is claimed, did not do anybody any good, except the foreign quarrymen, who, as a result of the dispute, developed a thriving business in the way of sending slates to England. The deceased peer was born in 1836, and succeeded his father in 1886.

CHEAPER THAN BATTLES.

People Regard Cost of Battleships as an Insurance Rate.

San Francisco, March 12.—Lord Charles Beresford, Admiral of the British Channel fleet, has arrived here on his return from Texas, where he has been settling the estate of his brother, the late Lord Delaval Beresford. The admiral still believes in battleships in spite of the international project of disarmament. "The people have become the arbiters of peace," he said. "They realize the horrors of war and that battleships are cheaper than battles. War is no longer determined by Parliament and potentates, and the people look upon the cost of battleships as an insurance rate."

THE GREAT SEAL HUNT.

Twenty-Three Steamers Sail Up the Labrador Coast.

St. John's, Nfld., March 12.—At daybreak yesterday the sealing fleet of 23 steamers sailed for the north to begin the annual taking of seals off the Labrador coast. On account of inshore winds, which have packed the ice heavily along the coast, the work of the fleet this season is expected to be unusually difficult. The fleet carries 3,891 men.

Strike Against Ruler.

Teheran, March 12.—As a protest against the extortion and reactionary methods of the son and the staff of the Governor-General of Ispahan, Masud Mirza Zill-Es-Sultan, who is the eldest uncle of the Shah, a general strike is in full progress at Ispahan, formerly the metropolis of Persia. Attempts to repress the strike have led to serious disorders, during which many casualties occurred among the strikers, some of whom have sought refuge on the premises of the British telegraph line.

Urgent telegrams from the inhabitants of Ispahan, have reached the Persian Parliament, demanding the recall of the governor-general, and the expulsion of his family from the city. The telegrams have been handed to the Minister of the Interior for transmission to the Shah.

TOWN BADLY SHAKEN

Three Trainmen Killed and Many Injured by Explosion.

Boiler of Locomotive Bursts With Terrible Force—Many Fires Were Started — Parts of Engine Blown Into Buildings Two Blocks Away—Hundreds of Windows Broken—Nothing Left of the Freight Cars.

Metchuen, N. J., March 12.—Three men were killed and a number of others hurt, and Metchuen was shaken and threatened with many fires yesterday, when the boiler of a locomotive on the Pennsylvania Railroad exploded while drawing a freight train through the town.

The dead are: William J. Sisher, engineer, of Philadelphia; W. H. Fritsche, fireman, Trenton, N. J., and C. S. Smith, brakeman, Trenton N. J.

The train left Jersey City at 1 p.m. and was passing through this place under good headway when just opposite the railroad station the boiler of the locomotive exploded with terrific force. Hardly any portions of the locomotive except the wheels was found at the point of the explosion. Portions of the boiler were blown two blocks away and tore their way into buildings. The bodies of Engineer Sisher and Brakeman Smith were found a hundred yards from the railroad tracks.

Cars Caught Fire.

Many of the freight cars were piled in a heap and several of the train hands were injured, none seriously, in the wreckage. The broken cars caught fire from the scattered coal of the locomotive firebox, but the blaze was soon extinguished by the fire department.

A portion of the locomotive was blown into Hahn's drug store, two blocks from the track, and another piece of steel entered McCutcheon's pharmacy. Both stores were set on fire simultaneously, but in neither case was there any serious loss.

Miss Daisy Martin, telephone operator in the railroad station, was thrown from her chair by the explosion and slightly injured. The station caught fire, but the blaze was soon extinguished.

Windows in buildings within a radius of two hundred yards were broken by the explosion, the force of which was so great as to seem like an earthquake.

Torn By a Shaft.

Peterboro', March 12.—On Sunday morning Wm. G. Spence, employe of the Peterboro' Light & Power Co., was fatally injured. In attempting to replace a belt on a pulley in the powerhouse his sleeve caught in a projection on the shaft. His arm was almost torn from the socket and severe internal injuries were inflicted. He was alone at the time of the accident, and it was some time after that he was found unconscious. Death ensued at Nicholl's Hospital Sunday night.

Killed By a Straw Stack.

Burlington, March 12.—While Milton Devitt, 46 years of age, was assisting yesterday to load a wagon with straw, the stack gave way, burying him. He was dead when his companion got him out, twenty minutes later.

Boy Killed by Whiskey.

Syracuse, N. Y., March 12.—Frank Bearup, 3 years of age, was advised by his father Sunday to take a mouthful of whiskey to allay pain from an aching tooth.

The boy did so and continued the treatment until he had taken more than half a pint of liquor. He was seized with convulsions and died at midnight.

Sealer Lost Four Men In Fog.

Victoria, March 12.—The sealing schooner Vera of this city has reported the loss of a boat with four Victoria men, during a fog 140 miles southwest of San Francisco.

Upset Lamp Causes Fire.

Guelph, March 12.—William Stevenson and his son-in-law, Grier, who live in the half of a brick house on Oliver street, their wives being away in the States, celebrated the occasion Sunday afternoon by imbibing so freely that the police cautioned them. About 11.30 Sunday night a fire alarm was sent in. It seems that the pair between them upset a lamp, and it set the house on fire. The roofs of both tenements were badly burnd.

STUDENTS BLINDED.

Result of Practical Joke at a McGill Union Concert.

Montreal, March 12.—A practical joke was played on the science freshmen in McGill Union on Saturday night which may result seriously. A concert was held at McGill Union by the freshmen in science. All went along very nicely until about 10 o'clock, when the electric light wires were cut, and at the same time a large bottle of ammonia was thrown into the hall from a lounging nook on the second floor. The bottle broke and filled the room with the overwhelming fumes peculiar to ammonia. This got into the eyes of several of the fellows, and four of them had to be taken to the hospital and treated for very painful injuries. There is danger of the eyes of some being permanently injured.

The Sophomore Science year is supposed to include the offenders, and it is announced that, as soon as their identity is established, they will be expelled.

Coming so soon after the theatre night rumpus last fall, when the whole student body came in for a severe castigation at the hands of Principal Peterson, this case promises to result disastrously for the offenders.

$50,000 Fire In Liner's Hold.

Boston, March 12.—About $50,000 damage was done by a fire that broke out in No. 4 hold of the Leyland Line Steamship Devonian at her dock here yesterday.

Pope Motor Strike Settled.

Toledo, Ohio, March 12.—The Pope Motor Co.'s strike of machinists, involving over 1,000 men, has been settled.

TRAINING OF TEACHERS.

University Governors May Borrow Money For New Faculty.

Toronto, March 12.—Despite governmental effort and the busy work and night sessions of the past two weeks, the plan to conclude the Legislative session by the Eastertide vacation will have to be abandoned. Hon. Mr. Whitney, the Prime Minister, has taken the wise position that there must be no rush or hasty legislation, and more remains to be done than can be accomplished between the present and the early Easter.

Yesterday, for instance, there were but three Liberal members in their places and Mr. Graham was forced to ask that furthur consideration of the estimates be deferred until he could muster more of his colleagues.

To Investigate Complaints.

In reply to a query from Mr. Smyth (Algoma) Hon. Mr. Cochrane, the Minister of Lands and Mines, said it was the intention of the Government to investigate the complaints made by residents of Northern Ontario that large areas of unpatented lands are held by speculators who do not reside on the land and who in other respects have not complied with the regulations under which the land was sold or located. It was the further intention of the Government to appoint an inspector or other proper officer to examine and report on the lands of the Crown in all Townships in Northern Ontario, now open for settlement or that it may be intended to hereafter open for settlement, with the object of preventing settlers from locating on lands not suited for agricultural purposes. The Government moreover, were considering the introduction of legislation confirming the title of bona fide settlers who have already obtained their patents or who are residing on their lands and have performed the necessary improvements thereon to entitle them to patents, to minerals, if any, on the lands and also to the timber, where the same was not sold to Timber Licensees by late Government.

University May Borrow.

The Prime Minister, Hon. J. P. Whitney, moved the second reading of the Government bill to amend the university act of last year. The purpose of this measure, he said, was to give the university power to borrow money, on the approval of the Government, for purposes identified with the objects of the institution. The Prime Minister mentioned the erection and conduct of high and public schools in connection with the new chair of pedagogy.

Hon. Mr. Graham said he was at one with the Prime Minister as to the needs of the university and the necessity for dealing liberally with it. He was not, however, in accord with the plan of making its income dependent on the succession duties, though he admitted his view was at variance with that of the president of the university and Mr. Byron E. Walker, the financier of the Board of Governors.

The balance of a short session was taken up by giving a large number of private bills their second reading.

CURE PILES PRIVATELY AT HOME WITHOUT PAIN OR OPERATION.

TRIAL PACKAGE MAILED FREE.

The result of an irritated membrane cannot be cured with a knife, but by removing the cause of the irritation.

What is a more natural cure than a strong and yet healing balm which will bring life back to the deadened tissues? This is the action of the Pyramid Pile Cure. The little suppositories melt away into the feverish membrane, heal the ulcers, remove the inflammation and swelling and bring back the rectum to its normal condition.

This result is effected painlessly and without the loss of a moment's time from your daily duties. The treatment is applied at home, in the privacy of your own room. The remedy is our own preparation and our name is the guarantee of its genuineness.

Thousands of cases similar to the following might be cited to prove our claims.

"I tried the sample of your cure you sent to me. I used it and then bought a 50 cent box. The results were immediate and surprising to me, I assure you, I had been to a dozen of the best doctors and paid much money to them with no results whatever. I had this affliction for 20 years, I was in a hospital for a long time, and I left it physically broken down. I owe you a debt of gratitude. I believe that piles would be banished from humanity and become an unknown thing, were every one afflicted with them to but spend from 50c to $1.00 for Pyramid Pile Cure. Its speedy action also makes it extremely favorable for impatient people. I am yours sincerely, George H. Bartlett, Mattapan, Mass."

No matter how badly you suffer from Piles, we want to cure you. If you will try a free package to prove its merits yourself, we will gladly send it to your name and address at once. We will leave it to you to decide whether you can afford to discontinue the treatment. Pyramid Drug Co., 84 Pyramid Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

All druggists sell the Pyramid Pile Cure, just the same as the sample at 50 cents per box.

ADMITS FARE STATUTE

For a Two-Cent Rate on G. T. Railway.

Hon. Mr. Emmerson Goes On Record On Important Matter—Inveighs Against Principle As a Dangerous Doctrine—Clause of Labor Bill Struck Out—Any Industry Not a Utility—Case of Railway Men.

Ottawa, March 12.—The House was visibly stirred yesterday afternoon by the startling state of affairs disclosed through a few pointed questions by W. F. Maclean (South York), and the staggering attempts at answer perpetrated by the Minister of Railways.

The House was in committee on a private bill entitled "an act respecting the Grand Trunk Railway Co. of Canada." Artfully buried under tons of verbage, there had been inserted in this bill a section respecting that part of the Grand Trunk charter passed in 1852, which in consideration of a grant of $3,000 a mile, required the company to run over the length of its line at least one train a day, carrying third-class passengers at a penny a mile. As reported to the House from the Railway Committee, this section was dropped. It had been withdrawn by the solicitor of the G. T. R. in committee, who did so at the request of the Government.

Mr. Maclean demanded that the Government should state its position. Terrified by public opinion, it had retained upon the statute book the penny-a-mile clause. Did it now intend to enforce that clause?

Mr. Emmerson replied that he was "not the father confessor of the Grand Trunk Railway." Indeed, he knew little about its charter. He assumed that any provision contained in its charter would be faithfully observed by the G. T. R."

Sir Wilfrid Inquisitive.

At this point Sir Wilfrid butted in, to the great embarrassment of his Railway Minister.

"On what authority do you say that this Government had the G. T. R withdraw this clause?" he asked.

Mr. Maclean: "On the authority of Mr. Biggar, solicitor of the G. T. R., who was notified by the Minister of Railways and Canals."

Sir Wilfrid made no further interruption, but later on, Mr. Emmerson in a way, impugned the veracity of Mr. Biggar and then inveighed against the two-cents-a-mile as a "dangerous doctrine."

He put forward these two propositions:

First, that the railways of Canada at present only charged two cents a mile, second-class.

Second, that in Nebraska the passage of the two-cents-a-mile act had led to the railways abolishing all passes, excursion rates and other privileges.

Information at Last.

"Answer me these two questions," demanded Mr. Maclean. "Is this penny-a-mile clause in force, and do you intend to enforce it?"

"I never denied that there was such a statute," said Mr. Emmerson, but he positively refused to make any pledge that he would enforce it.

Settlement of Strikes.

Consideration of the bill of the Minister of Labor, to aid in the settlement of strikes and lockouts in mines and public utilities was also resumed yesterday in Committee of the Whole.

The principal change effected was the withdrawal of the clause empowering the Governor-in-Council to declare any industry a public utility within the meaning of the act.

The Minister refused to have it enacted, that pending investigation of a labor dispute the employer may not alter the hours of employment or rate of wages any more than he may order a lockout. Mr. Borden pressed this change upon the Minister, but without avail.

Railway Men Object.

R. L. Borden could see nothing to criticize in the railway trainmen preferring the act of 1903. He doubted whether Mr. Lemieux's amendment had any such effect as he claimed for it. He suggested some change in phraseology that might to some extent carry out the purpose of the proposed amendment. Mr. Lemieux said that the only objection by the railway men was one based on the large expense involved. He insisted that they could keep clear of the pending legislation by acting promptly, and the case arose by invoking the act of 1903.

Mr. Borden pointed out that the railway men urged that they already had a system of patient and exhaustive enquiry between employer and employe, and, moreover, there had been no strike or lockout since 1903. It was now proposed that either one side or the other could invoke the proposed bill and refer the whole matter anew to a third tribunal.

Mr. Lemieux replied that the present bill would only be put in operation in case the railway men should fail to invoke the conciliation clause of the bill of 1903.

The bill did not get through committee. It is to be reprinted and further considered.

Overdoing the Holiday.

The modern craze for speed and hustle has invaded our holiday making to such an extent that in many people's minds a tour means really a scamper, or, more properly speaking, a scurry, in which the object is neither mental nor bodily refreshment, but merely a frantic effort to cover the greatest possible amount of ground in the least possible amount of time. This perverted view of holiday making does an immense amount of harm every year, especially to delicate people, and many a breakdown results.

An ounce of contentment is more beneficial to a woman's complexion than a pound of cosmetics.

Perished In The Flames.

Mother Dies With Her Two Little Ones.

Victims of Tenement Fire—One Babe Clasped In Her Arms, Other Clinging to Her Back—Climbed to the Cockloft—Another Tenant Overcome After Fierce Effort to Escape Through Skylight.

New York, March 13.—In a little cockloft or attic about four feet high between the roof and ceiling of the five-storey double frame tenement at 253 Bushwick avenue, Williamsburg, Mrs. Ada Bingalli was found dying of burns and smoke inhalation Monday just before noon by Battalion Chief Langdon and some of the firemen of Hook and Ladder 58. Mrs. Bingalli, who was but 23 years old, had climbed a ladder to the cockloft after she found that flames had cut off escape by the stairway, and she had fallen there, overcome. Clasped in the mother's arms was her three-months-old baby girl. Another daughter, Maria, three years old, was on the mother's back, with her arms clasped around Mrs. Bingalli's neck. Both the children were dead.

The mother still gripped tightly a bag in which were $31 and a bank book. She died soon after she had been carried down the ladder from the roof to the street. In the loft, a few feet from where the mother and two children were found, lay a young Italian named Pietro Banattro. The youth's face and head were cut and bruised where he had struggled savagely to get through the small skylight. If the skylight had been latched on the inside, as it should have been, instead of being nailed to the roof, Pietro, Mrs. Bingalli, and the two little ones that she was trying to carry to safety probably would have been able to reach the roof. Pietro, the physicians say, will die.

SUFFOCATED BY GAS.

Two Buffalo Sisters Found Dead In Their Room.

Buffalo, March 13.—Augusta and Mary Littlefield, sisters, were found dead in their room at a boarding-house on Franklin street yesterday. They were seated at opposite sides of a table and had evidently fallen asleep and had been suffocated by gas from a small stove in the room. They were about 40 and 35 years of age respectively.

KILLED BY ICICLE.

Trolley Car On Gorge Route At Falls Struck—Motorman Dies.

Niagara Falls, N.Y., March 13.—A huge icicle dropped from the cliffs of the Niagara Gorge on a trolley car of the Gorge road yesterday as it was passing the whirlpool rapids. Motorman Everet Ramsdell was killed. Dr. and Mrs. M. B. Nervy of Sioux City, Iowa, and Miss Nervy were struck on the back and badly bruised and S. S. Lindsay and wife of Pittsburg were injured, the former having his hand smashed. The injured were taken to the Prospect House.

A FATAL COLLISION.

One Man Killed and Three Injured at Massachusetts Town.

Williamstown, Mass., March 13.—One man was killed and three were injured here yesterday in a head-on collision between a freight train and a train of express cars on the Fitchburg division of the Beaton and Maine Railroad. The accident occurred at the entrance to the local railroad yards.

The crew of the freight say that signals had been put out, but the engineer and fireman of the other train assert that no signals were visible when they came around the curve at the west entrance of the train yard. Both engines were badly smashed in the collision, and three freight cars and one express car were wrecked. The fireman of the freight, C. C. Ransom, of Rotterdam, N. Y., was instantly killed. None of the three injured men were fatally hurt.

Venturesome Man Lost.

Glace Bay, N. S., March 13.—Monday evening an unknown man was noticed on the ice pans about a mile from shore at New Aberdeen. The ice parted and he was unable to reach shore. The wind carried him out to sea.

Killed at Crossing.

Sherbrooke, Que., March 13.—W. J. Graveson, farmer, of Ascot, was killed on the Quebec Central track near Ascot corner Monday evening by the evening express from Quebec. The deceased was about 40 years of age and leaves a widow and eleven children, the eldest being 12 years of age.

15 Were Drowned.

Redding, Cal., March 13.—A train crew crowded to the end of a ferry-boat on the Pitt River and upset it, 15 being drowned, yesterday.

Held Up and Robbed On Tracks.

Ingersoll, March 13.—While George Tune, butcher, was walking home on the G. T. R. tracks last night, two highwaymen dropped a bag over his head and robbed him of about $90, his receipts for the day.

DROPS INSANITY PLEA.

New Witnesses For Prosecution Will Prove Thaw Was Sane.

New York, March 13.—District Attorney Jerome has burned behind him all bridges leading to a lunacy commission, and has irresistably pointed his course towards proving that Harry K. Thaw was sane the night he shot and killed Stanford White, and that, being sane, his crime constituted murder in the first degree.

Within ten days or two weeks the case should be in the jury's hands.

Mr. Jerome yesterday played probably the strongest card he holds, evidence which came to his knowledge but a few days ago, and undoubtedly influenced him to abandon the idea of trying to send White's slayer to an asylum, and to seek a conviction under the criminal statutes.

The evidence came from Mrs. Stanford White's brother James Clinch Smith, who told a remarkably clear and succinct story of the events in Madison Square Garden the night White was killed, and of a long conversation he had with Thaw just prior to the shooting.

Acted as Though Sane.

It appears that Thaw sat for some time with Smith during the fateful first performance of "Mamselle Champagne," and discussed the play, Wall street common acquaintances, plans for the summer and many other things.

Thaw said he and his wife were going abroad later in the summer. There was no hint anywhere of Thaw's intent to inflict bodily harm upon any one. Mr. Smith did say, however, that Thaw, not having a reserved seat, roamed about the garden and continually looked in the direction of spot where he subsequently killed White.

Mr. Delmas bitterly fought the introduction of this testimony for nearly two hours. He declared Mr. Smith was properly a witness-in-chief and should not be allowed to testify in rebuttal. Mr. Jerome replied that he had only known for a few days the real value of Mr. Smith's testimony and he appealed to the direction of the court to allow the testimony to go in.

New Evidence Admitted.

Justice Fitzgerald held that, in the interest of justice, the jury was entitled to all the facts. It was one of the most serious blows the judge has dealt the defence since the trial began.

Mr. Jerome said he would introduce as witnesses to-day Abraham Hummel and his stenographer. Then, if his plans carried, he would conclude the state's case with the testimony of three experts, Drs. Austin Flint, Carlos MacDonald and William Maben.

It was agreed that after the defence had presented its sur-rebuttal, each side shall have one clear day for the summing up. The charge of the court will follow, and the consideration of the evidence by the jury.

The experts' evidence will not be reached before Thursday, and figuring upon the disposal of one a day, the last of the trio will not be examined until Monday next.

The defence will probably occupy the remainder of next week with sur-robuttal and the summing up will probably begin Monday, March 25. That would bring the charge to the jury on Wednesday, March 27.

SLIPS FROM COUNTY JAIL.

Tillsonburg Man Changes His Clothes and Escapes In Woodstock.

Woodstock, March 13.—Frederick Forbes of Tillsonburg, under sentence to serve one year in the Central Prison for larceny, escaped from the county jail here yesterday.

Spring housecleaning has been in progress at the jail for the last few days. Yesterday morning, while Governor Cameron was opening the rear iron door to take a ladder out, he noticed Forbes coming downstairs, and instructed him to go to the kitchen to get some water and start scrubbing.

The governor's attention was called elsewhere for a few minutes and, upon returning, he noticed a door leading out into one of the smaller yards was open.

Looking out he saw a pile of jail clothes in the corner. A search was immediately commenced and Forbes was found to be missing.

Apparently he had on a suit of civilian clothes under his prison clothes and, upon reaching the smaller yard, had pulled his prison clothes off and run out into the outer ward and through the gates, which also were open.

He is young and has quite a police record. He is of medium height, fair complexion and weighs about 150 lbs.

It is well for one to know more than he says.—Plautus.

Of course it's spring. The early robin, being a mere foolish birdling, may be deceived, and the almanac, a mere human invention, may lie but when you see the boys playing marbles and the housekeepers getting ready for the house-cleaning campaign, you can bet all the money the coalman left you that spring has arrived.

Most people appear to agree that the Council acted wisely in engaging a thoroughly qualified man to take charge of the gas works, though the fact that the said works is burdened with a debenture debt of not far from $100,000 made a few open their eyes. However, there seems to be a general opinion that the Council has grasped the true state of affairs and mean to grapple with things in a business-like way.

By the way, where is that balance sheet of the Waterworks department which was asked for some time ago? We learned with pleasure, of course, that the Water department was collecting its accounts regularly, but how do matters stand in regard to profit and loss? This, it seems to us, is information the citizens have a right to. Whose move is it?

For the avowed purpose of bringing the dead back to life by restoring breath to their bodies which it has left, an artificial respiration corporation has been organized and chartered with a capitalization of $100,000. Experiments by Prof. Poe of Norfolk county, led to the organization of the corporation. The professor says that he has perfected a method of restoring the breath of life to lungs which it has left by pumping carbonic gas from and oxygen into the lungs. Cases of apparent asphyxiation by gas, drowning or death from an overdose of anaesthetics, Prof. Poe says, can be brought back to life that would otherwise be lost, to say nothing of plain drunks that can be sobered in a jiffy. No man has yet been resurrected by the method, but experiments on lower animals are said to have been successful.

MR. DOOLEY'S OBSERVATIONS.

"What's that dockyment ye have there?" said Mr. Hennessy.

"That," said Mr. Dooley, "is a paper I picked up on the floor of St. Andrew's lecture room lasht night. It was to have bin read by Mrs. O'Rafferty, convener of the comity for the Amelioration of the Condition of Neglected Husbands, but was lost in the shuffle."

"What does it say?" said Mr. Hennessy.

"It says," said Mr. Dooley, "that, during the year, two married ladies were sent to the north pole for wearing big picture hats in church; that the law abolishing the house-cleaning season has been found to work satisfactorily; that a petition has been presented to Her Ladyship the Governess-General asking for the pardon of the young woman who was chasin' stujents — it seems she thought, be the way they fixed their hair, they were gyurls in disgeeze; and lasht, but not laste it provides that no husband shall be obleeged to mind the baby more than wan night in the week, exceptin' his wife is convenor of some important comity. Savings banks have been established for young husbands, and, taken altogether, Hinnissy, the condition of the lords of creation, bedad, is lookin' up."

"Hurray!" said Mr. Hennessy, "what a pity you and me can't live till Anny Domino 2000!"

"We might have a brain storm if we did," said Mr. Dooley, "or be afflicted wid exaggerated ego."

DID YOU EVER MEET ANY OF THESE PEOPLE?

(Hamilton Spectator.)

There are a great many men in this world who would be very disagreeable if they could. They would prevent people from attending the theatre unless the play was one of Shakespeare's; they would allow no one to read books of which they did not approve, they would compel every man to do as they do on Sunday; they would regulate the eating and drinking of others, taking their own stomachs and palates as the standard. These people exhibit a phase of human nature that, in times gone by, caused a very great deal of trouble in this world.

MEN ARE POWERLESS.

To Fight Against Disease Unless They Strike at the Underlying Cause.

To treat Dandruff, and Falling Hair with irritants or oils on which a parasitic germ will prosper, is like scooping water from the ocean to prevent the tide from rising.

You cannot accomplish a satisfactory cure without having a right understanding of the fundamental causes of the trouble.

You must kill the Dandruff Germ. Newbro's Herpicide does this because it is specially made to do that very thing.

When the germ is removed the hair has no choice but to resume healtby growth and beauty.

Delay In Filling Senate Vacancies.

SIR MACKENZIE BOWELL ASKED SOME PERTINENT QUESTIONS—THE "MAN WITH A PROMISE."

Ottawa, March 12. — In the Senate to-night Sir Mackenzie Bowell congratulated the Government on the promptness with which they had filled the Quebec vacancy in the Senate, and asked why the Ontario and Nova Scotia vacancies had not been filled. Was it true as suggested in the press that a certain gentleman was willing at a certain time to give up his place in the Senate at the convenience of the Government. He asked if a certain gentleman in Hastings County was to get a Senatorship, which he claimed had been promised him.

Mr. Scott said he feared the present Government was following the bad example of the previous Government in not filling vacancies promptly. However, there were a number of names before the Government, and he had no doubt the vacancies would be filled without delay.

Eye Strain CAUSES Eye Diseases

Eye STRAIN is the cause of most eye diseases. It produces irritation and congestion and a consequent weakness of all the nerves and muscles of the eye. In this way Glaucoma, Optic Nerve Paralysis, Granular Lids, Ulcers, Cataract, etc., are induced. These diseases are not only painful, but if neglected, result in blindness.

The best time to treat eye diseases is in the "eye STRAIN stage," and the most capable and experienced is the man to consult.

If your eyes, or head, or nerves trouble you you may rely upon our Optician for useful and competent advice, whether or not glasses are the medium of relief.

A Ridiculous Spectacle.

The ridiculous spectacle is presented at Ottawa of a Parliamentary committee gravely discussing whether Mr. Hyman has resigned or if he is still the representative of London in the House of Commons. Notwithstanding two resignations, so called, it appears that there remains still a question of Mr. Hyman's being the member for that constituency. The law provides that a member may resign his seat by sending the Speaker a notice in writing witnessed by two persons. Mr. Hyman began by sending a notice to the Speaker which was not witnessed at all. This was dated at London, November 20, though Mr. Hyman left the city on the 19th for the United States and he has not been in Canada since. The Speaker informed the House on the day of the opening that he had received this communication and that it was not effective. Various inquiries were made afterward, but it was not until the 8th of February that any definite announcement from Mr. Hyman reached the House. On that date Sir Wilfrid Laurier stated that he had received from the Minister of Public Works a telegram announcing that Mr. Hyman had withdrawn the resignation of his seat in the Cabinet. About the same time that this resignation was withdrawn the Speaker received another resignation of Mr. Hyman's seat. This communication seemed to be regular and it was signed by two witnesses, Mr. Jarvis and Mr. Beale. Acting upon it the Speaker on February 11th issued his warrant for a new election.

But now appeared another complication. It was known that Mr. Hyman had remained in California, and that his business managers, who signed as witnesses, had not been out of Canada. Thus the question arose whether their vision was so extensive that they could see from London a man signing a document in California. The Speaker swore that the document last read by him was the same as the first one, except that the witnesses' signatures were added. Later it appeared that some one had stuck on a seal. To decide whether the resignation was valid, and the London seat was vacant, the matter was referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections. Before this committee Mr. Beale and Mr. Jarvis admitted on oath that they signed as witnesses without having seen Mr. Hyman write or sign the paper. In fact, they had never before seen the document. All they knew was that Mr. Duffield, a London election campaigner, had telephoned them that he had received a telegram from Mr. Hyman, and had later sent them the despatch requesting them to sign the document as witnesses.

Meanwhile Mr. Hyman remains in California, while Mr. Duffield and the other experienced and far-famed campaigners have been getting ready for the election. It turns out that they knew the election was to be ordered long before Parliament was informed that Mr. Hyman intended to return to public life. Sir Wilfrid Laurier at the beginning thanked Opposition members for the courtesy and consideration they had shown, and solemnly assured them that he would give them the earliest possible information of Mr. Hyman's intentions. Instead the Premier kept back from Saturday until the following Friday, Mr. Hyman's announcement that he was getting well and intended to go back to his work. But at London Mr. Gibbons who knew all about Mr. Hyman's alleged resignations, and who swore in the London enquiry that his party was fighting the devil with fire, had already supplied the local campaign organizations with the news.

Backwoodsman Lost His Winter's Wages.

Kingston News: Frederick Lott, a bushman from back of Tamworth, arrived in town yesterday by stage, after spending the winter in the woods out north. He went into a local hotel, and when he entered there was quite a crowd there. While he was there some one "got next to him" for two hundred and ninety dollars, that he had earned in the past winter. The police were at once notified of the case; but so far without result.

When Lott was seen this morning, he said that he arrived here yesterday about five o'clock by stage, and before he had been here two hours he had lost his money. He acknowledged having had a few drinks, but said he was not very drunk. He does not remember being taken hold of or jostled in any way while in the hotel, but is sure that he lost it there. The money was carried in his right hand trouser pocket, being in the form of a plump roll. It consisted of two twenty dollar bills, the remainder being "tenners," and the entire collection being American notes. Other cases of somewhat similar nature have in the past been reported, but in the majority of them the robbery was committed after the moneyed one had been "doped," and put asleep. Lott will remain around the city for a few days to see if any trace is found of his lost stake.

An Old Resident Dead.

Fort Stewart, Feb. 18, 1907.

After an illness of about two weeks Mr. Wm. Edward Chatterton passed quietly away at his home in the township of Carlow, Feb. 14th. Deceased was born at Stockport, Cheshire, England, 1830. In this vicinity he spent the first twenty-five years of his life, his work being that of a shepherd at the home of an uncle. In 1855 he married Miss Matilda Marshall, of Edale, and the newly-married couple started on their voyage to Canada to settle on a bush farm in the vicinity of Rockingham, Renfrew Co., Ont., as a brother-in-law, Dr. Kinder, had preceded them to this section. Here they labored through the clouds and sunshine of life for a period of some 30 years, during which time the union was blessed with a hearty family of seven children, who were all spared to grow to manhood and womanhood. After Carlow township opened up for settlement the heavy timbered land induced the family to change their home at Rockingham for their present homestead in Carlow. Mr. Chatterton for a number of years was afflicted with rheumatism which kept him pretty much at home, though he was generally able to be about helping what he could. His busy life and energetic manner made him one of Carlow's best citizens. He leaves to mourn his loss his faithful companion in life, three sons, Jos., of Mayo; J. M., of British Columbia, and Isaac at the homestead, and three daughters, Matilda and Hannah J., at home, and Mrs. G. A. Jordison, of Montcagle. The funeral service was held at the home on Sunday, Feb. 17th, at 2 o'clock p.m., where a goodly number of friends and neighbors assembled to pay their last respects to the remains of an old neighbor and friend. Mr. Webster conducted the service in a manner worthy of a true follower of Christ and His teaching. The remains were then taken to the burying ground at the White Church and there interred. The family have the sympathy of the community in their bereavement.

Died In Hungerford.

Mr. Abner Clapsaddle, a well-known yeoman residing in the Township of Hungerford, died last night, as the result of lung trouble. Deceased, who was 56 years of age, was born on the place where he died, and had always resided there. Mr. Clapsaddle had been for some years a member of the Methodist church. In politics he was a Liberal. A widow and two daughters, Misses Pearl and Bessie, at home, survive.

Interred At Hillier.

A Wellington correspondent writes: The remains of the late Mrs. Vermilyea were brought from the home of her daughter, Mrs. Chapman, on Saturday and interred in Christ Church, Hillier, cemetery. Mrs. Vermilyea was well known and very highly respected by a large number in this locality; she was a sister of Wm. Clinton, of this place; John, of Bloomfield, and Dr. Geo. Clinton, of Belleville. The Rev. R. Byers, of Frankford, officiated at the service, assisted by Rev. O. R. de Pencier.

SPORTS AND PASTIMES.

THE TURF.

A Jockey's Romance.

Toronto, March 12.—If Dame Fortune does not hand him a blow below the belt, Jockey Tommy Walker will soon be in possession of a vast fortune, left him and his mother by an uncle who was a general in the Spanish army, and who died recently in that country. The estate is worth $700,000.

Walker heard of his good fortune through a firm of New York lawyers in January. They were looking for the heirs, and located Walker in Toronto, where he has been employed by Trainer Charles Phair all winter. Walker left Toronto on Friday, and sailed with his mother from New York on Saturday to claim the estate.

Walker told his friends here that his uncle was a General Toupez, and that this was his own name, although he had never been known by it.

Walker does not look like a Spaniard, but he is just the same now crossing the Atlantic to secure his fortune in old Madrid.

SPORTING NOTES.

The annual meeting of the Midland Association Football League will be held on Saturday, March 23rd, at one o'clock, in the Y.M.C.A. parlors, Peterboro. Representatives from the various clubs wishing to enter the League this year are requested to be on hand on behalf of their respective clubs.

The judges at the Carnival tonight will be Mesdames McCarthy, Stork and Masson. The ice, Manager Arnott, says, is in fine condition.

A fine game of hockey is promised for Friday night, when Trenton's fast team, which has trimmed everything it has played this season, will clash with the local juniors. It should be a good match.

The Ottawa Free Press makes the following selection for an all-Canadian hockey team: LeSueur, Ottawa, goal; Pulford, Ottawa, point; Stuart, Wanderers, cover; Patrick, Wanderers, rover; Bowie, Victorias, center; Phillips, Kenora, left wing; Alf. Smith, Ottawas, right wing.

The receipts at the Kingston rink Friday night when the 14th Regt. and Stratford played for the senior O.H.A. championship were $175, the largest gate ever taken in for a hockey match in Kingston. It is not hard to see, now, why Kingston's best players leave there.

A bombshell will be thrown into the camp of the Kenora's shortly if they win the championship of the Manitoba League and have to defend the Stanley Cup. Alf. Smith and Harry Westwick, of the Ottawas will not be allowed to play against the Wanderers in the cup games. The trustees of the cup do not consider these men bona fide members of the team. And every true lover of sport will applaud their action.

A Belleville man who attended the hockey match at Lindsay on Monday night says it was the limit. The Lindsay bunch were out to win by fair means, if they could, and if not then by any old means. Stratford fairly outplayed them.

The ice races to-morrow afternoon should provide good sport for horse-lovers. The entry list is a full one.

The Wanderers beat Guelph 8-3 last night, it being the first match the latter have lost this season.

Kenora beat Portage la Prairie 7-0 last night, and virtually cinched the championship of the Manitoba league. The Kenora team, with Alf. Smith and H. Westwick, of Ottawa and Chambers, of Winnipeg, in the line-up, have probably the most formidable team that ever stepped on the ice in Canada. Even the redoubtable Baird, of Montreal, failed to hold them, although he played in his best form. The game was fast, but owing to the difference in the scoring ability of the teams, was never really exciting. The play was fairly clean, although Quinn and Whitcroft engaged in a free fight after being ordered to the fence.

T. Eaton's Will.

DISPOSES OF AN ESTATE OF OVER TWO AND A HALF MILLIONS — THE BENEFICIARIES.

Toronto, March 13. — The will of Mr. Timothy Eaton has been filed for probate. The estate is valued at $2,699,642.94. His son, Mr. John Craig Eaton, his daughter, Mrs. Burnside, and his nephew, Mr. Robert Young Eaton, are the executors and trustees.

Under the will, the residences in Toronto and Muskoka are given to Mrs. Eaton for life, and on her decease to Mrs. Burnside.

The contents of these residences are given to Mrs. Eaton. She receives an income of $10,000 a year during life and the dividends on the bank stock.

Mrs. Burnside receives an income of $5,000 a year during her life, and on the death of her mother becomes entitled to the bank stock.

His son, Mr. William F. Eaton takes the factory and residence in Oshawa and contents.

Mrs Burden, a daughter of Mr. Eaton, was provided for by her father during his lifetime.

The residue of the estate goes to Mr. J. C. Eaton.

OBITUARY.

E. S. HOWARD, ENGLISH TEACHER, COLLEGIATE INSTITUTE, OWEN SOUND.

(Owen Sound Sun.)

The funeral of the late E. S. Howard, Saturday afternoon, was a striking testimony to the high place held by him in the regard of Owen Sound's citizens. The service at the house on West street was attended by a large number of his friends and associates; the members of the Board of Education attended in a body and the boys of the Collegiate Institute marched in the cortege to the C. P. R. station, about a hundred and fifty strong. Floral tributes were many and beautiful. The body was taken to Belleville, his former home, where the interment took place yesterday. The late Mr. Howard was the son of Rev. E. K. Howard, of Myrtle, Ont., near Belleville, where he was born. He came to Owen Sound from Brampton about five years ago, succeeding Mr. H. H. Burgess. Since that time, his genial manner and upright life gained for him a host of friends, who deeply regret his untimely death.

The First Methodist Church was crowded to the doors on Sunday evening when a service was held in memory of the late Mr. Howard. The service was most impressive throughout. Short and feeling references to their dead friend and brother were made by Rev. Mr. Turk, who spoke from the last verse of the fourth chapter of second Corinthians, referring to the example set by Mr. Howard in his life and the lessons to be learned. Mr. C. H. Elliott referred to his connection with and influence in the Y.M.C.A. Mr. Alfred Atton, one of Mr. Howard's students, spoke of his personal influence in the school, by example and precept. Mr. J. H. Packham spoke of him as a man and associate, both in the school and church. A note of deep heartfelt sorrow pervaded the service, everyone feeling that he had lost a friend. The church was suitably draped and this together with the solemn musical service made a deep impression on all in the building.

On Monday morning the students of the Collegiate Institute met in the Assembly hall, when short addresses were made by the teachers, Inspector Burgess and Mr. A. Atton, who voiced the universal sorrow at the death of Mr. Howard. They had lost not only a teacher but a friend always ready to help, always looking on the bright side. It was hoped that his example would be an incentive to all the students so to live that their lives might be as fondly remembered as his.

Mr. Howard leaves him surviving his widow, Lelia R. Howard, and two children, Ruth and George. Mrs. Howard is a daughter of the late Geo. M. Caldwell, of Thurlow, Hastings county, Ont.

The services at Belleville on Monday were conducted at the residence of Dr. Jos. Caldwell by the Rev. J. P. Wilson, pastor of the Bridge St. Methodist Church, assisted by Rev. E. K. Doxsee and Rev. Amos Campbell, all friends for many years of the deceased. The remains were interred in the Belleville cemetery.

WOMEN WHO CHARM

Health Is the First Essential Toward Making a Woman Attractive.

MISS HULDA KUGHLER   MISS ELIZABETH WYNN

There is a beauty and attractiveness in health which is far greater than mere regularity of feature.

A sickly, irritable, and complaining woman always carries a cloud of depression with her; she is not only unhappy herself but is a damper to all joy and happiness when with her family and friends.

It is the bright, healthy, vivacious woman who always charms and carries sunshine wherever she goes.

If a woman finds that her energies are flagging and that everything tires her; if her feminine system fails to perform its allotted duties, there is nervousness, sleeplessness, faintness, backache, headache, bearing-down pains, and irregularities, causing constant misery and melancholia, she should remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made from native roots and herbs will dispel all these troubles. By correcting the cause of the trouble it cures where other treatment may have failed.

Miss Elizabeth Wynn, of No. 205 8th Avenue, New York City, writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"For months I suffered with dreadful headaches, pain in the back and severe hemorrhages. I was weak and out of sorts all the time. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound helped me when all other medicine had failed. It seemed to be just what I needed and quickly restored my health."

Miss Hulda Kughler, of No. 35, West 15th Street, New York City, writes:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"For months I was ill with an internal trouble. I suffered terrible agony, was nervous, irritable, and sick all the time. I took different medicines without benefit. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended and within six months I was completely restored to health and I want to recommend it to every suffering woman."

Women who are troubled with painful or irregular functions, backache, bloating (or flatulence), displacements, inflammation or ulceration, that bearing-down feeling, dizziness, indigestion, or nervous prostration may be restored to perfect health and strength by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mrs. Pinkham's Invitation to Women.

Women suffering from any form of female weakness are invited to promptly communicate with Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. From the symptoms given, the trouble may be located and the quickest and surest way of recovery advised. Out of her vast volume of experience in treating female ills Mrs. Pinkham probably has the very knowledge that will help your case. Her advice is free and always helpful.

AN INSTRUMENT OF PROGRESS.

(Forest and Stream.)

Here's to the flashing axe
That cleared a glorious way,
For the men who fought and wisely wrought
A road for an empire's sway!

Hark to the mighty crash—
Its echoes are sounding still—
That brought the trees to the sturdy knees
Which were backed by an iron will,

Hark to the children's cry,
In fancy heard to-day,
When, the red man yelled and the rifle held
The ruthless foe at bay,

Rifle, and axe, and spade,
Honor and trust in God—
These were the tools that made
The road that a nation trod.

Thus have the men of the west
Sprung from a gallant page,
And the power to hew, to dare and do
Is their priceless heritage.

Proud should the children be
That their fathers' sires were men
Who mapped a line from brine to brine
With a flashing axe for a pen.

Then here's to the flashing axe,
And the men of mettle true;
May its blade so bright be a beacon light
To the boys that belong to you.

MINING TAXATION BILL

Interests of the People First Consideration of Government.

Lobbying Story In Connection With Power Bill Is Denied—Oil Exempt From Taxation—Natural Gas Used For Domestic Purposes Gets Rebate of Ninety Per Cent.—Prime Minister Assures Fair Dealing.

Toronto, March 13.—The reiterated rumors, which seem to have grown, rather than diminished, regarding alleged "lobbying" in connection with the consideration of the power clauses of the Ottawa bill in the Private Bills committee last week, called for further statements from Messrs. Ferguson (Grenville), McGarry (Renfrew) and McDougal (Ottawa), three of the members concerned, at the opening of the Legislature yesterday afternoon. They also elicited from Mr. Lucas, the chairman of the committee, who gave the casting vote against the members in question, a statement that, while he did not agree with the position they assumed, he was satisfied that the vote was the result of an honest difference of opinion.

Was No Lobbying.

Mr. Ferguson, who spoke first, regretted that the feeling seemed to be extending that there was something improper about the vote. This, he believed, was the fault of the newspapers in Toronto which in both their news and editorial columns took a position which was unfair and incorrect in reference to the matter. He gave the House his word that he had been in no way approached by any corporate interests nor had there been any attempt at lobbying so far as he was aware. There was no one keener for the people's rights as against private corporations than he.

Mr. McGarry thought it was unfair that his explanation made to the House previously, had not been accepted. He repeated his statement that he had acted of his own accord in what he deemed the best interests of all concerned.

Opinion Was Honest.

Mr. Lucas, the chairman of the committee, said he differed from the position assumed by the members in question, but he felt sure it was an honest difference of opinion.

Mr. McDougal read an interview with the Mayor of Ottawa in which he stated he was convinced that there was nothing improper in the vote, nor did it have any effect on the bill. Mr. McDougal also quoted Mr. P. D. Ross, the Conservative candidate at the last election as having declared that all disputes between the city of Ottawa and the Ottawa Electric Light Co. were finally settled, and there was no struggle now between the two.

Mining Taxation Bill.

The House then went into committee on the mining taxation bill, Mr. McDougal maintaining that the tax should not be imposed on properties now paying royalties or percentages.

Hon. Mr. Cochrane said the opinion of the Attorney General, was, that the measure was not a breach of faith on the part of the Legislature with those who had invested under the provisions of prior acts and amendments. Mr. Cochrane declared there was not a shipping mine in Cobalt that had not repaid actual money invested in developing and mining from the ore taken out of the mine.

Not In People's Interest.

To Mr. McDougal, who raised the question as to the taxation of oil, Hon. Mr. Cochrane reiterated his contention that the Government considered it would not be in the interests of the people to tax a commodity so generally in use.

Hon. Mr. Graham could not quite see why oil should be exempt if natural gas were taxed. The latter was, in many sections of the country, an every-day necessity to the people.

The Prime Minister said that oil was exempted because it was a necessity in every rural home in the Province. On that proposition they were prepared to stand. The bill proposed to grant a rebate on the domestic use of natural gas, which did away largely with the objection.

Question of Royalties.

Mr. McDougal asked what was being done in respect to mines which were paying royalties. The Right of Way Mining Co. were, for instance, paying 25 per cent. on its output, were they to pay an addition of three per cent?

Hon. Mr. Cochrane said the percentages on output in such cases were simply part of the purchase price. They had nothing to do with the tax one way or the other.

The profits above $10,000 will be subject to a three per cent. tax, while the acreage tax will be two cents per acre or $2 per 100 acres.

The evening session was devoted to a continuance of the discussion of the mining bill in committee. The tax on natural gas, which the Minister named at two cents per thousand feet, was taken into consideration.

Ninety Per Cent. Rebate.

In response to a question from Mr. Preston (Brant), the Minister said the rebate on the gas used for domestic purposes would be ninety per cent. of the tax. This would be equivalent in its operation to an export duty.

The Prime Minister pointed out that the tax meditated an imposition on the gas exported and would thus serve to keep the gas for the people of Ontario.

Mr. Preston argued that the tax was not the perpetuation of existing taxation. The old tax, with the possible exception of one company, was not operative. The former tax was on company's earnings, not on the product as proposed.

Mr. Auld instanced the cases of Kingsville and Leamington, which had made preparation at heavy cost for a supply of natural gas for municipal purposes. He claimed special consideration for such cases.

Hon. Mr. Cochrane pointed out that the cases instanced were those of ordinary commercial character. The plants were installed on a similar basis to those of an electric lighting or other municipal plant, to which Mr. Auld retorted that it was against the spirit of municipal ownership.

Prime Minister's Retort.

Mr. Graham opined that the taxing of natural gas for municipalities was unfair and was a form of direct taxation.

"It is no use trying to work up any artificial indignation," quoth the Prime Minister. "Special cases called to the attention of the Government will be dealt with equitably."

Hon. Adam Beck characterized the Opposition as inconsistent. When in office they placed a heavy tax on every horse-power of electrical energy generated at Niagara Falls. The consumer was called on to pay it. Would the Opposition oppose a rebate of that tax if the Government should see fit to propose it?

"The question is whether an export tax is favored or opposed," declared Col. Matheson.

Mr. Harcourt argued that as there was no virtue in the 90 per cent. rebate, why not go further and place a higher percentage, to which Mr. Whitney retorted that if injustice threatened the Government would protect those in danger.

THE TANNER'S COMBINE.

Mr. Fielding Denies That They Were Favored In the Tariff.

Ottawa, March 13.—Upon motion yesterday to go into Committee of Ways and Means, Armand Lavergne asked the Minister of the Interior if it was true that a bonus of 10 shillings was to be paid to booking agents for immigrants from Europe. Being answered in the affirmative, he gave notice that he would bring up the matter for discussion on Thursday.

Dr. Thompson (Yukon) called attention of the House to the gratifying reports of the geological survey. It was estimated that the gold-bearing gravel in Yukon district would yield at least $75,000,000. Dr. Thompson complained of the present form of Government, whereby six of the twelve members of the Legislative Council are appointed by the Dominion Government. He pleaded for full autonomy.

R. L. Borden discussed the curious anomaly that the funds of estates and other trust funds in Great Britain might be invested in bonds issued by Trinidad, Barbados, Ceylon and other British dependencies, but could not be invested in bonds issued by Ontario and Quebec and other provinces. He thought this due to the fact that the Imperial Government had no veto power over provincial legislation. Could not this difficulty be bridged by arranging that all provincial legislation respecting provincial securities be submitted to the Dominion Government and referred by it for disallowance to the Imperial authorities.

Mr. Fielding doubted if this would prove a remedy. The Imperial Government was very conservative, and there was a feeling in England that the trustee list should not be broadened. To do so would still further drive down the price for British consols.

The House then went into committee of Ways and Means.

A Soo Tragedy.

In committee Mr. Boyce (W. Algoma) called attention to the fate of the Canadian Electrical Chemical Co. of Sault Ste. Marie, organized to manufacture bleaching powder and caustic soda for the manufacture of pulp and paper at the Soo. Three hundred thousand dollars had been invested and the company had a payroll of $40,000. They desired a duty of 25 per cent., and the Laurier Government had tolled them along until after the general election of 1904. The company was finally forced into liquidation.

The item respecting boots, shoes, slippers, etc., was taken up. Mr. Fielding explained that the general tariff on finer shoes was increased from 25 to 30 per cent. Cheaper boots and shoes remain at 25 per cent. The boot and shoe industry in Canada paid in wages $3,700,000 annually. The American competition is quite severe, about 25 per cent. of the fine grade boots and shoes sold in Canada being manufactured in the United States.

Hyman Didn't Help.

Mr Fielding said that Mr. Hyman had not sought to influence the Tariff Commission or the Government. He denied the existing of a tanners' combine.

Mr. Roche (Halifax) said that there was a combine, but that as he understood it the tanners had combined to reduce prices and not to raise them.

R. L. Borden showed by evidence under his hand that there was a tanners' combine, and that they had been generously treated in the tariff.

Mr. Fielding said the statement had been oft repeated that the small tanners had brought the fact of a combine to the attention of the Government, but the fact was that no relief would have been afforded the complainant by recourse to the anti-combines clause of the tariff.

"This Government had knowledge of this tanners combine," said Mr. Borden, "but they did not exercise their power on account of some interest existing among the small tanners, because the small tanners did not ask them to go on."

The boot and shoe item went through, thus finishing up the tariff.

Chronicles of Don Q.

BY K. AND HESKETH PRITCHARD.

(Copyright by Pearson Publishing Company.)

Lalor, in obedience to orders—no one ever disobeyed Don Q.—went down to desayuno, and sat through the meal full of excited anxiety.

As soon as he could leave the table without remark, Lalor made his way to the stables, where, sure enough, he at once caught sight of the handsome, laughing face of Robledo, Don Q.'s most trusted follower, who was lounging at a door with a bucket in his hand.

Lalor gave the signal, and receiving an angelic smile of intelligence in return, strolled back to the bedroom of the bishop. What, he wondered, could have happened during his absence?

Don Q. lay panting in the bed, his ivory face even paler than its wont.

"Hullo, senor, what is the matter? You are ill?" The real concern on the young Englishman's face may have touched the brigand. He smiled faintly.

"No, I am not ill, dear nephew. Pleasurable emotions arising from the interview I have been enjoying and the unusual effort of walking have intensified the action of my heart—no more."

"I hope that brute, Basilio—" began Lalor.

"No, no. On the contrary, I am deeply gratified at the upshot of our little meeting."

"Can you get at him then?"

"At any moment," the chief assured him, with peculiar urbanity.

"But how, and where? The royal party have arrived, the streets are decorated, and—"

"My dear nephew, if you will trouble yourself to go down upon your knees, and look under my bed, I think you will find our excellent friend there."

"Don Basilio?" exclaimed Lalor.

He noticed that the coverlet of the bed now swept the floor. Stooping, he raised it, to be confronted by the savage glare of Don Basilio's eyes as he lay on his back, gagged and bound.

Lalor raised himself and looked down at Don Q. with a new admiration.

"How in the world did you manage it?"

"In the most simple manner, my son. I gave him the choice of coming quietly with me and submitting to my wishes, or having his brains blown out over his breakfast table."

"And he came with you?"

"Most certainly. He did not even hesitate. I had no time to spare, and told him so."

"But what in the world are you going to do with him? We can't carry him away in our waistcoat pockets!" exclaimed Lalor, entering very much into the spirit of the adventure.

"Let him remain where he is," said Don Q. "To-night, when all is quiet, we will have a trial."

The disappearance of Don Basilio made an immense sensation in the hotel, and every corner of it was searched, excepting only the chamber of the poor bishop, who was suffering so acutely from gout.

When a waiter brought the news to that good-hearted personage, he ordered his bedroom door to be thrown wide open, and with feeble words and gestures urged on the searchers to fresh effort.

After dark the search was abandoned by the Carlists for the time. The hotel assumed its usual quietude as the night deepened.

The chamber of the bishop was luckily somewhat isolated in consideration of his illness. About 2 o'clock Don Q. rose and dressed himself in his ordinary attire, packing his bishop's costume in his valise, while he requested Lalor to be so good as to drag Don Basilio out from under the bed.

"Take off the gag, my dear nephew," gently commanded Don Q. "I feel sure that the senor will understand that at a word or cry my sword will pierce his throat."

Don Basilio replied by a rumble of terrible curses.

"If you are not satan, who are you?" Basilio humped his shoulders and looked sidewise at Don Q.

"You desire to hear? Then I will tell you my name. The brigand bent to the other's ear and whispered something.

Lalor saw a look of stupefaction and incredulity pass across [illegible] purple face.

"It is impossible!" he cried.

"I am also known to a few intimates as Don Q.," added the chief suavely.

"Don Q.? Why you must have had my message?"

"It brought me here," replied Don Q. "I came to look upon the man who mistook me for a traitor."

"But you are a—"

"Sequestrador. True. Of the noblest rank of brigand. But it is now your turn to reply to questions."

And so the trial opened. Don Q. proved himself a past master in cross-examination, and in an hour the plot against the throne of Spain was laid bare in all its atrocity.

"And now, senor, I have heard enough. Don. Q. spoke slowly. "I will not kill you like a dog, although you have earned such a death. I will give you a chance of life. I have told you my name. You are the only man living who knows it. Twice before, since I took to the mountains, have I revealed that old name of mine, and in neither case did the hearer live an hour after. Take this pistol, nephew, and unloose his bonds. If he attempts to escape blow out his brains."

Don Q. handed the revolver to Lalor. Then from a corner of the room he brought out two duelling rapiers, and courteously begged Don Basilio to make choice of one.

"We will fight senor, you for your life, I for my name. Clear a little space in the centre of the room, my dear nephew. I am about to honor this animal by running him through the body."

The swords crossed, and Lalor had another of his many surprises when he saw how Don Q. handled his weapon. He was as quick as a fencing master, and his style, though that of a bygone day, left nothing to be desired.

"For the queen!" cried Don Q. as he pierced his antagonist's arm.

Don Basilio, stung with the pain, made a fierce onslaught, and Don Q., holding his sword straightly, passed it through the fleshy body, which subsided with a horrible leaning movement to the floor.

Don Q. cleaned both rapiers with some care on the sheets, then looking down upon the dead man he said, softly:

"Through the heart. That is the end of a very dirty scoundrel!"

Lalor stood silent, staring across the corpse at the terrible chief.

"We had better be going," said Don Q., after a musing pause, "but first I would arrange that our friend shall be in a position to greet her majesty from my balcony when she passes in the morning."

With a strength of which the young man would not have believed him capable, Don Q. bent down, and raising the body, placed it in a chair. Then, helped by Lalor, he bound it in a sitting posture, and carried the chair into the balcony outside their window, which overlooked a main street through which the procession was to pass.

A few moments later they had reached the street, and hurried along it. Before turning the corner Lalor stopped to look back. Over the edge of the balcony with its flapping draperies was visible the great blank face of the Carlist, sustained there on his high seat of mockery to do honor to her between whom and himself had lain the sword of Don Q.

Lalor stopped at the door of the carriage which was awaiting the brigand in a narrow old lane.

"How about our bargain now, senor?" he questioned.

Don Q. took his foot from the step, bowed punctiliously to the young fellow and answered:

"You are free, Senor Lalor. Your ransom is remitted for the good service you have rendered to her majesty—and to me. I thank you in her name and my own. What do you now desire to do?"

"I cannot return to England—very easily," Laler said in a dubious tone.

"Not yet, I am afraid, senor."

"And if I remain here I shall be put into prison."

"Then, obviously, you must return with me to the mountains. I have conceived a liking for you, senor, such as is rare with me. Your companionship will be a boon to a lonely man. Beside, I need a lieutenant in my band."

There was nothing for it but to agree to go with Don Q., at least for the present. Lalor thanked the chief, and they drove away together.

THE EARS OF THE GOVERNOR.

A new governor had lately been appointed to the prison at Castelleno.

Don Hugo was a roystering blade, handsome, noted for his gallantries, and early successful in his career. In an ill-advised hour he delivered a speech in public, wherein he observed that Don Q. was a happy nickname for the brigand chief, who for so long had terrorized the district. He recounted some of his crimes, and fulminated against him the penalties of the law.

All this Don Q. read in his mountain eyrie with exceeding relish. It flattered his self-esteem. The speech was fully reported in the local journal, which we may call El Mundo, but the sting lay waiting in the last clause: "And yet this reputed king of the mountains," concluded Don Hugo, is, after all, a miserable wretch, poorer than the meanest ass in Spain for he carries but one ear!"

Whatever his other bodily infirmities, the bandit possessed both his ears, yet the libel was of a nature which could never be forgiven. His diseased vanity dwelt upon it with an ever-growing bitterness. The slumbering devil in him awoke, tormenting him to fury.

Upon this day, which followed an interval of terrified quietness, the robbers' valley was thrilled by an excitement, hot with the double seasoning of novelty and danger. A party scouring the lower hills, according to their practice, had met with a lady—a very great lady she seemed—who far from objecting after the usual manner to being carried prisoner into the sierra, instantly demanded to be taken into the presence of the dreaded chief.

In the dusk Don Q. lifted up his head. "Do not keep me any longer, I pray, Gaspar," he said in a sharp, sibilant voice, "what is it?"

"Lord, a senora would speak with you," stuttered the man.

Don Q. paused. It must be confessed that a lady desiring an interview with him was something of a novelty.

"Good. The senora's name?"

"The lady would tell you that herself, lord."

"Let her come." Gaspar turned away with relief, but the chief stopped him. "Stay, Gaspar. Make up the fire, and light a torch, fix it up there behind me. I trust Gaspar, you have not inconvenienced the senora by keeping her waiting? I will ask her, and if—" the silence was eloquent.

A few minutes later a lady swept into the circle of light within the cave. Her face was hidden by a mantilla, but she moved with the air of acknowledged beauty, audacious and graceful.

Don Q. rose from his seat in the gloom beyond the fire and bowed.

"I am the chief of the sequestradores, and the senora's very humble servant."

The words uttered in purest Spanish with the soft tone of courtesy almost startled the hearer. She peered across the smoke and flames, but the torch had been set to baffle her vision.

"I have come, senor, to implore your aid," she said impulsively.

At the same instant she flung back her mantilla and disclosed her features. Don Q. gazed at her for a moment in silence. She was a golden Spaniard; dark-eyed, with a mouth like a red blossom, her somewhat cruel-looking but extreme beauty enhanced by a skin of exquisite fairness, and crowned with golden hair.

"Senora," began the soft voice after a pause, which the lady fully appreciated as a tribute to her charms, "am I permitted to ask by what name I may remember such loveliness?"

"Catalina, the Condessa—" She broke off excitedly; she had an end in view, and wished to gain it without delay. "I was told that you were kind to those in distress, and would help a woman when you could."

"I rejoice that there are still some speakers of the truth under the mountains. Be at ease, Dona Catalina, my pleasure at the sight of so much beauty is only equalled by my impatience to know in what manner I can show my gratitude for the honor of this visit."

"Senor, I am the wife of the handsomest caballero in Spain, alas!"

"Ah! And the countess dwells—"

"In Castelleno," she answered.

"In Castelleno?" The fact was pertinent to the moment. "Be seated, senora. You are doubtless acquainted with the governor of the prison!"

"Why, yes."

"Is he not an ugly, pimple-faced fellow?" questioned Don Q.

She replied hotly: "On the contrary, he is an exceedingly handsome man."

He cut her short. "Pardon me, but are you sure? I have heard that ladies cried out at the mere sight of his smile!"

"With gratification, perhaps," she answered, and sighed impatiently.

"No, no, senora, you are surely mistaken."

"Hardly possible, Don Q. He is my husband!"

"You are then the wife of the governor, Don Hugo?" The chief's smooth voice vibrated slightly with some emotion. "I would envy him, if I dared."

"Of what use is beauty if it does not secure love?" she cried petulantly. "My husband—"

"You love him?"

"At this moment I hate him!" She leant forward with a swing in her lithe body, her eyes flashing. "I heard a whisper—I suspected—I set spies—I followed him." She clasped her hands before her breast, then flung them apart with a vehement gesture of rage. "O, at this moment I could kill him!"

"Proceed, I beg of you. What have I to do with lovers' quarrels?"

"Everything, if you will help me! Yes, we quarreled. He laughed at my tears. I vowed I would throw myself on your protection. He dared me to do so, and, though I was indeed afraid (for your name is a cause for shuddering in the plains; senor), I came. He must pay a ransom for me. Thus shall he be taught to value his wife."

"Nay, senora. I could not have the heart to deprive him of your charming society. Figure to yourself his anxiety!"—was the unexpected reply. "You shall be sent down to Castelleno tomorrow in safety."

The beautiful face darkened. "I will not go!" she cried imperiously. "I did not fancy you would side against me with my husband! Remember," with a witching glance at the dim figure in the corner, "you promised to help me."

"I have not forgotten. Yet you must go to-morrow, though your departure will leave the mountains bleak indeed!"

"You are only a man after all!" she exclaimed angrily. "The sins of one man are not sins in the eyes of another man; perhaps you would feel less for him, if you knew more of what he says of you. Only last Sunday he vowed you were a coward."

"Don Hugo takes much upon himself when he says that." A changed note in the low voice frightened her.

"He had an argument to back it," she ran on nervously. "He said that it was easy to terrify a helpless captive up here when you have your men beside you. But he would wager—O, I cannot go on, senor!"

"Favor me by proceeding, senora."

The condessa shivered and obeyed.

"He wagered that alone, unbacked by your comrades—I mean followers, you would prove yourself—oh, how can I say it?"

"But you must, senora. Having gone so far I regret to insist—"

"Have it then," she cried desperately. "You would prove yourself as cowardly as you are hideous."

"Copse of a scullion!" The ejaculation burst out with violence; then the voice resumed gently—"but even now, lady, you have missed out one little particular."

"No, no," she sobbed, "I recollect no more."

"Then listen. The governor of the prison of Castelleno was good enough to declare in public that I have but one ear. It is a lie, as I mean to show him. To-morrow you will take a message from me to His Excellency Don Hugo, your husband."

"But," she ventured, "you promised to help me."

"That will I do also."

"Tell him I have a little museum up here in the mountains, to which I desire a small addition."

"Tell him further that when I come down into Castelleno I shall have with me two ears—my own; but that when I depart I shall have four ears, my own and his. Yes, senora, alone and single-handed, within 15 days, I Don Q. will come down from the mountains and crop the ears of the governor of the prison of Castelleno."

"But," she cried in horror, "you have deceived me. An earless husband!—how unendurable!"

For the eighth time the governor of the prison of Castelleno muttered an angry oath. Because, for the eighth time that evening, his excellency had found his hand straying nervously to his ears.

The message of Don Q. had been faithfully brought down to him by his wife. In her presence, and indeed to himself during the hours of daylight, he would scoff at the threat as the absurd and empty vaporing of a wretched hill thief. He was a strong man, mentally and physically, yet when evening began to fall, and the wind moaned over sad Spain, his impressionable nature took on a more somber tint. He would start at a footfall, and

To be continued.

The recent strike on the adjoining property of two veins of cobalt and silver but a short distance (about 60 feet) from and running directly towards Silver Bird has, in our opinion, really doubled the value of this property.

SILVER BIRD WILL POSITIVELY ADVANCE TO
ON MARCH 25TH.

Advices from Superintendent Gauthier states that the shaft is now 94 feet deep, that drifting will commence at the 100-foot level, and that he expects to soon be bagging ore for shipment. Supt. Gauthier has had many years of experience in mining, is thoroughly familiar with the formation and conditions, and his opinion and advice can be relied upon.

SILVER BIRD

NOW 15 CENTS PER SHARE.

SILVER BIRD is surrounded by the greatest producing mines in the Cobalt District.

SILVER BIRD is absolutely inside property, consisting of twenty acres (patented), being the west half of the northeast quarter of the north half of Lot 3, Concession 6, Coleman.

SILVER BIRD is a mine in full operation, with two 25 h.p. boilers, steam hoist, steam drills and all machinery and buildings necessary to complete an operating mine.

SILVER BIRD is working two shifts and is in full operation both day and night, sinking upon three veins and in the same formations identically as in the O'Brien, Timmins and Right of Way mines and lying immediately between these mines and the Green-Meehan, Red Rock, Cobalt Contact and Nipissing Extension. The veins are broadening out and are increasing in values with depth, now 94 feet in shaft.

SILVER BIRD has no indebtedness; there are no incumbrances against the property or stock of the company. The capitalization of The Silver Bird Cobalt Mines, Limited, is but $1,500,000.00, par value of the shares $1.00 each, fully paid and non-assessable, and no personal liability, with 500,000 shares in the treasury. The first allotment is now offered to the public for subscription at 15 cents per share.

Considering the inside location of the property, development done, results obtained, low capitalization and the large amount of shares in the treasury, this is unquestionably one of the best bargains (if not the greatest bargain) that have been offered in Cobalt mining shares.

To guard against over-issue and to guarantee to investors the genuineness of the certificates when issued—also the prompt and safe delivery of same—arrangements have been made with The Trusts & Guarantee Company, Limited, 14 King street west, Toronto, to act as Transfer Agents and Registrars.

HE SLIPPED.

I clamped the skates upon my feet;
  I stepped upon the ice:
I smiled to hear my friends repeat
  Their quite well meant advice.

I skated when I was a boy;
  I skated quite a lot.
The pastime I could still enjoy;
  I knew I'd not forgot.

I glided out a yard or so;
  My stroke was pretty fair,
When, just as I began to go,
  My heels flew in the air.

I saw old Saturn and his rings
  And Venus, shining bright;
A comet and some other things
  Burst then upon my sight.

Orion and the Milky way
  And Mercury and Mars—
I saw, though it was bright noonday,
  A perfect blaze of stars.

They showed me later where I fell—
  They said it was the place.
I know it wasn't very well,
  Because I'd left no trace.

I knew that this was just a joke,
  Some foolish monkey trick.
The ice they showed me wasn't broke,
  Though scarce twelve inches thick.

A Sorry Prospect For the Future.

Dupre had been rather a naughty boy on the street car, and after they reached home his mother corrected him in the good old fashioned way, though not anything like so severely as he imagined.

"Now, Dupre," she said, "I hope you will remember what happens when boys do not obey their mothers and next time we are on the cars that you will sit quietly, as mother tells you."

"Yes, m-m-mother," he sobbed. "I w-will if I am e-e-ever able to s-s-sit down anywhere a-a-again."—Woman's Home Companion.

MOTHER'S GRATITUDE TO ZAM-BUK.

IT CURED HER BOY OF PAINFUL SORES.

Nothing is more unpleasant to the eye and more painful to the sufferer than boils and ulcers. At this period of the year many adults suffer acutely from these painful outbreaks. When boils, ulcers, etc., occur on children it is pitiful to see the little ones suffer.

Mrs. K. Holmes, of 30 Guise St., Hamilton, is grateful for what Zam-Buk did for her little boy when in this pitiful plight. She says: "I wish to express my gratitude for the benefit my child received from your famous Zam-Buk Balm. He suffered from Spring eruptions and then boils broke out on his neck. I tried blood purifying remedies, salves and ointments of all kinds but nothing seemed to do him the desired good. The boils got worse and became so loathsome and unsightly that I could not send him to school, as some of the boils and ulcers could not conveniently be covered. About this time a sample box of Zam-Buk was given to him and we tried it. The small sample did him a little good, so I bought a 50 cent box. The result was really amazing. Inside a week's time the boils had begun to dry up, and in a very short time indeed every one of them was healed."

Zam-Buk is a sure cure also for eczema, scalp sores, ringworm, poisoned wounds, chronic ulcers, chapped hands, cuts cold sores, cracks, festering sores, eruptions and pustules due to blood poison, etc. It stops bleeding and cures piles, fistula, etc. Is antiseptic: an excellent "first aid." Every home and farmstead should have its box of Zam-Buk. All druggists and stores at 50 cents a box, or from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. 6 boxes for $2.50. Send 1 cent stamp for trial box.

Mrs. Lazier's Funeral

The funeral services of Mrs. N. W. Lazier took place yesterday, as announced, at 2 o'clock, when a goodly number of neighbors and sympathizers, as well as a large number of relatives and friends, gathered from far and near. The service was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Brown, of the Tabernacle Church, and feeling references to the deceased were given by Rev. A. Campbell and Mr. Isaac Wilson, a brother-in-law. On account of the C.P.R. train being many hours late and her son, Walter, not having arrived, the coffin was not removed from the house and the interment was deferred until Wednesday morning, when at 10 o'clock a few friends met again, and after a brief prayer the funeral cortege was formed, and progress was made to the cemetery, where interment took place, Rev. Mr. Brown reading the appointed service. The bearers were the three sons of Mr. Lazier: Richard, Frank and Walter; W. H. T. Peake, a son-in-law; Oscar, a grandson, and Robert, a nephew. In this bereavement Mr. Lazier and family have the sympathy of a large circle of citizens and relatives.

A Standard Work.

(Hamilton Herald.)

Dr. William Canniff, at one time Medical Health Officer at Toronto, is at present and has for some months been residing at the St. Peter's home for incurables in this city, the aged doctor being a martyr to rheumatism. For some months he has been utilizing his enforced leisure in the work of revising and making additions to his book, The Settlement of Upper Canada, which was first published some forty years ago. This is one of the most important historical works on a Canadian subject that has ever been brought out. It is recognized as a standard authority on the subject of the U. E. Loyalist settlement of this province. For many years it has been out of print, and is accessible only to historical students who know where to go to find material for study. We believe that a new edition of the work would be widely welcomed by the Canadian reading public, especially as Dr. Canniff, since the book originally appeared, has collected a great deal of new material of historical value. As the author is not in a financial position to undertake the republication of the book on his own account, it seems to us that the Ontario Historical Society should interest itself in the matter.

WHY WASTE TIME ?

IF YOU ARE SUFFERING FROM A COUGH OR COLD ACCEPT THIS OFFER.

Hundreds of people right here in Belleville are coughing, sneezing, shivering, and trying all sorts of cough mixtures, old-fashioned cod liver oil and emulsions which only upset the stomach and fail to cure the condition.

Why waste time and remain miserable when we guarantee our delicious cod liver preparation, Vinol. It contains every one of the medicinal elements of cod liver oil without a drop of oil to nauseate and upset the stomach and retard its work; and no sickening drugs. Vinol will cure that hard cold, hacking cough, throat or bronchial trouble and if it fails we pay back your money.

We wish every person in Belleville suffering from a hard cold, hacking cough, throat or bronchial troubles which have run down their system would try Vinol on our offer to return money if it fails. J. B. McKeown, druggist.
